It is "enthralling" because of its unusual plot and the methods of working out the situations is consummate. Briefly the story deals with Lucretia Eastman, whose husband is a moral derelect, addicted to opium and loose women. Lucretia's cup of disgust brims over at last but Tom's father entreats her to give him one last chance. The test is the finding of a deserted steamship loaded with almost ten millions of Klondyke gold. Tom is given a seaworthy craft, and a rotting vessel, manned with desperadoes, is foisted on Frank Undewood, who loves Lucretia and is loved by her. The cowadice of the one and the couage of the other as they go through Behring Straits, leads to the heart-clutching climax.

The supporting cast includes Carl Gerard, Rudolph Valentino, Fred Turner, Charles Mailes and Rhea Haines. The picture was adapted from John Fleming Wilson's story, which appeared in Munsey's Magazine. Wesley Ruggles directed, John B. Seitz photographed; John Holden did the art work, and George Elwood Jenks wrote the scenario.

Archer & Garlow, the well known big musical act, will be the feature vaudeville attraction for the last half.

The balance of the big program has been selected with the usual care taken in arranging all programmes seen at this popular resort.

AT THE ROYAL.

Golly! Just Read What the New York Payers Say Abou Priscilla Dean in "Conflict," at the Royal To-day.

"The biggest thing in river scenes ever screened. We were constantly reminded of 'Way Down East' only Griffith did his picture in the winter and Carl Laemmle did his in the summer. If you do not believe that a hero floating towards the falls on a raftof logs can be quite as spellbinding as a heroine on a cake of ice, go and see "Conflict." There is not a dull moment in the whole picture."—Tribune.

"The best thriller that Universal has turned out. The sight of Miss Dean is really stirring as she comes flying down the logs that burst from this dam, sometimes slipping off, but always saving herself. The peril seems very real. And in all, a picture of pulsing action."—Herald.

"Mystery, drama and adventure and one of the most thrilling passages ever screened—all are found in 'Conflict.' Prisiilla Dean outdoes herself. The sceen in which she rescues her lover from death on the brink of a raging waterfall is a marvel."—Mail.

"'Conflict' lives up to its advance promises. The big climax is the blowing up of the dam. The rushing, swirling waters present a remarkable sight. Priscilla Dean takes hazardous chances with her life—a daramtic sight and one sure to hrill you."—Journal.

"Priscilla Dean looks like Ethel Barrymore and acts with the power of Nazimova. 'Conflict' crowds into one picture enough thrills to last through an entire serial. A tale of mystery and excitement. No old-fashioned melodrama could equal this film."—Telegram.

"It is very, very stirring with Miss Dean the queen of them all!"—Sun.

"The motion picture industry possesses too few Prscilla Deans to allow this charming young brunette to be taking such chances with her life as those shown in 'Conflict.' We do not wonder that her insurance company warned her against repeating such risks."—World.

JACK MURRAY WON THE GOOSE

In the De Laval Factory Prize.

Last night the manager of the De Laval factory donated a goose for a prize for the Bowlers in the De Laval League for the one who would get the closest to the score of 99 in ten pins, when fifty bowlers took part. Four got the right number. Doughty, Freed, Lacheur and Murray all got 99 and in the play-off Murray got the closest by rolling 102 and won the goose. The De Laval have been having great sport out of bowling. Next week a match game has been arranged between the married men and the single men.

BATTING RECORDS AMERICAN LEAGUE BASEBALL CLUBS.

Sensational Driving and Phenomenal Fielding Characterized Season of 1921.

CHICAGO, December 21 (Canadian Press). — Compiled by Irwin M. Howe, for Associated Press Batting of the most sensational character featured the games of the American League throughout the season. Phenomenal fielding plays were a natural sequence to the heavy hitting and fast and clever base running on hit and run plays was the order of the day. The art of base stealing however was almost discontinued, it being obvious that to take two bases or more on the probable forthcoming base hit was better strategy for the runner than to risk being cut down on an attempt to steal.

No less than 12,525 safe hits were made in 616 games, of which 214 were two-baggers, 694 for three bases, and the hitherto unprecedented number of 477 were home runs. They averaged a little more than twenty to the game, of which more than five were for extra bases.

The Detroit Club led the sluggers with an average of .316 for the season, followed by Cleveland with .308, St. Louis .304, and Champion New York Yankees with an even .300.

The champions, led by Babe Ruth, drove out one hundred and thirty-four home runs, and were first in total bases. St. Louis gathered one hundred and six triples, and Detroit one hundred, while the Cleveland Indians whaled three hundred and fifty-five two-base hits. The ex-champions also coaxed 614 bases on balls from the nervous pitchers, New York being awarded 588 and Detroit 582.

The greatest individual record of the year, attracting more interest than has heretofore occurred in baseball, was the performance of George H. Ruth, who broke his own world record for home runs by making 59 safe blows that were good for the round trip. In three successive seasons Ruth has raised the record of 25 home runs made in 1899 first to 29, then to 54, and now to 59.

Harry F. Heilmann, Detroit outfielder, beat out Manager Cobb by five points for the League leadership in batting with a record of .394. Heilmann made 237 hits in 149 games for a total of 365 bases; 43 of his safeties were for two bases, 14 were triples, and 19 were home runs. He scored 114 runs, and was responsible for 120 more of the Tigers' total of 883.

Manager Tris Speaker made 52 base hits, Ruth 44, Heilmann and his team-mate R. H. Veach 43 each, and R. Meusel, New York, 40.

Howard Shanks, Washington, drove out 19 three-baggers, Tobin and Sisler 18 each, and Cobb, Ruth, and R. Meusel 16 each.

As stated above, Ruth established a new record for home runs with 59, Meusel and K. R. Williams, St. Louis, being tied for third place with 24 each, while Clarence Walker of Philadelphia was third with 23. Little attention was paid to stealing bases, and the sacrifice was not used as frequently as in former years for the same reason that prohibited base stealing. Sisler pilfered 35 bases, Rice 25, and Cobb 22. W. A. Wambsganns, Cleveland, land down 43 sacrifices, Owen Bush, Detroit Washington, 41. McInnes, Boston, 35, and Mulligan, Chicago, 34.

CURLING

THOSE RINGS, MR. MARTIN, PLEASE!

Angus McIntosh has built up a sheet of ice at the Curling Rink that now needs only a gilt-edged surface It should be ready for curling by the end of the week, and especially for the holiday. There is, however, one serious obstacle to progress that is giving "Bob" Sturgeon and other regulars a great deal of concern. The rings for the separate rinks are missing, and every effort to locate them has thus far failed. At first it was thought that Andy Webb and Bob Hicks had folded them up last spring and tucked them away for safe-keeping, but certain investigations have thrown the suspicion upon Herb. Martin, who is hereby requested to return the rings at once if the curling is to begin this week.

The cold weather of the last couple of days is just what Angus McIntosh wanted to put the finishing touches on the ice at the Charlotte street rink so that everything is almost ready to commence curling. The membership list is already almost filled up. The schedule books are bein gpsinted and will be mailed to the members the end of this week, so as to be ready for the opening night on Tuesday of next week, when the first games will be called. A meeting of the whole club is to be held on Friday evening next to ballot for several additional applications for membership.

RELIEF WORK BIGGEST IN HISTORY OF CITY

CHRISTMAS GIVING SPIRIT IS EVIDENT ON EVERY HAND

From present indications, there will be few deserving cases of charity overlooked this Christmas. Churches, charitable and fraternal organizations are united in the worthy effort, and plans have been carefully prepared to carry cheer into many homes this Yuletide. On Saturday most of the organizations are making their deliveries of provisions and good things, and willing workers will put in a busy day at the several relief headquarters and in delivering those baskets that in a tangible way demonstrate the Christmas spirit. The G.W.V.A. have prepared already about 100 Christmas cheer baskets, and all organizations report progress in preparations.

City Relief Officer F. W. Miller, discussing the subject to-day, said he had never seen so many willing workers. On every hand people were encountered ready and generous, and only too glad to be shown a practical way to help. It was a very gratifying thing, he said, to find so many people carrying out the philosophy of giving.

Adjutant Wallace Buntin is in touch with a great many cases of distress; he offered to-day to act as a one-man clearing station, and if people know of cases that are apt to be overlooked, he will see that one of the many organizations is advised of it, or on his own responsibility will meet the apneal. Adjutant Buntin's 'phone number is 440W.

DISBELIEVES EDISON SYNTHETIC GOLD IDEA

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— That he does not believe in Thomas A. Edison's prediction that gold will yet be made artificially at a fraction of the present price, is the statement of Commander William A. Ballentyne. Mr. Ballentyne is one of England's greatest metallurgists, and is now in New York.

"Gold has already been artificially made," he added "Sir William Ramsey, years ago, converted radium into gold. He made but a few grams, but it was identical with gold as we know it. But the gold he made cost about twenty times as much as gold from the ground.

"The question is not whether gold can be made from base metals, but whether it can be made for less than cost of gold from the ground. I agree with Edison that the discovery might be made any day. It may never be made.

"Nothing is more certain than that enoromus discoveries in metallurgy are just ahead. Throughout the ages, metallurgy has lagged, though one of the oldest sciences. Known forms of metals were sufficient for our needs. Invention of the internal combustion engine revolutionized transportation — but the internal combustion engine was made of iron.

"New forms of metals are now in demand, and no one can tell what moment some one may stumble on the way to make syntietic gold cheaply."

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchison, for many years an associate of Edison, said scientific experimentation had brought him to the point where he would dispute nothing. "If you were to tell me," he said, "that somebody down in Wall Street was lifting himself by his bootstraps, I might doubt your sanity, but go down and take a look. Mentally I reside in the geographical centre of Missouri I dispute nothing, but always want to see the evidence."

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press).—The local market for cash grain was quieter yesterday. There was nothing new in the flour situation. A strong feeling prevails in mill feed with shortage of supplies but so far there is no official change in price. The market for rolled oats remains firm. Business in bailed hay is slow. The egg market was without feature and there is little doing in potatoes. The tone of the butter market continues easy and business in cheese is slow.

FINANCIAL AND MARKETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Shorts resumed their aggressive tactics at opening of today's stock market, soon causing irregular losses in general list. Further selling for long account added to early reversal. Oils, Shippings and Metals bore the brunt of the movement. General Asphalt, United Fruit, Utah Copperand National Enameling showed declines ranging from large fractions to 1 1-2 points. Baldwin Locomotive, Pullman, American Woollen, International Paper American Woollen, International Paper, American Sugar and Famous Players also were heavy.

Equipments extended their gains at midday under the lead of American Locomotives and General Electric, but the remainder of the list was unresponsive to the drop in money rates to 5½ per cent. The feature of the irregular bond list was the heaviness of French Municipals, Bordeaux, Lyons and Marseilles falling 3½ points each.

The six per cent. opening rate for call money encouraged an extension of short committments. Standard Oil of New Jersey, Pierce Oil Pfd., Willys Overland Preferred, Pierce Arrow Pfd., Republic Iron Preferred and half a score of miscellaneous stocks were carried down by the further reversal, losing one to 3 1-2 points. The market rallied before noon, Equipments and Food Specialties then being in demand. American Locomotive advanced 2 1-2 points and American Sugar Commons and Preferred, rose one to two points. Associated Drygoods First Pfd. and some of the other merchandising issues also strengthened. Texas and Pacific again was the only railway issue to show more than moderate strength and activity.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Several fractional declines weer registered during the first half hour this morning on the local stock exchange. Abitibi, however, remained the same at 30, while Atlantic Sugar rose half a point to 27 1-2, British Empire Steel went down a quarter to 8 3-4, Brompton and Detroit United Railway were lightly traded in at 20 and 70 respectively. Dominion Bridge weakened three-quarters to 66 1-2. Montreal Power was also weaker and went down a quarter to 86 3-4,as did also National Breweries to 55 1-4. Steel of Canada remained unchanged at 59 3-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press.)— Opening wheat prices, which varied from 1-2 to 1-8 advance, with May 1.15 7-8 to 1.16 1-2 and July 1.05 1-8 to 1.05 1-4, were followed by an upturn all around to above yesterday's finish.

Corn was decidedly stronger on account of Russian relief plans. After opening unchanged to 1-2 higher, May 54 5-8 to 54 7-8, the market made a substantial general advance.

Oats hardened with other cereals, starting a shade off to 1-8 higher, May 38 5-8 to 38 3-4 and later showed a little gain for all deliveries.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press.) — Sterling exchange heavy. Demand Great Britain 4.19 1-2. Canadian Dollars 6 1-2 per cent. discount.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—With total transactions of approximately 600 shares, the local stock exchange this morning was a dull affair. Brazilian was off half a point to 27 1-2, C.P.R. lost a point to 128 1-2, later recovering most of this, with a close 1-4 net lower. In the bank section there was little doing except in Imperial Bank, where 75 shares changed hands at 175.

SCHOOL DENTIST AND DENTAL NURSE NEEDED

This Was Emphasized at Luncheon of Dentists To-day

That the Board of Education should employ a dentist and a dental nurse on the same footing as the School Medical officer was the unanimous opinion of the Peterboro Dental Society gathered at luncheon at the Empress Hotel to-day. An informal discussion of what has been done in other centres in this regard took place and the dentists decided that the School Board should take some action to provide for dental inspection in the schools. In Windsor with 4,000 pupils there are four dental nurses, it was said, in addition to a dentist and practcally every city in Ontario has made provision for the care of the pupils' teeth.

Fifteen dentists were at the luncheon, Dr. J. J. Craig, the President of the Society presiding. Dr. T. Y. McNair, Director of the Branch Laboratory of the Provincial Board of Health here, pointed out the service of the laboratory dwelling particularly on its usefulness to the dental profession in pathological examinations of infections and abcesses peculiar to the mouth.

RATE DECREASE REFUSED.

WASHINGTON, December 22 (Canadian Press). — Henry Ford's attempt to reduce freight rates on coal 20 per cent. along the line of his railroad, Detroit, Toledo, and Ironton, was disallowed to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Commission held that the reduction would constitute a discrimination against other mining territories, the coal output of which is sold in Toledo, Detroit, and cities of the Ford road.

MR. T. TOOMS CLAIMS CITY HAS PROMISE

LOCAL MEMBER SAYS PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT WILL ASSIST IN LOCAL RELIEF WORK CONDITIONALLY.

THE COMMUNICATION

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—Your very sensational publication in Thursday evening's issue of The Examiner is startling—in fact, it is worthy of The Toronto Telegram's notice.

Mr. Dobbin in a letter to the editor recommends that gentleman to go out and get authentic information on subjects of public interest and service before taking the easy chair to discuss such subjects, which is good advise.

I may say that I asked the municipal authorities if I could be of service in the matter of unemployed relief work and the Provincial Government grant. I was informed that all was right; my services at that time were not needed.

I took the matter up on my own account at Toronto and was informed that a letter had been forwarded to the City Council of Peterborough that all would be O.K. with Peterborough with regard to the grant, provided that the city did not expect the grant for work which would be revenue producing, such as street car tracks, etc. As an instance, like the city of Toronto is doing. Nice thing if the city of Toronto could relay new street car tracks at the expense of the Federal and Provincial Governments! Where would it end? That is revenue producing and should pay for its own upkeep. I merely mention that as a case in point; but where public improvements, such as parks, bathing places, etc., are concerned I understand Peterborough City has authority to proceed. Therefore, your statement and whole sensation is uncalled for, so far as Peterborough is concerned, because Peterborough will not have to bear the whole financial burden.

It is hard for me to conceive that a member of the editorial staff of The Examiner wrote that article of sensation and half truths. It is so saturated with a sarcastic prejudice, with regard to that successful Government now in control at Toronto and the Labor men of this city, that one is inclined to think that some small stunt in municipal politics is trying to be pulled off. Why should you enumerate Mayor McIntyre and add Peterborough's Labor Mayor, also Aldermen Gainey, Crowe and Morrison. These splendid men, some of the most progressive Aldermen we have had on the City Council, have done their part in this matter. The City Council, of which they are members, applied for the Government grant and got it.

Why put any onus upon them any more than the rest of the Council, for I can assure you that "special privileges to none" is the order of the present Ontario Government, but justice is paramount? If Peterborough had been turned down, T. Tooms, M.L.A., realizes that it would be his duty to look into the matter and get it fixed up, or know the reason, which certainly would be due to the public.

Up to date T. Tooms, M.L.A., is informed that all is right by the City Council, that a communication has been received giving them permission to proceed conditionally, which is agreed. What more can the people expect of Premier Drury, the Hon. Walter Rollo, Minister of Labor, the City Council, its Labor adherents and Labor representative in the Provincial Legislature?

If you wish to be of public service, which should be a duty, give equal publication to the improved social legislation this Government has enacted for the benefit of the 'under dog."

Please give this equal prominence as you gave the article head "Ontario Government Refuses, Etc." or am I asking for bread and you will give me a stone. The Peterborough Examiner has been advocating work, not doles.

Are we to come to the conclusion that The Examiner after all is waking up to the claims of the leaders of Labor that this would prove inadequate?

The Government's policy was decided upon the opinions of the class who claim to know, "not the Labor leaders." T. TOOMS, M.L.A.

MAYOR M'INTYRE'S LAST ACT

SHOULD APPEAL AS LABOUR MAYOR TO U. F. O. LABOUR GOVERNMENT FOR RENEWAL OF UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF SCHEME ADOPTED LAST YEAR—EXTREME CONDITIONS CALL FOR UNUSUAL MEASURES.

Mayor A. A. McIntyre should put it up to Premier Drury.

Himself a Labour man, endorsed by the Trades and Labour Council, Mayor McIntyre should not let his term of office expire without making an effort to persuade the Ontario Governmnet to renew the compact for the relief of unemployment which it originated and helped to carry out last winter, in conjunction with the Dominion Government and those municipalities which needed and gratefully accepted financial assistance.

The strongest argument that can be presented to the Ontario Government is the initiative it took a year ago when the first signs and effects of the industrial dislocation began to be felt.

NEED OF RELIEF GREATER NOW.

That impulse was becoming to the Government of the "banner province of Canada," but in the face of conditions to-day, what can be said of the Order-in-Council recently passed by the Ontario Government offering practically no relief to municipalities that are far worse of than they were a year ago.

Premier Drury and his counsellors should be asked to consider the unfortunate fact that many families unaccustomed to penury and virtual poverty have to be financially helped through this winter. Relief Officer Miller has an increasing list of names that have never before been entered in his private records.

And the very reasons that actuated the Ontario Government in formulating its relief scheme a year ago accentuated by the protracted industrial depression that is now disclosing its accumulated results in hardship and want, which the State cannot morally ignore.

IS NOT A POLITICAL QUESTION.

This is not a matter for political recrimination. The Government of Ontario, whatever its political complexion, should be the first to aid the people of Ontario in their hour of need, in such an abnormal period of unemployment as has developed this winter.

However, the fact that Labour is a partner in the present Coalition Government in this province, suggests a special reason why workingmen, industrious tradesmen, and mechanics who have been long out of work, except at occasional odd jobs with pick and shovel, should expect at least as sympathetic a consideration of their difficulties as either of the "old parties" would have given.

MEIGHEN GOVERNMENT READY TO HELP.

Many labouring men denounced and opposed the outgoing Government at Ottawa, but nearly a month ago the Meighen Government announced its readiness to co-operate again with the municipalities and the Ontario Government in the unemployment relief given last winter.

Shouldn't Mayor McIntyre point out to Premier Drury that the only failure to provide a fair measure of financial assistance in Labour's present extremity is the U.F.O-Labour Government of Ontario?

That, at least, might be a supplementary argument to the pressing needs that are multiplying daily, and to the praiseworthy precedent of a yar ago.

MUST CITY BEAR THE WHOLE BURDEN?

Mayor McIntyre realizes that if Peterboro must bear alone its burden resulting from the unemployment of many citizens, the total of the winter's disbursements for charity will mount up to a big bill. With the help of the Dominion and Provincial Governments, the city's share might not greatly exceed last year's gross payment in this account.

At any rate Mayor McIntyre should avail himself of this last opportunity of service to the ratepayers of Peterboro by appealing for a continuance this winter, at least, of the relief policy which the Drury Government successfully carried out a year ago.

LOCAL LABOUR LEADERS SHOULD LEAD.

The Labour leaders in Peterboro should be the first and the most active in presenting to the Ontario Government the just claims of workingmen who are out of luck and long out of employment.

But they swallowed that Order-in-Council without a protest of its glaring insufficiency and dubious practicability.

However, if the Labour leaders and the workingmen who are out of work, are satisfied with the Drury Government's evasive Order-in-Council, there are other citizens who feel that the Government is shirking an obvious duty by its refusal to co-operate with the Dominion Government and Municipal Councils in the relief of unemployment this winter.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

BY "SAPPER"
(CYRIL McNEILE)

"Would I?" she whispered. "I wonder . . ."

She felt his heart pound madly against her; and with a sudden quick movement she put both her arms round his neck and kissed him on the mouth.

"Is that good enough?" she asked, very low: and just for a few moments, Time stood still. . . Then, very gently, he put her back in the car.

"I suppose," he remarked resignedly, "that we had better descend to trivialities. We've had lots of fun and games since I last saw you a year or two ago."

"Idiot boy," she said happily. "It was yesterday morning."

"The interruption is considered trivial. Mere facts don't count when it's you and me." There was a further interlude of uncertain duration, followed rapidly by another because the first was so nice.

"To resume," continued Hugh. "I regret to state that they've got Potts."

The girl sat up quickly and stared at him.

"Got him? Oh, Hugh! how did they manage it?"

"I'm damned if I know," he answered grimly. "They found out that he was in my bungalow at Goring during the afternoon by sending round a man to see about the water. Somehow or other he must have doped the drink or the food, because after dinner we all fell asleep. I can just remember seeing Lakington's face outside in the garden, pressed against the window, and then everything went out. I don't remember anything more till I woke this morning with the most appalling head. Of course, Potts had gone."

"I heard the car drive up in the middle of the night," said the girl thoughtfully, "Do you think he's at The Elms now?"

"That is what I propose to find out to-night," answered Hugh. "We have staged a little comedy for Peterson's especial benefit, and we are hoping for the best."

"Oh, boy, do be careful!" She looked at him anxiously. "I'd never forgive myself if anything happened to you. I'd feel it was all due to me, and I just couldn't bear it."

"Dear little girl," he whispered tenderly, "you're simply adorable when you look like that. But not even for you would I back out of this show now." His mouth set in a grim line. "It's gone altogether too far, and they've shown themselves to be so completely beyond the pale that it's got to be fought out. And when it has been," he caught both her hands in his . . . "and we've won . . . why, then girl o' mine, we'll get Peter Darrell to be best man."

Which was the cue for the commencement of the last and longest interlude, terminated only by the sudden and unwelcome appearance of a motor-'bus covered within and without by unromantic sightseers, and paper-bags containing bananas.

They drove slowly back to Guildford, and on the way he told her briefly of the murder of the American's secretary in Belfast, and his interview the preceding afternoon with the imposter at the Carlton.

"It's a tough proposition," he remarked quietly. "They're absolutely without scruple, and their power seems unlimited. I know they are after the Duchess of Lainshire's pearls: I found the beautiful Irma consuming tea with young Laidley yesterday—you know, the thing more in the wind than that, Phyllis—something which, unless I'm a mug of the first water, is an infinitely larger proposition than that."

The car drew up at the station, and he strolled with her on to the platform. Trivialities were once more banished: vital questions concerning when it had first happened—by both; whether he was quite sure it would last for ever—by her; what she could possibly see in him—by him; and wasn't everything just too wonderful for words—mutual and carried nem. con.

Then the train came in, and he put her into a carriage. And two minutes later, with the touch of her lips warm on his, and her anxious little cry "Take care, my darling!—take care!" still ringing in his ears, he got into his car and drove off to an hotel to get an early dinner. Love for the time was over; the next round of the other game was due. And it struck Drummond that it was going to be a round where a mistake would not be advisable.

IV

At a quarter to ten he backed his car into the shadow of some trees not far from the gate of The Elms. The sky was overcast, which suited his purpose, and through the gloom of the bushes he dodged rapidly towards the house. Save for a light in the sitting-room and one in a bedroom upstairs, the front of the house was in darkness, and, treading noiselessly on the turf, he explored all round it. From a downstairs room on one side came the hoarse sound of men's voices, and he placed that as the smoking-room of the gang of ex-convicts and blackguards that formed Peterson's staff. There was one bedroom light at the back of the house, and thrown on the blind he could see the shadow of a man. As he watched, the man got up and moved away, only to return in a moment or two and take up his old position.

"It's one of these two bedrooms," he muttered to himself, "if he's here at all."

Then he crouched in the shadow of some shrubs and waited. Through the trees to his right he could see The Larches, and once, with a sudden quickening of his heart, he thought he saw the outline of the girl show up in the light from the drawing-room. But it was only for a second, and then it was gone. . .

He peered at his watch: it was just ten o'clock. The trees were creaking gently in the faint wind; all around him the strange night noises—noises which play pranks with a man's nerves—were whispering and muttering. Bushes seemed suddenly to come to life, and move; eerie shapes crawled over the ground towards him—figures which existed only in his imagination. And once again the thrill of the night stalker gripped him.

MANIFESTATION OF THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

The employees of the Peterboro Lock Works, in the packing and shipping department, evidently believe in keeping up a practical manifestation of the Christmas spirit. Annually, they make some pretty and useful gift to the heads of this department. Yesterday, Mr. S. Adlam the foreman, was pleasantly surprised by the presentation of a silk scarf, and Miss Nellie Brady, the forelady, was remembered with a handsome prayer-book, bound in real leather. Miss Varmelita Hobbins made the presentation to Mr. Adlam and Miss Daisy Adlam presented Miss Brady prayer-book.

The Value of Advertising

No matter what particular merit a preparation may possess, if you wish to bring it before the public, it is necessary to advertise it.

For instance, Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills were just as good a year ago as they are to-day; and while they had a steady sale due to one friend telling another of the benefits derived from them the proprietors recognized this was a rather slow way of introducing them, and for the year 1921 they have placed a contract with this paper for 10,000 lines of advertising.

On another page of this paper you will find their large advertisement, and with merit and advertising we feel confident they will meet with success.

WISHING WENT OUT OF STYLE WHEN WANT ADS. CAME INTO FASHION.

No longer do people say "I wish for this" or "I wish for that."

CANTATA AT CAMPBELLFORD A BIG SUCCESS

HUGE AUDIENCE AND ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION OF VARIED NUMBERS TESTIFIED TO TALENT OF PERFORMERS.

SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 25.—The annual entertainment given on Tuesday evening in the Baptist Church by the Sunday School was a huge success. There was a large crowd present and the excellent programme rendered was a credit to those who had charge. Special mention must be made of the cantata "The Light of the Star of Peace" in which the following took part: Three wise men, Rev. H. S. Bennett, Mr. D. Mason and Mr. Clifford Carter. The women of Jerusalem, Misses Nellie Dunn and Hilda Reid, Three women of Bethlehem, Misses Verna Shore, Winnifred Carter and Ida Adams. The fruit vendors, Misses Evelyn Weston, Esther Hall and Hilda Sanderson. The three shepherds, Messrs. Harry Wil loughby, Elmer Carter, and Gerald Labrash. Three water carriers, Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. Shore and Miss Myrtle Hall. The little angel choir, Misse Mary Shore, Esther Hall, Violet Mason, Margaret Reid, Edna Martin, Delsie Carter, Jessie Carter, Winnie Glenn Ova Glenn Grace Wil loughby. The costumes for this cantata were most appropriate and pleasing while the choruses by the school were will rendered showing thorough training. A drill "Little Soldiers", by five boys, and a drill "Three Maids of Japan" by three girls, were heartily applauded as were also the dialogues and recitations by the younger folks. Some of these latter were "Christmas Greeting" by little Miss Muriel Montgomery; "All Upset" by little Phyllis Anderson, "Butterflies" by R. Bennett; "Kitty Knew" by Ottolene Reid, "The Little Fir Tree" by Master Walter Twigg; "A Frog in the Throat" by Donald Montgomery "The 'Xmas Message" by the Rose Circle Class; "A Mistake" by little Edwin Sanderson; "When I'm Big" by Manson Labrash; "He didn't think" by H. J. Adams; "The Best Tree" by Willie Mason; "That's not much" by Marguerite Reid; "The Elf and the Door Mouse" by Dolmas Montgomery; "A Closing address" by Warren Reid; "A Song "Make Somebody Happy" by T. Sanderson and L. Marriatt was well rendered.

ADJOURNED THE DEBATE

TREATY DISCUSSION IN THE DAIL EIREANN BROUGHT TO A CLOSE —RESULT OF ADJOURNMENT VOTE

DUBLIN, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press.)—The Dail Eireann, by a vote of 77 to 44, decided late yesterday, on a motion submitted by Michael Collins, to adjourn further debate on the Irish agreement until Tuesday, January 3. It was not the motion itself, but an amendment to the motion on which the vote was actually taken. The amendment, introduced and seconded by opponents of the agreement, called for continuous sittings day and evening until a division was taken on the treaty's ratification or rejection.

The defeat of the amendment automatically decided the motion. With few exceptions, so far as could be observed, the vote followed the party lines of those favorintg or opposing the treaty.

Nobody last night believed of course, that if a vote had been taken on the treaty itself, the majority would have been so great as the vote on the adjournment motion gave its supporters, but there is no doubt in the minds of those who have been following the debates carefully that this vote roughly approximates the sentiments for and against the treaty. This is denied by some of the opponents of the treaty, who assert that it was not a fair test, as many of the deputies on both sides, especially the country members, disliked the idea of the debate continuing through Christmas, and voted for adjournment.

ENTERTAINMENT PROVIDED BY THE SCHOOL CHILDREN OF CHANDOS—ROADS ARE BAD.

APSLEY, December 23. — A very charming evening's entertainment was provided by the pupils of S. S. No. 7, Chandos, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Grace Dashney on Tuesday evening, which attracted a large audience, the school room being filled with an appreciative crowd. The children had been carefully trained in their respective parts and acquitted themselves most creditably. The drill enitled "Canada," deserving special mention for its effectiveness and the precision of the exercises. The characters represented the different provinces of the Dominion, each having lines to recite descriptive of its characteristics as it took its place in the "tout ensemble" concluding wih a flag drill. At the close each pupil and mother received a present at the hands of Santa Claus from a gaily decorated Christmas tree. The Rev. C. Spence was chairman, and at the close of the entertanmen spoke in warm praise of the ability of the teacher, who it was deeply regretted, was severing her connection with the school.

The programme was as follows:

Weather Varies.

The weather experienced here the last few days has been varied enough to suit the most captious mind. On Friday afternoon a heavy snowstorm deposited about 8 inches of the much needed snow, followed during the night by a hurricane, which turned to a heavy downpour of rain of 24 hours duration, and as a fitting conclusion one of the worst blizzards known for a long time raged all day Sunday. As a consequence travelling was impossible and Sunday services were curtailed at the different churches, although evening service was held at St. George's church, attended by a very few who lived close by.

Roads are Bare.

The roads are now bare except for ice and as it is next to impossible to get horses sharpshod traffic is almost suspended. Feed for cattle and horses is difficult to procure as the marshes, where the hay is stacked, are inaccessible, and unless snow comes soon with sleighing, the feeding of stock will be a serious problem, supplies at hand in many cases being depleted, if not entirely consumed.

WOMAN LOCKED OUT — SENDS FIRE ALARM.

Wife of Fireman Used Her Wits

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Dec. 23.—Mrs. Catherine Carley left her home to do some errands. In her absence her two children locked her out. With no key she was at a loss for means to get in until she recalled that her husband, Frederick B. Carley, had one. He is a fireman and was on duty at the time. It would be easier, Mrs. Carley thought, to have her husband bring the key than to have her go to the fire station for it.

So she pulled in the fire alarm to summon him.

Charley came—with the key, a battalion fire chief and his automobile, two engine companies and a ladder truck. Neighbors also trooped to the scene, but instead of flames saw only a home locked against the lady of the house and her husband letting her in.

HATNA, British India, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Owing to the previous declaration of a "hartal," the procession which escorted the Prince of Wales through the city yesterday, attracted only a few spectators. THE FAMINE CONDITIONS

THOUSANDS DYING IN RUSSIA FOR WANT OF FOOD—PASSAGE OF UNITED STATES GRAIN BILL WILL SAVE MANY.

BODIES BY CARTLOAD

RIGA, Dec. 23—(Canadian Press.)—The famine situation has become absolutely "ghastly," said Colonel William N. Haskell, director of the American Relief Administration work in Russia, on his arrival here from Moscow. He is on his way to London to confer with Walter L. Brown, European Director of American Relief.

"Where a few months ago," continued Col. Haskell, "the people were dying by hundreds, they are now dying by thousands. In a few months they will be dying by hundreds of thousands. One of the relief men in a trip covering more than 400 miles found only two places where food could be had for love or money. In the Saratov district they are dying so fast that bodies are literally being hauled away by the cartload."

The greatest Christmas present to Russia, said Colonel Haskell, would be the passage of the United States twenty million dollar grain purchase bill. "This," he added, "would save from death a majority of the adult millions who otherwise are bound to perish. Of course, some in the remote districts and places that can't be reached will die anyway. But twenty million dollars worth of grain will save most of them."

OPENED FIRE ON BANDITS

ONE MAN SHOT IN A NEW YORK APARTMENT HOLD-UP—BANDITS TOOK $800.

CAR DRIVEN TAKEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Bandits, finding Mrs. Mary Stockinger, apartment renting superintendent ,alone in the realty office, held here against the wall with revolvers and took $800 from the safe.

A coloured office boy, Charles Davis, returning from an errand, saw the hold-up through a window, procured his pistol in a nearby room, and when the bandits emerged opened fire .One fell dead, shot through the heart. Returning the fire, the others jumped into their taxi and sped west.

A policeman fired at the car as it turned down West End Avenue, and another bluecoat blazed away a block further south, the bullet shattering the jaw of the driver, whose name was given by the police as John Little. He drove on for six block, and then, weakened by loss of blood, lost control and the car smashed into the curb. Little's four companions escaped. He refused to give their names when taken to a hospital.

ON THE RIGHT PATH.

Two items in yesterday's newspapers contain a suggestion that is worthy of consideration in Peterborough. One is an article in The Belleville Intelligencer reminding the people of Belleville of the many articles that are manufactured in their home city; the other is an interview with a St. Catharines' manufacturer who declares that during the coming year every manufacturer in that centre will visit all the other factories in the Garden City in order that they may learn what goods their colleagues made. It had been found that some manufacturers, ignorant of the fact that the articles they wanted were made in St. Catharines, have been sending their orders to outside firms. Peterborough, one of the leading industrial cities of the Province, can benefit from both these items. The people as a whole should not forget that many nationally known articles are manufactured in this city, and the local manufacturers should post themselves as to the output of all the Peterborough plants so that, so far as is possible, they may buy from each other to their mutual advantage, instead of, through lack of knowledge of what can be done here, placing their orders out of town. The St. Catharines manufacturers in deciding to practice team work instead of "going it alone" are on the right path.

AN IMPORTANT GATHERING

The approach of the meetings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and of many affiliated societies in Toronto just after Christmas, raises the question of the relation of science and scientists to the man in the street and to the daily life of the citizen. The vital importance of making full provision for the extension of scientific research and of ensuring the prompt application in the industries and in daily life of the most recent discoveries was one of the lessons learned during the recent war. It is not sufficient, however, for the ordinary citizen to realize that science is essential. He should come in contact with those who are striving to extend the boundaries of knowledge, learn to appreciate the spirit that animates them, the object they are striving to attain, and the successes they achieve.

As Sir Richard Gregory said at Edinburgh at the last meeting of the British Association. "It is not by discoveries alone, and the records of them in volumes rarely consulted, that science is advanced, but by the diffusion of knowledge and the direction of men's minds and actions through it. In these democratic days no one accepts as a working social ideal Aristotle's view of a small and highly cultivated aristocracy pursuing the arts and sciences in secluded groves and maintained by the manual workers excluded from citizenship. Artisans today have quite as much leisure as members of the professional classes, and science can assist in encouraging the worthy employment of it. This end can be attained by co-operative action between local scientific societies and representative organizations of labor. There should be close association and a common fellowship, and no suggestion of superior philosophers descending from the clouds to dispense gifts to plebeian assemblies. Above all, it should be remembered that a cause must have a soul as well as a body. The function of a mission-hall is different from that of a cinema-house or other places of entertainment, and manifestations of the spirit of science are more uplifting than the most instructive descriptive lectures."

In the life of the City of Toronto the Royal Canadian Institute is serving in lectures and other meetings to make known the recent advances in knowledge and to bring about that contact of scientists with other members of the community that is so essential. The meetings of the American Association will be something more, for only once in a generation does Toronto form the meeting place of scientists from the whole continent. We in Ontario, and those in Toronto in particular, should make full use of this opportunity to come into touch with affairs in the scientific world.

THE EXAMINER'S POSITION.

Mr. Dobbin's letter on the question of municipal candidates is, as are all his contributions to the Press, interesting. The difficulty of securing qualified candidates has not been over-emphasized by him, and unquestionably, as he points out, the thoughtless criticism, which is the chief reward of serving the public, is a big factor in deterring many citizens from offering themselves. But in suggesting that the editor of The Examiner should personally go out on a still hunt for candidates instead of merely pointing out that there is a need for better material, Mr. Dobbin takes a pathway along which we have no intention of following him. Because a newspaper complains of bad streets surely the staff could not be expected to get out and improve them with their own labour. And if there is occasion to criticize the cost of a bridge, the publishing of such criticism does not entail a personal attempt by the editor to reduce the expenditure by bridge-building on his own account. As we understand them, the functions of the editorial column of a newspaper are to give expression to the paper's opinion on public questions, to interpret the news of the day, to endorse, if it seems fit, movements that are in the public interest, to advance suggestions that are likely to be for the welfare of the community in which it is published and to help, to the best of the ability of its staff, to make its home city a better place, morally and materially, in which to live. These functions The Examiner has been endeavouring to carry out, and because of them we have tried to create a livelier interest in municipal affairs, to bring into the public service men who, by reason of their business training, might be expected to grapple more readily and more intelligently with public problems than some of those who have sat around the Council Board, to impress upon the citizens the necessity of concerning themselves more closely with the nomination and election of the city's governing bodies. If we have not succeeded as fully as we would have liked to have done, we at least claim credit for a sincere effort and an honest desire to serve the community. And for those we have no apologies to make.

COST OF PLUM-PUDDING.

Plum-pudding is probably occupying the thoughts of a good many housewives at the present moment, let alone the joyful anticipations of their children, and may be of their husbands. For our own part we might mention, though it is of no great national importance, that we prefer the "left-over" plum-pudding, when it is nicely cut up in pieces and fried. The point, however, which we think may interest many of our readers about it is the cost. This The Ottawa Journal has been considering and states that "it will not cost so much as last year. To begin with, the basic element of flour was sold a year ago at $8.50 per hundred weight; this year it is selling at $4.50. Raisins and currants, which retailed last Christmas at 35 cents per pound, are available now at 25 cents. The important item of sugar has fallen within the twelve-month from 22 cents to 8 cents per pound. Suet may now be had from 30 cents, as compared with 35 cents a year ago. Eggs alone are as high, or higher, than in December, 1920, and for no reason that could be considered valid in a court of justice. The excuse last year was the high cost of feed for the hens; but this year plain, ordinary scarcity is the nominal defence."

Careful housewives will like to check these figures for themselves. But on reading the above we thought that a good many things had been left out of the calculations, and so looked up what is described as a good recipe for 'the English national dish, plum-pudding." We found that in addition to the above ingredients there are required for this bread crumbs, candied lemon peel, candied citron peel, Seville oranges, lemons, nutmeg, sweet almonds, milk, and, and, and, a wineglassful of brandy. Now our housewives will be able to see if the Christmas pudding this year will cost less than last year's, if such a recipe as this be used. If any of them want to know what the quantities are we shall be happy to publish them. In the meantime we can only hope that The Ottawa Journal is right and that people will be able to enjoy a cheaper plum-pudding this Christmas, but not eat too much of it.—Kingston Standard.

Appetite Good, Gained 20 lbs.

Could Not Feel Better

From a nervous wreck this man was restored to health, strength and happiness.

He tells his own story in this letter.

Mr. Ralph A. Roberts, Loverna, Sask., writes:

"In 1917 I had lost all appetite, failed 25 pounds in weight, become very nervous and shaky and in fact given up all hope of recovery. For some time I had suffered from constipation, which kept getting worse, until I was fast becoming a total wreck. Doctors and their drugs were sending me to my grave at the age of 39.

"Then I read about people being restored by Dr. Chase's Medicines and after three months' use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills I found that my bowels were restored to normal movement each day and the constipation was no more. I had a good appetite, had gained 20 pounds and could not feel better. I shall always be grateful for these benefits."

He guides me and the bird. In His good time.

HOPES TO CURE LOCKJAW.

Chicago Physician Has a New Treatment for One Form of the Disease.

CHICAGO, December 22. — Dr. Arno B. Luckhardt, of the Physiology Department of the University of Chicago, thinks he has discovered a cure for parathyroid tetany, a form of lockjaw which results in death in a few days if the four parathyroid glands in the neck are removed.

Dr. Luckhardt has removed the glands from the neck of a dog which has been kept alive for fifty-seven days, and still appears vigorous as the result of injections.

When these four tiny glands in the neck do not function properly, the result is tremblings over the entire body and the loss of control of the jaw muscles. Dr. Luckhardt believes his treatment will cure this condition, which is often termed "Cobbler's Disease."

Do you know that you can buy tickets to bring them "back home" for Christmas?

Not only at Christmas, of course, but just now we are thinking of a novel and highly appreciated Christmas present.

You can go into any Canadian Pacific Station or office in Canada and buy a ticket for the person you designate. No matter where he lives, this ticket is delivered to him by the local agent. It can, if necessary, be wired.

In other words: If yours is a scattered family, you can bring them "back home" for Christmas and the ticket is delivered to them as your Christmas present.

The Canadian Pacific has over 2400 stations and offices. For rates to or from anywhere in Canada or the United States, ask your Canadian Pacific Agent.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

KEEN COMPETITION BETWEEN STEAMSHIP LINES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press)—Rival steamship lines are competing for passengers, in the post-war travel revival, as sharply as hotels fight for guests.

In the old days, this competition showed itself chiefly in innovations introduced for first-class passengers but now interest is centering also on second and third class quarters. Lines flying the flags of various nations are entered in the race.

A British line recently announced a "veranda cafe" for second class passengers, and promptly an American line began supplying menu rards for the third class.

Incidentally, the old-fashioned word "steerage" no longer is heard in shipping offices. In practically all the larger ships the third class today is as luxurious as the first-class of 25 years ago. Gone are tables covered only with oil cloth or not a tall—and with them self-service.

But competition also is keen in the first class saloon. Innovations recently announced by various lines include:

A Captain's hour with the children.

A screened-in and bunkered deck to serve as a golf course.

Cabin-to-cabin telephone service.

A miniature department store.

A bureau for engaging taxis by wireless.

An electric "shimmy machine", replacing the promenade as a weight reducer.

A woman barber for bobbed heads.

THE GOVERNMENT HAS NEW PROPOSAL

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Pess.)—On his return to Toronto from Ottawa last night, Premier Drury announced that in withholding approval of the agreements between municipalities and Hydro Electric Commission for acquition of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto road, the government had a new proposal to make. The main feature of the new plan is that it apparently intends to substitute for Provincial Commission control which Mr. Drury referred to as undemocratic, control by locally appointed commissions.

Sir Adam Beck has so far refused to comment on the situation.

Lots of people are too conscientious to lie, and yet they manage to suppress the truth.

OSHAWA UNDERTAKER ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES.

Action Entered to Recover Loss by Breach of Contract.

PORT HOPE, Dec. 22.—J. A. McGibbon, barrister, for D. W. Dalton, an Oshawa undertaker and furniture dealer, has issued a writ against G. V. Disney of the same town to collect $10,000 damages for an alleged breach of contract.

G. D. Conant is solicitor for the defendant, and the action will be heard in the Supreme Court. Both statements of claim and defence have been filed.

In his statement of claim the plaintiff sets out that by an agreement dated the 17h of November, 1916, the plaintiff purchased the business of the defendant agreeing that he would either directly or indirectly either as principal or agent or as director or manager of a company or otherwise carry on or be engaged or concerned or take part in the business of an undertaker or funeral director within the limits of the Corporation of the Town of Oshawa, or within a radius of two miles thereof, for a period of ten years from the date thereof. Provided, that the purchaser is carrying on during the said period the business of undertaker or funeral director. The agreement also provided that the defendant would not either by himself or with any other person do or cause to prejudice the said business and would render every assistance possible to the plaintiff to assist him in continuing the good will and business thereof.

The plaintiff contends that the agreement has not been lived up to and therefore claims $10,000 damages for breach of contract, his costs of action, and such further and other relief as the court may deem meet.

The defendant has filed a statement of defence, claiming among other things that he is not interested in the Disney Undertaking Company or in any other undertaking company as alleged by plaintiff in any way whatsoever.

He further claims that he has abided by all of the convenants contained in the agreement referred to.

DETROIT 'PHONE RATE CUT IS ANNOUNCED.

Temporary Reductions to Be Made by State.

LANSING, Dec. 22.—A temporary reduction in Detroit telephone rates was to be announced here by Sherman T. Handy, Chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, in keeping with his promise last week to grant temporary relief to Detroit pending the announcement of permanent schedules for all Michigan lines.

The readjustment of rates will be based on the investigation recently completed by the commission and the report of Edmund C. Calkins, statistician and auditor for the commission. Representatives of the city and telephone company are here to attend meeting of the commission.

Mayor Couzens and members of the Detroit Council have charged that the telephone company has been earning a profit of 10 to 11per cent. on its Detroit lines. Counsel for the company maintain that the profit has only been about 8 per cent.

LABOR SEAT IS TO BE PROTESTED.

Seven Years of Bad Luck For Evelyn Nesbit?

Remarkable Misfortunes Which Are Overtaking Her Lead Harry Thaw's Former Wife to Wonder if She Is Really Doomed To Be Hoodooed as Long as the Old Superstition Says

WHEN hard luck runs in a row with never an interval — then it is hardest to bear. That was the fate of Job, who bore his misfortunes with a patience which has become proverbial, a fortitude which is the despair of weaker mortals who would emulate it.

Recently has come forward a modern successor to Job, one who has been buffeted by a long series of afflictions. She is none other than Evelyn Nesbit, the ex-wife of Harry K. Thaw, who, with the killing of Stanford White in a crowded New York roof garden, started the long train of troubles which give no sign of cessation, having cropped out with renewed vigor recently.

A certain quota of bad luck is the lot of all. No one is an utter stranger to it, and many believe they know it all too well. The saving grace is that the visits of adverse fortune usually are isolated and the victim may recover from one shock and brace himself by his optimism before the next one arrives.

It is a matter of divided opinion whether Evelyn Nesbit is rightly punished by the tribulations which have descended in such quantity upon her. Some affirm it is no more than a just retribution for sins they believe her to have committed. Others are prone to declare that the bad luck which dogs her has followed her enough, if it may be considered as punishment. Yet others think she is entirely innocent and a plaything of passion. Now, these last partisans assert, superstitiously, she has fallen under the influence of a hoodoo which will not be driven away.

And it does rather look like that. Consider the appearances of the hoodoo from past to present. Evelyn Nesbit has begun her modest career on the stage. She marries a millionaire. Happiness is dissipated by a terrible killing. Her husband is declared insane. He divorces her, denies their alleged child. She knows poverty and reverts to the stage again. Once more she marries and the divorce court spells the end of bliss. Robberies and illness affect her as she tries to make a living in a little New York tea shop.

As a child Evelyn Nesbit had become acquainted with the hardships of poverty, and it was to put them behind her that she sought out a career for herself. Nature had endowed her with a beautiful face and form, and thus it was suggested to her that it would be as an artist's model that she could best make her way. At the outset she posed only for heads and before women artists only, but eagerness to advance in her profession and the pinch of poverty induced her to pose also for men painters and to allow their brushes to limn the full outlines of her charms. Fame came to her and the portraits of her that were published brought her offers to go on the stage. Posing by day and stage by night — these were the full hours that her ambition urged upon her.

In New York she came to know Stanford White, the talented architect, and was drawn into the sinister circle of his bohemian life. She wrote of him later as a "benevolent vampire," and said it was he who "shattered to the foundations the fabric of my innocence." She believed, however, she would be lifted away and placed beyond all such influences by her marriage with the rich young millionaire, Harry K. Thaw, scion of a wealthy and prominent family.

But again the hoodoo pursued her. The shackles of the old life could not be broken. Jealousy drove the maddened young husband to draw his revolver in the midst of a gay throng and end the life of Stanford White. The terrific sensation caused by the killing and the trial which followed has not yet subsided and is recalled whenever the name of Evelyn Nesbit is mentioned. Widely remembered, too, is the commotion of the trial and Harry Thaw's escape from the electric chair by an insanity plea. Notoriety was indelibly stamped on the name of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

There followed Thaw's incarceration in the asylum at Matteawan and an estrangement between him and his wife. She declared that the allowances due her as a wife began to fail her and that the Thaw family cast blame and opprobrium on her, seeking to part her and her husband and to bar her from the benefits of his estate. She believed that $6,000 a year was insufficient for a millionaire's wife, and stated that even that came irregularly.

Thaw began his efforts to free himself, but having succeeded he did not return to the side of his wife. He took the step of suing for divorce on the grounds of infidelity, naming several corespondents. Finally he won the decree, the suit being uncontested by Mrs. Thaw.

A development in the case, an addition to Evelyn Nesbit's burdens, had come to the knowledge of the public in the wife's insistence that there had been a child of her marriage with Harry Thaw. That there was a child had been denied before in court, and when little Russell, called "Pom Pom," was brought forward, a great surprise was experienced. Harry Thaw, supported by his mother, denied the paternity of the child. To this Evelyn replied:

"I cannot say anything in reply to Harry's and his mother's allegation denying the paternity of my boy Russell more than that it is untrue, as anybody seeing the boy's remarkable resemblance to Harry Thaw will readily see.

"I intend to take no steps in the matter. I am leaving the handling of the whole case to my lawyer. My impression is that the allegation is a lawyer's trick of business to get my son's inheritance away from him and me and secure it for Harry's relatives."

Saying that inadequate provision had been made for her, Evelyn Nesbit decided to take to her profession of the stage again. She preceded her stage career by filing an involuntary petition of bankruptcy. She went abroad and appeared at the London Hippodrome, enjoying some success there. She appeared also in this country on the vaudeville stage and in the movies. But the hoodoo haunted her and none of her ventures seemed to turn out well for long.

Resolving to determine by another trial whether she might evade ill fate and find lasting joy in marriage, she wedded her dancing partner, Jack Clifford. But even the minister who performed the ceremony protested later that he had not realized the identity of those he was joining in matrimony or he might not have proceeded.

Again malign fate intervened with alarming and disturbing incidents. Evelyn continued to express her fear of her liberated ex-husband, Harry Thaw, declaring she knew him to have made threats against her life. She said she lived in constant fear. Also other shadows from the past fell athwart her path. Old bills, contracted in the days when she was encouraged to extravagance, were pressed. The merchants dunned her and when she declared she was unable to pay took the matter to court. Process servers and sheriffs banished peace, joy and calm from the mountain camp in which she was living with her husband.

Then her romance with Clifford went on the rocks. The two fell out and filed petitions for divorce against each other, both naming corespondents. She said her husband had cost her $100,000. Counter charges flew back and forth. Clifford conducted a night raid upon the apartment in town in which his wife was staying, finding a man in the apartment. Although the wife insisted this man was an employee of hers and was present only as a protector, since she was afraid to stay alone, the incident was used against her.

Other manifestations of the action of the relentless hoodoo came in robberies of Evelyn Nesbit's apartment. Four men were arrested there on a second attempt, but others persisted and thefts succeeded.

"You see, I've been robbed three times," Evelyn Nesbit said to reporters. "Look at this safe. You could blow it open with toothpowder. No, I don't keep the receipts in it now. Not me. Three times is enough. I learn.

"You see, the robbers got in three times and nicked me for fifteen hundred. That set me back in paying my rent."

Her delay in paying her rent, owing to her losses, almost brought eviction, but she managed to tide this over for the time. Minor mishaps followed thick and fast. A pet dog suddenly died. Evelyn upset a fan and cut her finger so badly that blood poisoning resulted and she almost had to submit to an amputation.

Her suit for divorce was complicated by a quarrel over the ownership of the camp on the Canadian border owned by Evelyn Nesbit and Jack Clifford. Also attorneys going there to investigate were mistaken for revenue agents and fired on by local bootleggers.

Reverses intruded on her attempt to earn an independent living, a little tea shop she established on Fifty-second Street, New York. In use there was wedding silver bearing the Thaw crest. Of this, souvenir hunting guests took their toll. Nevertheless, moderate success, so far, is being enjoyed by the tea room venture.

It is a hard task, this coping with so persistent a hoodoo, and one hopes that the old superstition may be broken.

The pupils presented the principal, Miss Money, with a prayer book, and the assistant teacher, Miss Abbott, with a hymn book and a box of fine staionery. Both the teachers made an appropriate speech thanking the pupils for their kind remembrances, and provided candies, nuts, etc., before the pupils dispersed.

Schools Closed.

The public and continuation schools both closed on Wednesday for the holiday season. All the rooms had an appropriate program in the afternoon, and a treat of candies, etc., provided by the teachers. The senior room of the public school presented their teacher, Miss Isabel Handley with gloves and a large box of bon-bons, and for entertainment had the following: Song by all the pupils; jokes, read by Russell Fallis, song by the boys, readings by Albert Cullum, Nelles Rowland, Lilian Sanderson, Jean Gervan and Violet Bothwell, a dialogue "What Sisters are Good For," and a song by Jean Gervan, Alixe Spencer and Vera Weeks. A former pupil, Jean Burnham, also gave a recitation, and all joined in God Save the King, before dismissal.

In Miss Greer's room the pupils also had a short programme, and gave their teacher perfume and stationery as a token of appreciation, while in the primary room they had a tree, and after the gifts were distributed, a "peanut scramble" was arranged by the teacher, Miss Brown, to the great, if noisy, enjoyment of the little folk.

Zion Public Schools.

Zion Public School, of which Miss Gertrude Richards is the teacher, had their Christmas tree and closing exercises on Thursday afternoon, when the following interesting programme was given, the school-room being nicely decorated for the occasion: Open chorus, "Christmas Bells"; recitation, "Perhaps," by Henry Lancashire; "Christmas Morning," by Jack Coulter; "Christmas," by Orville Bonner; "Grandmother's Christmas," by Hazel Husk; "I am Santa Claus," by Ethel Patton; "A Christmas Memory," by Herbert Patton; "Poor Santa Claus," by Newton Browne, and "At Christmas," by Fred. Coulter; a talk on "The Meaning of Christmas" was given by the teacher and a reading, "The Christmas Carol," by Olver Brock; "Christmas Hymn, 1937," by Bena Brown; "Old Claus," by Hazel Husk, and "The Christmas Tree," by Ethel Patton. A quartette, "This Glad Christmas-tide," by Bena Brown, Ethel Patton, Olver Brock and Henry Lancashire; a solo, "Let the rest of the world go by," by Lawrence Winslow, and three choruses by the whole school furnished the musical part of the programme. Perhaps the most interesting item was the distribution of gifts from the tree, after which the pupils provided a treat of apples, and the teacher one of home-made candy, the singing of the National Anthem bringing the happy afternoon to a fitting close.

A Fruit Shower.

A pleasant surprise of a fruit shower as a Christmas gift was provided recently by the ladies of Grace Presbyterian Church for their new pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. G. S. Gervan. Over 50 jars of fruit, pickles, etc., were left at the manse as a token of hte good wishes for a Happy Yuletide, which all the congregation desired to send, and which found expression in the shower contributed by the Ladies' Aid, W.M.S., and other organisations. On account of moving from the West and other circumstances, Mr. and Mrs. Gervan had not their usual supply of fruit, etc., on hand this winter, so the kind thoughtfulness of the ladies, as well as of the men who brought apples and vegetables of various kinds as their share, was especially appreciated.

Rev. Archie Wallace, associate editor of S. S. Periodicals, Wesley Buildings, Toronto, will preach the aniversary sermons for the Methodist Sunday School on Sunday, 1st January, both morning and evening, and will also address a mass meeting of the School in the afternoon at 2.30.

The annual entertainment on Monday evening, 2nd January, will have as its chief feature "The Pageant of Bethlehem," in which about forty characters take part. There will also be motion songs, drills, etc., by the Primary and Junior Departments of the School

The Counties' Council met in Cobourg on Monday, and Reeves Wood of Millbrook, Greer of South Monaghan, Baptie and McCamus of Cavan, McMasters and Staples of Mancers, were in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pritchard, whose wedding was the first to be held in the new Methodist Church at Pontypool, have returned from their wedding trip, and are now at their home on the 4th Line, Cavan.

Miss May Needham returned on Tuesday from an extended visit with friends in Toronto.

LAKEVIEW SCHOOL CONCERT

SOUTH MONAGHAN, Dec. 23—On Wednesday night this school held its Christmas Entertainment which proved a great success in spite of severe weather conditions. The school was filled to capacity with the children and parents and friends. As usual the young folk acquitted themselves splendidly in choruses and recitations and dialogues. They were helped out by local talent of the best sort and altogether a first rate school treat was provided.

The Rev. A. H. McConnachie and the Rev. Edgar Russell delivered short addresses. The event of the evening of course was the coming of Santa Claus who dispensed his gifts with a lavish hand.

Miss McConnachie, the teacher, in a few words, thanked the parents for their presence and the interest shown in the school.

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with coated tongue, foul breath or a dull headache; or if your meals sour and ferment, you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire ailmentary canal.

Those subject to headaches, backaches, bilious attacks, constipation or stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying the morning inside bath.

Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

WASHINGTON CONFERENCE GETS DOWN TO DISCUSSION OF SUBMARINE QUESTION.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—The British statement in opposition to the use of submarines was submitted to the full Naval Committee of the Washington Conference at the afternoon meeting yesterday. The presentation was followed by a discussion by the delegates of all the powers on the submarine question. The committee then adjourned until 3 o'clock to-day.

Lord Lee, head of the British Admiralty, presented the British argument for abolishment of submarines as a naval arm. Mr. Sarraut, head of the French delegation, presented a statement for France opposing vigorously the abolishment of submarines.

At to-day's session, Admiral Le Bon, for France, will make a further argument for the retention of the submarine and will probably reveal what submarine tonnage his country requires. Some of the delegates will require further instructions from their governments before they can reply in full to the British proposal.

Some of the Italian Arms Conference delegates have made tentative reservations for steamship accommodations from New York, January 18. The delegates believe that the work of the Conference will be practically complete by that date.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS:

MARTHA—Housework and washing is only an excuse for red and ugly hands. I know a great many women who do all their own housework and yet have beautiful white hands. They use what I use, CAMPANA'S ITALIAN BALM. It is the most wonderful thing in the world for preventing chapping and redness of the hands. I wouldn't be without it. Keep a bottle of CAMPANA'S ITALIAN BALM on your bathroom shelf and rub a little on your hands every time you have had them in water to do cleaning. It will soften and whiten them and will protect them from wear and tear of housework. You can buy CAMPANA'S ITALIAN BALM at any Druggist. 40c a large bottle.

SAGE AND SULPHER DARKENS GRAY HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, and attractive.

SAYS PUNCH BOARDS ARE ILLEGAL UNDER THE DOMINION LOTTERY ACT

ALLEGED THAT PERSONS OPERATING THEM ARE LIABLE TO IMPRISONMENT AND HEAVY FINE. LOCAL CLERGYMAN PBOTESTS.

In the West and in Ontario considerable controversey has arisen over whether or not the punch boards which have secured a popular footing here in Peterborough are a legal method of operation. For some time past these devices for taking a chance on securing grand prizes of boxes of creams or simply a five-cent bar of chocolate by paying ten cents for the privilege of punching out slips of paper with concealed numbers on them, have been maintained in some local hotels, groceries, cigar stores and confectionaries, and good business has resulted. But, according to The Canadian Grocer, the operation of these boards is absolutely illegal under the Dominion Lottery Act. It is entirely a game of chance and the operator of one is open to conviction under the Act, and liable to a two years' imprisonment and a fine of two thousand dollars. Not only that, but under the same Act, every person who buys a chance is guilty of an offence and under conviction is liable to a fine.

A few years ago these boards were quite numerous, but for a time it appeared that they had disappeared. Recently, however, the punch board is again reported in operation in the different Provinces. There have been several convictions recently on information being sent to the Chief of Police in the city wherein they were operated.

How the Act Reads.

This contention of The Canadian Grocer seems substantially borne out by the Lottery Act itself, under which punch boards are classed, and which reads as follows:

"1. (a) Makes, prints, advertises or publishes, or causes or procures to be made, printed, advertised or published, any proposal scheme or plan for advancing, lending, giving, selling or in any way disposing of any property by lots, cards, tickets or any mode of chance whatsoever, or

"(b) Sells, barters, exchanges or otherwise disposes of, or causes or procures, or aids or assists in, the sale, barter, exchange or other disposal of, or offers for sale, barter or exchange any lot, card, ticket or other means or device for advancing, lending, giving, selling or otherwise disposing of any property, by lots, tickets or any mode of chance whatsoever, or

"(c) Conducts or manages any scheme contrivance or operation of any kind for the purpose of determining who, or the holders of what lots, tickets, number or chance are the winners of any property so proposed to be advanced, loaned, given, sold or disposed of.

"2. Every one is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a penalty of twenty dollars who buys, takes or receives any such lot, ticket or other device as aforesaid.

"3. Every sale, loan, gift, barter or exchange of property, by any lottery ticket, card or other mode of chance depending upon or to be determined by chance or lot, is void, and all property so sold, lent, given bartered or exchanged, is liable to be forfeited to any person who sues for the same by action or information in any court of competent jurisdiction.

"4. No such forfeiture shall affect any right or title to such property acquired by any bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration without notice.

"5. This section includes the printing or publishing, or causing to be printed or published, of any advertisement, scheme, proposal or plan of any foreign lottery, and the sale or offer for sale of any ticket, chance or share, in any such lottery, or the advertisement for the sale of such ticket, chance or share, and the conducting or managing of any such scheme, contrivance or operation for determining the winners in any such lottery."

A Stern Duty.

On this punch board question Rev. G. E. Ross, East City, while finding no particular pleasure in dealing with the subject, considers it a stern duty to lodge his protest.

"Every loyal citizen," he writes The Examiner "is in duty bound to lift up his voice or his pen in defence of civic righteousness and lofty morality. While controversary is always more or less distasteful, duty is ever purifying and enobling to the soul. Let us then do our duty bravely, whatever it may cost, and if we are confronted with a question such as the influence of a new gambling device on the moral welfare of our young people, let us at least state our candid opinion.

"What, then, shall we say in reference to the 'punch board'? In our opinion, it is a subtile, flagrant, fascinating gambling device. Now, this is a strong statement, but nothing else will accomplish anything today. A strong man never objects to strong propositions if we are able to prove our position. It is the wild, slashing, unreasonable declaration, minus proof, that gives offence. What, then, is the proof to be offered Alleged Lottery.

"In the first place, punch boards, under the law, are alleged to be devices used for conducting a lottery. Now, a lottery is the distribution of prizes, not for merit, but by chance, that is playing games of hazard for stakes or using the punch board by hazard for chocolates. Now, this is gambling. It is against this that the police and citizens of Richmond Hill have not only lifted up their voice, but have taken drastic measures to put down.

"People are pr tty much alike the world over, and what will shock the moral instinct of the citizens of Campbellford and Richmond Hill, silent approval of the citizens of Peterborough.

The Chance.

"Again, let us look at this device. It has 250 holes. You pay ten cents for each punch. You receive a five-cent chocolate bar anyway, and you have the 'chance' of drawing a box if chocolates worth $1.50. But on that board with its 250 holes at ten cents a punch, $25.00 is spent, and there is absolutely no return value for $12.50 of that money. And there is, besides this $12.50, the usual profit on the chocolate bars.

"But this is not the worst feature of the device. There is the fascination. No boy will give ten cents for a single chocolate bar when he can buy it for five cents. He punches that board because he hopes to get something for nothing. He is trying to win a $1.50 box of chocolates for ten cents, and that is gambling. And he will spend two dollars, yes five dollars, to win the box. Can we hope to lead our boys and girls into noble, useful, independent citizenship, while they face on every side devices and contrivances which ever tend to lower their moral manhood and womanhood?

"Nor is this all. I have called attention to the fascinating influence of the punch board. What a man sees with his eyes he is likely to believe. Now, the writer was a casual observer a few evenings ago as to how this device works, and saw a young fellow punch the board nearly a dozen times in about fifteen minutes: this was the admiss'on made by the owner of the board. That young man seemed to have no control of his money or of his will, and it was wonderful how quickly a dollar was spent.

A Serious Case.

"Another case is at hand where a boy, whose mother is doing her day's work out in the storm or the calm, spends from $2.00 to $5.00 between the pool-table and the punch board in one evening. Yes, and a merchant informs us that sometimes a man with a family is so fascinated with the device that he will punch the board when he cannot pay for his groceries. I may also say that I have consulted several men who are operating these boards in their business, and they freely admit that the punch board is a gambling device, but 'others are operating them.'

"In closing, I may say that this is not a complaint, nor do I wish to write further on the subject. It is my opinion. We might have known what was asked for by our esteemed Chief of Police in his own neat way, and under the caption 'Always a Winner.' He wanted our opinion. He has mine, 'Always a Loser.' Let us help him."

In the West.

Advices say that punch board operations have a wider scope in the West than in Ontario, for in some Western localities the prizes extend to cold cash, it is alleged. In fact, an enquirer from Saskatchewan writes that in his home town on some punch boards as much as $150 in gold is displayed, but the only prizes that appear to go out are a cheap cigar or collar button. About two years ago one seizure was made by the police, but the case has apparently never been definitely decided.

NEW COMPLICATIONS U.S. TARIFF QUESTION

Clashing of Opinions Regarding Suggested Flexible Measure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(By Canadian Press)--New complications surround the tariff question as the outgrowth in large part of the recommendations of President Harding in his recent message for a flexible tariff.

The President has urged Congress to expedite passage of the bill for tariff revision, called the permanent tariff bill as distinguished from the existing emergency tariff measure, passed last session to protect certain agricultural and other products. When the present regular session opened the indications were more favorable to quick action than they are now.

More or less under the surface, there is a distinct clashing of opinions and interests in regard to the Harding idea of a flexible tariff. The Harding plan would give the President power, on advice of the tariff commission, to move tariff rates up or down to meet changing conditions of exchange and of other factors in other countries.

On the one hand, the President is said to be strongly bent on getting the flexible tariff plan put through. On the other hand, the high tariff leaders in Congress and in the country have always opposed allowing tre executive to control tariff rates and they do not like the idea now any more than they did before but are not disposed to fight the administration openly.

A hard struggle is forecasted in the Senate over adoption of the Harding plan. The high tariff leaders purpose in the first place to restrict the proposed law all they can before it is put through.

After it is enacted, the charge is made by the low tariff advocates that the high tariff leaders and influences intend to control the tariff commission. In other words, it is charged the purpose is to see that the commission is in the grip of the high tariff supporters and thus the President will have largely to depend on advice, counsel and guidance given him by men whose predilections are in favor of keeping duties up to a high level. It is easy to see that a great deal will depend on the views and temper of the tariff commission. The high tariff leaders have no intention whatever of allowing the commission to ' controlled by low tariff men or to allow it to be headed by a low tariff man Commissioner Thomas Marvin, the prospective chairman, is a leader of high tariff thought in Boston.

It is obvious that much will depend on whether he ariff commission is disposed to keep the flexible tariff at the highet level possible or to keep the duties as low as they can be wih safety to American industries.

POLITICAL NORMALCY IN THE NEAR EAST.

England and France Release Embarrassing Territory.

ADANA, Cilicia, Dec. 22.—(Associated Press)—The Near East, which experienced many turnovers during the great war, is now settling down to what may be regarded as political normalcy. England has already rid herself of Mesopotamia and Transjordania and now France has released Cilicia.

By an agreement reached between Franklin Bouillon, representing the French government and Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the entire province of Cilicia is handed back to the Turkish Nationalists. In return one French company has received a lease on the Bagdad railway between Bozanti and Nessibib and another concession to develop the iron and silver mines in the Harchute vtlley, an condition that 50 per cent of the capial be Turkish. A large part of the Greek population left the territory within 20 days of the signing of he compact.

Red Letter Day

The French evacuation was regarded as a red letter day by the entire population. Adana, the seat of government decided to commemorate it as an annual public festivity. A general holiday was declared and the shops closed. All private and public buildings were bedecked with green and red flags. It had been announced that the new National governor would arrive at the residence house at noon. The narrow picturesque streets began to pack at 8 a.m. with eager crowds.

At the appointed hour the governor dressed in military uniform, appeared in the midst of the throngs Immediately a deafening yell filled the air as an expression of the peoples' loyalty to Mohammedanism and to Kemal Pasha. Speeches were then delivered and the usual official ceremonies held. The new Governor delivered a long address.

He reviewed the events of the past five years and assured his hearers that "Turkey's mighty power which the world thought had waned is now in reality in the ascendency." Continuing he said: "With the sword we fought and won our great empire; with the sword we shall fight until we regain all we lost."

I Certainly Do Feel Happy Now

That's What Toronto Woman Says After Tanlac Completely Overcame Troubles.

"I certainly do feel happy to get my health back and I can't help but think of the many others who are suffering and need just such a medicine as Tanlac," said Mrs. Dorothy Ripley, 21½ Hastngs Ave. Toronto, Ont.

"My health has been failing rapidly during the past years and I was beginning to fear I might break down completely. I had indigestion so bad that the sight of food sometimes made me almost deathly sick. I had to live on light diet all the time and had become so weak, that my housework was a burden and it was all I could do to keep on my feet. My nerves were worn to a frazzle and my sleep was badly broken up. I had awful pains in my back and arms and at times thought I would lose the use of my right arm altogether.

"But I am feeling well and strong again and I have to thank Tanlac for it all. My appetite is just splendid, that tired, weak feeling has left me and I have been built up wonderfully. My nerves are steady and I sleep soundly every night. I hardly ever notice a pain or ache and am enjoying better health than I have in years. I am glad to do all I can to let others know about Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by the Warne Drug Co., Ltd., and by leading druggists everywhere.

HAPPIEST MAN ALIVE MINUS HANDS AND EYES.

Wins Wife, Makes a Fortune, Goes to "See" Europe.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—Corey Hanks, of this city, says everything is possible, and when one considers what Corey has himself done one is led to believe it.

Corey Hanks is a relative of Abraham Lincoln. His grandfather was the first cousin of the famous Nancy Hanks, the martyred President's mother. But that is not his claim to fame.

Without hands and blinded as the result of an explosion 18 years ago, Hanks has since then turned from miner to scholar, lost a sweetheart and won a wife, rigged out two homes in two neighboring Western states and accumulated a snug little fortune besides. Yet not a scintilla of the thing men call "luck" or even a tinge of the spectacular had anything to do, he says, "with my coming up from the hills."

Hanks is studying international law at Harvard University, and when he has finished his course he plans to travel to China, to India, to the Near and Far East, to the Continent and back to the Pacific Coast, where he belongs. And in all this travelling Hanks is going to "see" everything there is for any one to see. He willl "see" it all, but with his ears instead of his eyes. He makes mental jottings of descriptions and comment from those about him, and describes a setting sun against Yellowstone with a detail and understanding that astonish his friends.

Black lace is effective over heavy orange crepe.

NEWSPAPER ROW IS ALL BUT DESERTED.

The World Will Be the Last Survivor.

NEW YORK, December 23 (Canadian Press). — Newspaper Row, or Printing House Square, as it was known in earlier days, soon may be nothing but a memory.

Announcement that the Tribune would move from its pinnacles building in Park Row to join the procession of other papers to new quarters elsewhere brought to the attention of newspapermen that The World and its gilded dome will be the last survivor in Park Row.

The statue of Benjamin Franklin —made of type metal contributed by the printers of the country—located in the square and overlooking the swirling crowds of busiest New York, will, in fact, be a memorial to the old journalistic centre of the city.

In Civil War days almost all the papers, book and magazine publishing houses were located in the square. The Times and Herald were among the first to break away from the traditional environs, migrating uptown to what is now Times Square and Herald Square. The latter recently lost the cause of its identity, too, for when Frank A. Munsey purchased the Herald and Telegram, he brought the Herald downtown to be published with what is now the Sun, while the Telegram is published on the west side.

The old Sun, which once was published on the site of the original Tammany Hall, in Park Row, was moved some years ago to Nassau and Spruce Streets, next door neighbour to The Tribune. A few years ago The Sun moved again — this time to Broadway and Chambers Streets, where it became The Herald, the old Evening Sun taking the name of the Morning Sun.

While Park Row itself has lost its identity with publishing, the majority of the papers are still published in the downtown district.

LONGSHOREMEN STRIKE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. —(Canadian Press.)—"Until the men come to their senses we shall not load any freight at Portland, Maine," Major P. A. Curry, General Manager of the White Star Dominion Line, declared here last night in connection with the strike of longshoremen at that port.

"Steamers will load freight at Halifax and Boston and at New London, Conn. Grain will be loaded at the two first named ports as New London has no elevators," he added. He gave it as his opinion that the strike would be settled in a few days.

"Do you say that you hens 'sit' or 'set'?" asked the precise pedagog of the busy housewife.

"It never matters to me what I say," was the quick reply. "What concerns me is to learn, when I hear the hen is cackling, whether she is laying or lying."—Farm and Fireside.

FOSSIL SKULL OF EARLIEST HUMAN

Discovered in Northern Rhodesia, Africa.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press) — Considerable interest is being taken in the fossill skull of what is expected to prove to be the earliet type of a man, discovered in the "Bone Cave" at Broken Hill Mine, Northern Rhodesia, Africa, and donated to the British Museum. Professor G. Elliott Smith, Professor of Anatomy in the University of London, after an examination of the skull, has informed The Times that "It is the skull of a most remarable type of mankind quite new to science." The professor adds: "In my opinion it is undoubtedly a new species of the human family, if not a new genus."

Heretofore the Java skull has been the most primitive type of human remains that has been found, and according to Professor Smith the African skull presents certain resemblances to it, especially in the general form of the great eyebrow ridges, the flatness of the skull and its broadness at the back. The Gibraltar skull, he says, is the most primitive found on the threshold of Europe, and the presumption is that this race came from Africa. It is quite possible. Prof. Smith thinks that this new skull may represent the ancestral form of this race in Europe. The new skull has great projection of the eyebrows, but the upper part of the face is flat, something like that of the ape.

One of the most striking things about the new skull is the enormous impression of the neck muscles at the back of it. The creature must have had a tremendously thick and powerful neck, Professor Smith says —very much more powerful than any other fossil skulls would suggest to have existed in the type of man they represent. "Another very remarkable feature of this new skull is that some of the teeth are affected with dental caries, a most suprising thing, for in modern man dental caries is a comparatively recent acquistion, and does not date back long before the time of the Pyramids. This ascient man, however, suffered badly from toothache. I do not know of any other case earlier than the Pyramid age of dental caries existing in a human skull."

The skull is in an extraordinary good state of preservation however, owing to blasting operations at the mines where it was found, the lower jaw is missing.

"To my wife: I leave my house with its first and second mortgages.

"My piano player on which there is only a matter of $220 to pay.

"My automobile and the privilege of making the rest of the 'easy payments.'

"My life insurance policy of $1,000 on which there is a policy loan."

AUSTRALIA AND MOTHER COUNTRY.

Controversy Arises Over Question of Loans.

LONDON, Dec. 23. — (Candian Press)—Sir Arthur Stanley, ex-Governor of Victoria, in addressing a meeting of the Australian natives Association, held at Australia House on "Some aspects of the relations of Australia to the Mother Country," said that no sensible man in England would now question the right of the Dominions, and the States within their borders to govern their own affairs, but he thought that Queensland was going much too far in saying that because the City of London would not lend that State the money which it had asked for a short time ago the City was attempting to interfere with the internal affairs of Queensland.

Surely he City of London was entitled to choose where it would invest its money If it was considered that certain legislation had been passed in Queensland detracted from security of money lent to that State he was afraid they would have to do without the loan. But this was not an intereference with the right of Queensland to control her own internal affairs. In the future the ternational affairs. In the future the cause of international troubles would arise out of commercial questions—tariffs, emigration policies, and trade relations—and it was most important that the democracies of the British Empire should sudy trade relations and the effects of tariffs, prohibitions and restrictions imposed by one country upon the citizens of another.

The part to be played by the Dominions in the control of foreign policy, Sir Arthur Stanley said, would probably be solved in the future. He did not think the solution was to be found in an Empire Parliament, or in the Dominions appointing their own diplomatic representatives at foreign courts, but in strengthening the informal and the fo mal bonds between the Dominions and the Mother Country.

ALASKA ONCE TROPICAL.

Fossilised Vegetation Shows Climate Was Mild in Prehistoric Times.

The ancient vegetation in the Arctic region indicates that its climate was once very unlike that which now prevails there. Instead of consisting of a handful of struggling plants, its vegetation was abundant and luxuriant, including ferns and palm-like plants that grow only in mild and frostless climates.

This vegetation flourished in the Arctic region, a study of its fossil plants show, from at least late Palezoic to middle Conozoic geologic time, millions of years ago before man existed. A study of the coal beds of the Cape Lisburne region has disclosed many fossil plants. These coal beds are extensive, and are the only known commercially valuable mineral resource of the region. A little coal is occasionally mined for vessels that are short of fuel, which, as there is no harbour, lie off shore and load on a few sacks by means of lighters.

Cape Lisburne is the bold headland which marks the north-west end of a land mass that projects into the Arctic Ocean from the western coast of Alaska, about 160 miles north of the Arctic Circle and about 300 miles directly north of Nome.

Even Cape Lisburne is by no means the northern limit of fossil plants of this nearly tropical region vegetation, for they have been found in the rocks 180 miles north-east of that.

HE HALTED THE WORLD.

Story of How Jonkheer H. A. Van Karnbeek Saved Dutch Honan, and Probably the ... Kaiser's Life.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—It had been interesting if they tried to keep His Excellency Jonkheer H. A. Van Karnebeek out of this conference. A man so wily. A man who has been part of the furniture of every peace conclave since he was old enough to follow in his father's footsteps. A man who is said to be, after David Lloyd George, the most skilled pilot of a ship of state through troubled waters in all Europe.

The Karnebeeks, father and son, have directed the foreign policy of The Netherlands for a long time; they are used to it. Also the Dutch are used to it, and like it. The world has grown used to it, and likes Dr. Van Karnebeek, slender, piercing-eyed, likable and with two prominent teeth showing just a trifle under his comely mustache.

League Body President.

The chief of the Dutch delegation is 47 years old, the son of Jonkheer A. Van Karnebeek, former foreign minister, former minister plenipotentiary, former member of the States General (Dutch Parliament), who was vice-president of the Second Hague Conference, and now president of the Carnegie Foundation (Peace Palace).

The son started his career in the colonial office, was secretary of the first Hague Peace Conference and was a Dutch delegate to the second conference. In 1911 Van Karnebeek was appointed burgomaster of The Hague, resigning this post in August, 1918, to become foreign minister. At the recent Assembly of the League of Nations he was elected president. Is it not fair to assert that a conference without a Karnebeek lacks authenticity?

Properly to appreciate Van Karnebeek it is necessary to run the mind over Dutch history of recent years; first, The Netherlands did not enter the World War, though there were many people trying to push her in. But Holland's attitude was traditional, just as the Karnebeek policy is traditional, and the Karnebeeks themselves.

When the Stuarts were driven finally out and William of Orange, the Stadtholder, came to share the British throne with Mary, and Anne succeeded him, every winter used to see John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, over in Holland bending all his talent and all the prestige of his triumphs to winning from the States-General continued support in his war against Louis.

Make War Slowly.

The Dutch make war slowly, and are a cautious, but tenacious people. Witness South Africa. In 1914, and subsequently they were tenacious for peace. This country knows the nature of war time propaganda in a neutral state. Every European non-combatant was saturated with it. The Netherlands was not strong in her own might altogether, as was America. Yet tenacity won, and the Dutch stayed out.

Nevertheless there were constant problems for the Dutch to face, connected with that invisible border, to cross which on the part of combatants meant that the war, for them, was over. The Dutch dealt fearfully with these; and dealt faithfully with the armies of refugees who sought hospitality and an open road to England or across the Atlantic.

Dr. Van Karnebeek had much to do with the skillful direction of his country during those perilous times. His hand was at the wheel when the Kaiser, and then his son crossed that border and focused the attention of the world on that ancient privilege of sanctuary in a foreign land.

It was a highly delicate moment. Wounds were open and bleeding; the dead unburied; the guns still smoking; the ashes of homes yet warm. Every extremist whose patriotism had become merged in hysteria clamored for vengeance to be centered in one figure. Theoretical distribution of responsibility had no appeal for them; they yearned for a visible victim, an entity which should embody, for the world, trial, conviction, sentence and thereby exemplary annihiliation.

Saved the Kaiser.

Between this gnashing of anticipatory teeth and the troubled figure of a broken old man stood Van Karnebeek, traditional foreign adviser to The Netherlands.

Van Karnebeek kept his head; he always does; the Dutch always do. He looked long on his country's history and its ancient recognition as an asylum for those who fled from political or religious attack. Then Van Karnebeek placidly faced the world, and said:

"He is here. He will remain here—watched by us, but safe. It is his right. We know it and so do you."

And every statesman, including those who had promised the most vengeance, knew he was right, knew also that the Dutch would stick. The game was up.

History owes this bit of record to this man who is unassuming in these deliberations and represents such a durable principle, national and personal.

His qualification to be styled a gentleman does not rest so much on the fact that he is a lord in waiting to the Queen of the Netherlands, as it does on his instinctive sincerity, courtesy and consideration toward those he meets.

He smiles easily and often; his eyes bores clear into the heart and into the motive behind it.

Then he smiles and answers; always answers; moreover his answer satisfies.

Models on Colonizing.

He has a big responsibility at the conference which does not appear much on the surface. The Dutch have the prosperous Dutch Indies, Borneo, Sumatra and other islands of great wealth, and in the course of three centuries have done constructive work of a character profitable alike to themselves and others.

Explorers, such as Dr. Carl Lumholt, always speak highly of the Dutch as colonizers. It is hard to conceive this conference enunciating any principle of conduct far in advance of the Dutch methods in the East Indies.

On all these counts—his experience in foreign affairs, his skill in navigating difficult waters, his national interest in the Far East, Dr. Van Karnebeek was entitled to attend the conference. But chiefly he deserves to be here because, as observed, no conference without him would be complete. He believes with all his heart in conferences and never misses one. He is, perhaps, the best available emodiment of the conference spirit.

THE MACHINE HAS MASTERED THE MAN.

Such is Stage British Labor Party Has Reached.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—The most pungent criticism of the Labor movement usually comes from within the movement or from men who for a period have given it their enthusiastic support, says a writer in the Times. Mr. Shaw Desmond was a member of the Labor Party for 14 years, and he stood as an Independent Socialist against Mr. John Burns in the General Election of 1910. He has now written a book, "Labor, the Giant with the Feet of Clay," in which he describes he movement as split from top to bottom by fudamentally opposed ideals, tacics, and objectives.

Of he Briish Labor Party, Mr. Desmond writes that its rise to power has een meteoric, but "comets sometimes have the property of flashing brightly for a space, and tren flashing out again". The reached, fraught with fate, when "success has cemented bureaucracy into one solid, stolid mass, none the less bureaucracy becaue in it, the bureaucrat is not the leader but the led." "The British Labor Party", he says later, "has reached the stage where the machine has mastered the man."

Mr. Desmond has something to say about the primness and self-satisfaction of the Labor Leaders. Meeting Mr. Arthur Henderson, he observes on one page was "rather like interviewing the Pope." The decline of the Labor Party began, he thinks, with the return of 29 Labor members to Parliament in 1906. His sympathy with the British worker "a sentimental, good-natured fellow, serving by heart," does not blind him to the limitations of the workers in the mass. The worker, he suggests, mistakes the passing of resolutions for "action". The average trade unionist would cheerfully kill his grandmother by resolution, and salve his concience afterwards by the satisfying reflection that the resolution to do away with the old lady had been passed by an "overwhelming majoriy," The probability, however, is that he would stop at the passing the resolution, and then do nothing.

Mr. Desmond traces at some length the leaning towards "direct action" which was the outcome of the war, but is convinced that Bolshevism will make no progress in this country. Before ten years have passed he prophesies that in these islands Bolshevim and direct action will be spoken as we speak today of the comet of last year. The Dictatorship of the Proletriat he denounces as an autocratic tyranny, bu incidentally he declares his belief that Lenin, although he has reverted to a sort of state capitalism has not given up his idea of converting the world to his doctrines, "It may be taken as assured," he says, "That Lenin is only drawing back to spring when the time is ripe."

There is a chapter headed "If Labor Came into Power." The plan of the engineers of the Machine State' Mr. Desmond writes, is to win over the working man by the promise of more pay for less work, the capture of the municipalities and local governing bodies, and finally the winning for Democracy of the Parliaments of the world. From that moment the society visualized is one in which the Labor leader will be supreme, a society in which everything will be decided by the holding up of hands, and in which inevitably the rights of the minority would be brought to the irreducible minimum. When the Machine State has evolved the bureaucrat will fast pass into the autocrat, impregnably entrenched behind his official bulwarks, and the end would be a dictatorship. This is one view. He also visualizes the fool's paradise of a parliament as imagined by the I.L.P., in which Mr. Geo. Lansbury "who thinks he is a bolshevik," Mr. Arthur Henderson, "the benevolent Radical who thinks he has 'got religion,'" Mr. Philip Snowden, Mr. G. H. Roberts, M.P., the Rev. Conrad Noel, and "Heaven alone knows what other flotsam and jetsam thrown up by the movement" will sit together in brotherly harmony.

A TYPICAL SOLDIER IS THE FIANCEE OF PRINCESS MARY.

Viscount Lascelles Carries Three Wound Stripes, and is a Man Among Men.

COLGONE, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press)— Numerous stories of the life and personality during the war of Viscount Lascelles, fiancee of Her Royal Highness, Princess Mary when the bethrothal was announced were told among the soldiers of the British army on the Rhine who had served under the recipient of two D. S.O., awards in the famous Grenadier Guards. Soon after the armistice Viscount Lascelles, who wore three wound stripes, led the second battalion of Guards into Cologne as a part of the army of occupation of the Rhineland.

A Grenadier, who served formerly as the distinguished officer's "batman" or orderly, said that he was a typical Guard officer and a real man in every sense of the word—a strict disciplinarian, to whom polish and shine and cleanliness was a second religion.

A Model Kit

His own kit was a model of what all kits should be, in the eyes of the "batman" and even in the front line trenches during an engagement, Viscount Lascelles would appear in speckless khaki with button brilliantly polished when orders of the day permitted. In the heaviest "strafe" Viscount Lascelles would be the most cheerful of his company.

"Often Lord Viscount would give up his blankets on a cold night so that a private of his company would not suffer," said the "batman". "He was always most considerate of his men and in many cases where most officer would have handed out seven days in the guard house, he would let his soldiers off, for some trifling offense with only a slight reprimand and the request to be more careful next time.

Shared His Parcels

"Viscount Lascelle was very fond of sharing his parcels from home with his men. Surprise gifts of cigarettes, chocolate, socks and shirts and other useful articles were often distributed rather mysteriously in rest billets, and although everyone knew they came from our commander never admitted that he was the fairy godfaher of our battalion."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,--With reference to Mr. F. H. Dobbin's letter published last evening I wish to add my endorsation to all the facts it contained. It is surely regrettable that good business men who have or could make the time to devote to the city's business, cannot be induced to come out. But, as Mr. Dobbin says, when one considers the hours they spend, and without remuneration, and the abuse they are subjected to, both on the street and, unfortunately, very often through the Press, you can hardly find fault with them for keeping out of municipal harness.

I am pleased to see that Mr. J. J. Turner is to stand for Mayor, and personally I would like to see him elected by acclamation, and this seems to be the opinion generally of the citizens with whom I have come in contact. Mr. Turner has given years of service on the Board of Aldermen, Board of Education, Chamber of Commerce, Y.M.C.A. and other public activities in the city, and I, for one, would be glad to see his ability recognized by promotion to the Mayor's chair. Let us hope that some good men will come forward today and allow their names to stand in order that he, whoever is elected Mayor, be surrounded and have their advice and co-operation of the best Board of Aldermen this city has ever had.

Sincerely,
A. J. LAFAY.

Editor "Daily Examiner"

Dear Sir: Please publish the enclosed letter, cut from yesterday's "Mail and Empire," to show the public how the foolish Protestant Liberals have placed us in the power of the Roman Catholics.

Yours Truly,
L. E. HARPER

To the editor of The Mail & Empire

Sir:—On reading the Quebec Telegraph, my attention was called to an editoial that I beg to enclose to you. As a French-Canadian and a Roman Catholic one of some 3,500,000 others in this Dominion, I would call your attention to the fact that since 1914 to November or December 6th we were governed by a Government composed of probably the ignorant, illiterate and fanatical men of the Province of Ontario. We had to put up with its pernicious and foolish legislation like prohibition and social services Acts, etc., until a general election swept that type of statesman back to the vestry meeting or the Methodist meeting place, where he should have never left — like the bush. For the next four years Ontario is going to be governed by a solid Quebec, with its 65 members, whether you like it or not. Laurier's death was not a death blow to the French-Canadian influence as along with the Hon. Mackenzie King he left Sir Lomer Gouin, the real coming dictator of Canada's future policy, and do not forget this, as before the four years are up you will have many an occasion to remember it. In future one-third of all patronage goes to the French-Canadian. His language is to be recognized from coast to coast, and respected too. We recognize English in the Province of Quebec and give it second place and permit grants to be given to Protestant schools. It would be the best policy for you to understandw once and for all that Ontario's day is over, as you can never hope to enjoy the unity and solidity we always had.

Yours, etc.,
J. B. LEVESQUE.

Only about 25 per cent. of the registered voters in the Division took the trouble to go to the polls.

KEELER'S LAWYERS ASK BAIL REDUCED.

Oil Clerk Fails to Get $10,000 Bonds.

PONTIAC, Dec. 2.—Everett Keeler, the former Standard Oil clerk at Royal Oakr who has been accused of manslaughter in connection with the death of eight persons in a fire on the Ten Mile Road a week ago, has abandoned hope of getting $10,000 bail. His counsel will make an effort Thursday to get the bail reduced.

Keeler is blamed for the mixture of gasoline and kerosene which the Standard Oil of Indiana admitted was sold in Royal Oak. The Ten Mile road fire was caused by Mrs. Victor Waken's pouring what she believed was kerosene on the fire. Seven children and Mrs. Waken's husband burned to death in the house.

Acting on the advice of Prosecutor Blakeslee, of Oakland County, Justice T. Frank Hooley of Ferndale, has dismissed the inquest in the deaths at the Waken home. No arrangements have been made for the funerals of the eight victims.

GOOD-WILL TO MEN.

Once more, Time's restless, running stream,
Brings round the joyous Christmas tide,
And chiming bells again ring out
The glad Evangel, far and wide;
Again that jubilant refrain
Re-echoes over vale and hill,
Glory to God in Heaven above,
To men on earth, peace and good-will.

This song, the Heavenly Minstrels sang,
When Christ was born in stable stall,
A Prince and Saviour come to bring,
Salvation free, for great and small;
Lingers that song's sweet cadence, still
Glory to God, in Heaven above,
To men on earth, Peace and Good-will.

Solace for every aching heart,
And balm for every human pain,
Light, life and love, and hope and joy
Breath in that blest angelic strain,
Oh, may it, with bright Yuletide cheer
And gladness every bosom fill,
Making our lives one lasting song
Of praise to God, to men good-will.

Let all that's bygone, bygone be,
If aught it brought us of regret,
The thoughtless word, and unkind deed,
The wrong, strive to forgive, forget,
Thus for our Lord the way prepare,
That He may come, and reign, until
The whole wide world takes up the song,
Glory to God, to men Good-will.

PUTTING CHRIST IN CHRISTMAS

When Tennyson was a young man, he wrote from Marblethorpe: "I am housed at Mr. Wildman's, an old friend of mine in these parts; he and his wife are two perfectly honest Methodists. When I came I asked her the news, and she replied, "Why Mr. Tennyson, there only one piece of news that I know; that Christ died for all men." And I said to her, "that is old news, and good news' and new news," wherewith the good woman seemed satisfied.

This good news is the heart and burden of every message that is sounded out from the pulpit of the Bethany Tabernacle. Tell us your spiritual needs and we will specialize for your service. On Christmas Sunday at 7 p.m., the theme of last week, "Is our world growing Better or Worse" will be concluded. Hear this question answered by a "Thus saith the Lord."

Cordial Christmas Greetings to every reader.

DISTURBED AREAS NOT CONNECTED.

Volcanic Eruptions and Earthquakes Not Related.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press)—Theories that some scientific relationship might exist between concurrent volcanic activity reported during the month from Mexico, Argentina, Chile, Italy and Japan are discredited by geological authorities.

Dr. Edmund O. Hovey, geologist of the American Museum of Natural History, and a recognized authority on volcanoes and earthquakes, said the areas of disturbance were too widely separated to have any connection.

"The eruptions reported," he said, "are from volcanoes so far apart that any relationship is only a presumption. It is beyond belief that the same cause could exist in each case."

J. Edmund Woodman, professor of gelogy in New York Universiy, took that volcanic eruptions, occuring almost simultaneously in different parts of the world are merely coincidence.

"I believe, however, that concurrent eruptions in Alaska and in the Andes mountains of South America have a certain relationship," he added. "There is mountain building going on in many parts of the world, and there are times when we have a series of disturbances extending for instance, from the tip of Canada to Cape Horn. Doubtless the same mighty forces have a hand in each of such eruptions and this might account for simultaneous outbreaks in Chile and Mexico, but would have no bearing on similar disturbances in Europe or Asia.

The theory of Professor Woodman regarding a probable relationship between disturbances in the same general range of mountains, as for instance the great divide extending down the western edge of North and South America is strengthened by reports received from Buenos Aires, describing eruptions in the Andes, and following within a few hours other reports of disturbances from Mexico.

The activity in the Andes resulted in considerable damage to the villages of Osorno, Union and San Pablo, while the Mexico disturbance was causing grave fears among the natives in the vicinity of Mexico City. Following due south on a meridian of longitude the South American cities are some 1,800 mile east of Mexico City, yet lie in what geologists term the same range or strata.

The causes and effect of eruptions in this particular range, however, are not necessarily found in stratas across the Pacific Ocean, or deep under the Italian Peninsula.

Great internal heat, geologists point out, might begin generating in one locality, and cast its influence over strata bearing a direct relationship or directly connected by gigantic fissures or channels miles under the earth's surface, while volcanoes such as Vesuvius and Etna are believed to receive their energy from sources quite local to their bases.

EXPORT MARKET FOR CLOVER SEED.

Might Be Redoubled Many Times.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—After investigating the conditions that maintain in European counries with respect to seed supplies and markets, Geo. H. Clark, Dominion Seed Commissioner, has reached the conclusion that while there is little prospect of red clover seed might be doubled and redoubled many times without any serious danger of overcrowding the export market for this seed. Mr. Clark, during his tour, reached that has more ideal soil and climatic conditions for the production of clover seed than are to be found in Canada.

Likewise, Mr. Clark would assure Canadian farmers that it will pay to produce orchard grass seed and timothy seed for export sales. The growing of white clover seed is believed by the Seed Commissioner to offer favourable prospects for the Canadian farmer. Most of the white clover seed used in this country comes from Europe. As a commencement to the producing centre is to be established at Kapuskasing in the clay belt of Northern Ontario. One hundred pounds of wild white clover seed has been ordered by the Seed Commissioner to sow in this centre. The seed of this variety is largely used in the old conutry for permanent pastures. The British farmer pays from seventy-five cents to one dollar a pound for seed to use in this way.

THE CRY OF THE CHILDREN.

(London Punch.)

Daddy says he used to stare
(That was very long ago)
Through the sweet-shop windows where,
Ranged on shelves and row by row,
Stood the bottles round and high,
Full of sweets for all to buy.
And a penny
Would buy many
Toffee balls and Pomfret-cakes,
Lumps or rock and almond-bakes,
Barley-sugar sticks and long-
Lasting bulls'-eyes hot and strong,
Brandy snaps and acid drops—
Then a penny
Would buy many,
Oh, so many lollipops.

I suppose it must be true,
But today it only seems
Like the wonders that we do
In our make-belief and dreams;
Still the bottles row on row
Stand as in the long ago;
Buy a penny
Scarce buys any
Toffee balls or Pomfret-cakes,
Lumps of rock or almond-bakes,
Barley-sugar sticks or long-
Lasting bulls'-eyes hot and strong,
Brandy snaps or acid drops—
Now a penny
Scarce buys any,
Hardly any lollipops.

The man who attempts to flatter you is either a fool or hinks you are one.

AN IRISH CHRISTMAS LEGEND

Pile high the turf upon the fire,
And make the cabin bright,
And put no bolt upon the door
This blessed Christmas night;
For if so be they pass this way,
And she in trouble sore,
They'll know an Irish welcome waits
Beyond the open door.

Now place the Christmas candles there—
Put one for every pane—
That they may see the blessed light
A-shining through the rain;
The curfew calls across the sky,
The winds are keening low,
Wo knows but here they'll rest a while,
As on the way they go?

One Christmas Eve, long long ago,
The doors were bolted fast,
And in the down grey light they found
Their footsteps as they passed;
For this the Christmas lights are set,
The doors are open wide,
That in her travail she may know
A place she may abide.

The inns were full, but there is room,
This blessed Christmas night,
For Mary and her Holy Child,
Where shines the Christmas light.
Then set a candle in each pane,
That, passing, they may know,
A welcome waits the Holy Child
Where Christmas lights do glow.

DECLINED TO WITHDRAW.

CALCUTTA, December 23 (Canadian Press). — Lord Reading, the Viceroy of India, to-day declined to withdraw his proclamations against the "Non-Co-operators" and National Volunteers nd those prohibiting seditious meetings. This stand was announced to a native deputation which called upon him to take these steps and to liberate the Moppah leaders already imprisoned. They also suggested as a remedy of the present unrest that a conference of all the important leaders should be called.

CHRISTMAS DAY

YEAR by year it comes to us again, that day of angels, that day ringed round with angels, gladdened by angel-song, and the world for a few short hours pauses, pauses in its ceaseless whirl of activities, its striving and getting, its planning and contriving, and allows the things which are seen and temporal to make room for the things eternal and unseen. From out the thick darkness of an age long fled the star of Bethlehem still shines; between us and that little manger sought out by shepherd and king the crowded centuries have heaped the years; but still can love find the way, and still there are in the world today, as there were 2,000 years ago, as there ever will be, waiting hearts and eyes which have learnt to see. Generation after generation has listened to the old, old story, but each has read into it something new; it means one thing to you and perhaps another to me; some take as historical facts details which to minds differently attuned may rather seem truths unfathomable wrapped in shining symbol. The method of apprehension will not matter very greatly so long as our seeking souls attain to the light behind, and through the humanity of Christ re ach out to Very God of Very God.—"Overseas."

TAYLOR AND TURNER FOR MAYORALTY

Other Nominations To-night.

Nominations for the City Council will be received to-night at the City Hall between 7 and 8 o'clock.

Nomination for Mayor, Utilities Commission and Board of Education this morning produced the above list of candidates, who must file their qualifications with City Clerk Armstrong by 9 p.m. on Saturday. As usual this annual appointment of directors of the city's own business, so to speak, attracted a large attendance of ratepayers who listened at the conclusion of the hour for nominations to the addresses of the prospective candidates.

W. H. Taylor.

Ex-Ald. Taylor's speech was the essence of brevity. "As a great many ratepayers have pressed me to stand for the Mayoralty election I have decided to accept nomination and let the people decide on January 2nd."

Ald. J. J. Turner.

In a comprehensive address, Ald. Turner discussed the various departments of the civic administration and concluded with the offer of his experience and his services and with an appeal for the support of those whom he said he would not canvass personally.

"I had thought at one time that the Mayoralty might come by acclamation," said Mr. Turner, "There is no reason why it should It's the prerogative of every citizen to aspire to the Mayor's chair, but it would be an honour to be elected by acclamation."

Mr. Turner stated that whatever the result might be there would be no hard feelings between himself and Mr. Taylor. "You should use your good judgment as to which is the better man for the position of Mayor of Peterborough. If you decide that it is Mr. Taylor I shall be the first to congratulate him. If it is myself I shall be glad of the honour."

Not Canvassing.

"I am personally opposed to canvassing the electors,' Mr. Turner said, giving the explanation which has appeared in the Examiner over his signature. "If you think that I can serve the city and you elect me to this position I shall be happy to serve you to the best of my ability. You may rest assured that if you elect me to the position of Mayor you will find me pulling on the oars at all times. And the man that is pulling on the oars has no chance of rocking the boat."

After a cursory reference to the various departments that manage the city's business Mr. Turner dealt with the City Council. He pointed out that the Council had no control over the administration of justice, the Queen Mary hospital, the Utilities Commission, Public Library, the Police Commission, Suburban Roads Commission, Mothers' Allowance Commission and some bodies. The expenditure by these commissions was about $100,000 and that sum was increased by $50,000 in interest charges, leaving approximately $100,000 over which the Council had direct control. Ald. Turner showed how this money was distributed and he also explained why certain costs had increased in recent years.

The Hunter Street Bridge.

Referring to the Hunter street bridge, Ald. Turner said that before he entered the Council an agreement had been made with the Quaker Oats company to build a high level bridge in consideration of their rebuilding in Peterborough. The plans had been accepted and decided upon before he entered the Council. Estimates of the cost did not exceed $300,000 and the city had $315,000 which in the judgment of the architect was enough to complete the work.

"Well, it cost more than that," Ald. Turner remarked. "One reason was the foundations. The profile did not carry the foundation deep enough to support the structure. When the ground was opened up the base of the foundation was not located where the plans had indicated. The bridge could not be built on sand, and consequently the excavation had to be deepened. So the cost of the bridge was increased $100,000 by the foundations, and that item would have been the same whether the bridge had been built by contract or the cost plus system. Other reasons were the cost of materials, cement and steel and other things used in the constructions and labour, which altogether ran the price up another $100,000. All things considered the bridge perhaps did not cost any more than it should have cost under the circumstances. We have a good bridge. It cost more than we expected, but things generally cost more at that time and we can't help it."

Mr. Turner said that he read in the October number of an engineering journal the facts about a bridge built in North Carolina at the same time the Hunter street bridge was begun and finished. It was of three spans and smaller than Peterborough's bridge. The estimated cost of the North Carolina bridge was $425,000 and the actual final cost was $800,000.

G. H. Duncan.

Ex-Mayor George H. Duncan, one of the three former chief magistrates who is running for the Utilities Commission, spoke briefly. "I think my record in the Council for sixteen yars should stand for me on this occasion," he declared, after paying the usual respects to the mover and seconder of his nomination. "There are two other good men besides myself and it is from our record in the Council you will have to choose." During his two years in the velvet chair, 1918 and 1919, he said he had to guide the city through some stormy seas and the returned soldier problem was a weighty one at that time.

Offering $5,000 to any man that would come forward and accuse him of graft during his years of office, he declared: "I've tried since I've been in the Council to serve the people in a public-sprited manner. This position is what I call a nice job. It's a position I would take pleasure in filling." Ex-Mayor Duncan said he filled the position after the death of Mr. W. H. Moore for five months and found the work much to his liking. "I want to thank you for your past favours and ask your support this time if you think I have earned it," he said in conclusion.

W. H. Bradburn.

With a delicate touch of irony, Ex-Mayor W. H. Bradburn drew a laugh from the benches at the outset of his short but "snappy" outline of what he was "going after" if elected to the Utilities Commission. "I'm glad to hear Ex-Mayor Duncan say it's a nice job. I thought it was fairly hard. However he was in there and he ought to know. "I'm not here to find fault with the Utilities Commission for what they did last summer," he declared, but he went on to point out that there was an increase of 82 per cent. in the water rates and outside of this the city hydrant rate was increased $75, "which somebody has to pay."

If elected he said he would demand a full auditor's statement of the Commission's business the same as the city's annual statement, with every item accounted for. At present he said there was only one page in the back of the book. "Whose business is that?" asked Robert Hicks of the Utilities Commission.

"Well I suppose it's the Commission's business," replied the candidate.

"We don't have anything to do with the audit. We have absolutely nothing to do with it. The Council looks after that."

Ald. Crowe at this point stated that the Council had discussed the matter and a full audit was arranged for.

Joseph Wearing.

Joseph Wearing and J. W. Worth, candidates for the School Board, availed themselves of an invitation to speak, and both took a stand for technical schools, although both were opposed to expenditure now on a separate technical school building. Mr. Wearing stated that he had taught for several years and was also a supervisor of education for eight years, and he outlined his other qualifications. He said he was solely out for election because he believed his qualifications enabled him to do valuable work on the Board.

J. W. Worth.

Mr. Worth asked to be returned to carry on his efforts for a technical school and he said he favoured beginning with a combined school and later, if finances permitted and success attended the school, have a separate technical school.

ENJOYABLE FUNCTION HELD AT PRINCE OF WALES' SCHOOL

The members of the Women Teachers' Guild were entertained to tea on Friday evening in the Prince of Wales' School by the combined staffs of the Collegiate Institute and the Prince of Wales' School. The spacious kindergarten room looked very artistic with its decorations, in keeping with the Christmas season. The committee in charge are to be highly complimented. After the usual business of the Guild was transacted, during which Misses Lillian Scott and Olga Johnston, as representatives from the Teachers' Guild to the Local Council of Women, gave interesting reports, a very enjoyable programme was rendered, consisting of readings by Misses Wilson and Wilder, vocal solos by Misses Scott and Ellen Eagleson, and a piano duet by Misses Olga Johnston and Hazel Moffatt.

CURLING

The first games of the season were played this afternoon on the two east side ices. Angus McIntosh was laying out the pair on the west side this afternoon, and will have them ready for to-night. To-morrow the centre rinks will be dressed up and the whole works will be ready Saturday night and on the Christmas holiday.

The little difficulty about the rings is being cleared up. Herb. Martin reported last night that Andy Webb had nothing to do with them, but that George Stephenson took them down to Hastings last March, where they are probably kicking around in George's garage. His membership has been signed up, and Mr. Stevenson is expected here to-night with the missing rings for the centre sheets.

REVISED SCHEDULE

MONTREAL, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Pres).—Replying to statements that the Dominion Coal Company and other coal companies associated with it in the so-called Montreal wage agreement have violated the provisions of the industrial disputes act by posting notices of a revised schedule of rates, effective January 1st next, the management of the coal companies, through D. H. McDougall vice-president of the British Empire Steel Corporation, makes emphatic denial of any violation of the act. . . .

WOULD ESTABLISH NOW AN AMERICAN WORKERS' REPUBLIC.

Delegates Meet To-Day to Organize Workers' Party.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—The unification of all revolutionary elements in the ranks of workers of the United States was contemplated by Radical delegates gathered here to-day for a convention called for the purpose of organizing a Workers' Party of America. It was semi-officially stated that these elements might be defined as "those accepting leadership of the Third Internationale in the struggle to establish an American Workers' Republic."

SHELTER CHILDREN WERE ENTERTAINED

GUESTS OF GRACE CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL AT CHRISTMAS EVENT.

The members of Grace Church Sunday School held their annual Christmas entertainment last evening, to which the children from the Shelter were invited. There was a large attendance, and a most enjoyable evening was spent, with gifts for all from the Christmas tree. Rev. H. W. Young acted as chairman, and a musical programme, arranged by Miss Thelma Paxman, was rendered, as follows: Opening speech, Mr. Arthur Kingdon; school and primary choruses: 'Songs of Joy," "Jesus Loves Me," "Away in a Manger," and "Living for Jesus Here"; instrumental selections by the Misses Vera Caldwell and Mildred Johnston; recitations, Eva Davis, Emma Trollop, Wanda Horton, Reggie Kingdon, Rae Parnell, Isobel Weatherstone and Bob Kingdon; vocal solo, Miss Soule; dialogue, the Boys' Class and Gwendoline and Rae Parnell; vocal duet, Verna and Vera Calvert; drill by the Girls' Class; pantomime and performing dolls by girls' classes.

Miss Eva Elliott acted as accompanist for the different numbers.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT SLIGHTLY TWISTED

TWO CHRISTMAS TREES STOLEN FROM YARD OF LOCAL RESIDENCE

What might have been a manifestation of the Christmas spirit, slightly twisted, or perhaps just a plain case of petty thievery, was the action of the persons responsible for the vanishing from view of two Christmas trees from the property of their purchaser last night. The gentleman of the house had purchased two trees, one for his own use and one for a little chap whose people are unable to afford any extra expense at this season of the year. They were leaning up against his back fence until the hour of midnight last night, and thereafter were spirited away. The gentleman hopes that they are to be used as gifts for someone unable to purchase a tree, but has his doubts. However, he is going to replace the two trees, and the little lad will have his tree, despite any number of midnight prowlers.

URGES RATIFICATION OF THE IRISH TREATY

TELEGRAMS POUR IN TO THE DAIL IN SUPPORT OF PACT

DUBLIN, December 23. Canadian Press. — Telegrams to members of the Dail poured in to-day from many constituencies urging ratification of the Irish treaty.

The message of Clare County Council, yesterday, urging De Valera to work for the ratification, was followed to-day by a telgram from Navan, its advising representative, to support the treaty.

Repudiating the right of Mary McSwiney to speak in her name, Mrs. Connolly, Dublin, in a message says she is satisfied the treaty secures that freedom which her husband died in 1916 to win.

VARNISH IGNITED

Only the presence of mind of Mrs. (Dr.) A. H. Allen averted a dangerous fire at her home, 597 Charlotte Street, last night, when a can of varnish in a bedroom became ignited by the heat from an electric heater being used to dry the varnish.

Miss Allen was varnishing a bedroom floor, and the quart of varnish which was sitting in the centre of the floor burst into a flame that rose to the ceiling, blackened everything in the room, and ignited the freshly varnished floor, while Miss Allen was absent from the room.

With unusual presence of mind, Mrs. (Dr) Allen, who was ill in a room across the hall, smothered the fire with a wet blanket, and in the opinion of the Fire Chief averted an explosion of the can of varnish, and in any event saved the contents of the room from destruction.

When the Fire Department responded to a telephone call at 11.15, their services were not required.

SCARLET FEVER IS PREVALENT IN CITY

DIPHTHERIA HAS BEEN FAIRLY WELL STAMPED OUT

Scarlet fever has now replaced diphtheria as the most prevalent epidemic in the city, and there are far more cases of scarlet fever in Peterboro than diphtheria, a situation which was quite reversed a few weeks ago. Diphtheria, however, after a long period of prevalence, has been fairly well stamped out but scarlet fever carries on with unabating strength. Of 72 houses under quarantine at present, at l ast 50 of these are quarantined for fever.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, M.O.H., blames the spread of the epidemic to-day to the numerous cases the health authorities discover, which have never been reported, and in which not only have members of the family gone about freely spreading the disease, but even those suffering from the fever itself are abroad.

Breaches of Act.

The Medical Officer said several distinct cases of breaches of the Public Health Act in failing to report infectious cases, have come to his notice, and he is prepared, if investigation warrants it, to bring the offending parties before the police magistrate. One case, in particular, he said, was a flagrant violation — in which a young lady left a quarantined home in this city, and went to Campbellford. Dr. Young is investigating this case. The young lady claims that she was inoculated before leaving Peterboro.

The Queen Mary Hospital is filled in the scarlet fever section, owing to the long confinemnt of from 4 to 6 weeks in scarlet fever, and only cases of a serious nature are being admitted. There are empty cots in the diphtheria ward, however.

MOTORLESS PLANE IN RECORD FLIGHT.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press—News has reached the London Air Station, Croydon, via Amsterdam, of the "world's record" flight in a motorless aeroplane.

Launching himself from a hill in Ge. ny, 1.000 feet high, Herr Klemperer, flying an Aachen glider kept his motorless machine in the air for no less than 21 minutes. During this time, by skillful manoeuvring in an upward air current, he actually rose above his starting point, and the ground where he alighted at the end of the 21 minutes flight was only 30 feet lower than that which the flight began.

The previous "world's record" for a motorless flight was 15 minutes.

It is understood that this and ober German gliders will shortly be seen in Britain, and the success of these machines has induced British aviator to take an active interest in he problem of gliding.

The ultimate object is to produce an aeroplane with an engine say, 2½ horse power that would make flying as popular as motor-cycling.

FINANCIAL AND MARKETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Stock market was listless at the opening of to-day's session. Money brokers predicted continuance of firm call and time rates over Christmas holidays. Equipments were featured by American Locomotive, which added 1 1-4 points to its recent steady rise. Steels, Rails, Oils, Motors, Leathers and Chemicals were lower. American Writing Paper Preferred was the weakest of specialties, falling almost two points.

Trading in the first half of the session was the lightest volume of any day in several weeks. Contrary to predictions, however, money rates eased. Call loans opened and extended over Christmas at 5 1-2 per cent and htis quotations was lowered to five per cent. before noon. Oils of lower grades, Leathers, Coppers and minor Motors and Equipments were singled out for pressure at reactions of one to three points. Popular Steels and Equipments were not affected by the reaction and the only change among Rails was a decline of 1 1-4 points for Atlantic Coast Line. Market rallied moderately at noon when buying of Mexican Petroleum caused shorts to cover in entire Oil division.

The market drifted aimlessly during the mid-session, the only noteworthy interest being the sudden decline in Chicago and North-Western of 3½ points on moderate offerings. Among other leaders, especially Oils, Equipments and Utilities, the trend was towards increased steadiness.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The domestic grain market was without any special change to note yesterday. There is nothing new in the flour situation. The undertone to the mill feed market remains strong, and a fair trade is passing in rolled oats. The trade in baled hay is quiet. A good steady business is passing in all grades of eggs. There is no improvement in the condition of the potato market. Prices are about steady in the butter market, and the cheese market is Corn and Oats, like Wheat were given an upward impulse by signing of bill for Russian relief. After opening unchanged to 1-8 off, May 54 3-8 to 54 5-8, Corn market scored a fair general advance. Oats started unchanged to 3-8 higher, May 38 5-8 and then continued to harden.

These are examples of work done by veterans at present out of employment, and include some exquisite carving. There is a work-box of cedar wood, done in the chipped conventionalized palm effect; a morris table in oak-leaf desgn, with slim, well-turned standards, a work-table, in dull antique finish, with carved top and sides, and dainty curved art-metal holders for cut-flower vases. The samples exhibited are moderately priced, and the returned men interested are open for orders of any sort for hall and jardine stands for boxes of any sort, or small bookcases. DAIL ADJOURNMENT IN FAVOR OF TREATY

LIKELY TO WEAKEN CASE OF OBSTRUCTIONISTS

LONDON, Dec. 23:—(Canadian Press)—Adjournment of the Dail Eirenan and delay in the vote on the Irish agreement is commented in the Evening Standard as possibly advantageous to supporters of the freaty and not unwelcome to ratificationists. It expresses the opinion that time is likely to weaken the intellectual case for rejection of treaty.

DESERTS HER HUSBAND

DETROIT, Dec. 23.—Eight years ago Antonio De-Angelo, 29 years old, met Olga, a Swedish girl. She liked his Italian smile and his songs and he liked her cooking; so they were married. Then, Antonio says, his wife ran off, going to North Dakota from their home in Richmond, Wis.

For the sake of his children he said he visited various cities and finally found Olga and brought her back. Everything went well for a while, and then he forgot to sing songs and smile and Olga forgot how to cook.

Antonio went to a justice of the peace. The justice told Antonio, he told Detectives Radtke, Fairbairn and Nelson that it would not be against the law for Antonio to take his youngest son, Antonio, Jr., and run away. Antonio wanted freedom. He came to detroit with the 5-year-old boy, convinced that the laws of Minnesota could not reach him in Detroit. The justice had said so.

When the three detectives of the Italian squad went to a rooming house a 1909 Fort Street East and got Antonio out of bed, he refused to be arrested.

"The judge up home told me I could not be arrested," he asserted. But the officers convinced him when they showed him a warrant charging abandonment, issued by the same justice, who, Antonio claims, advised him to go away.

It took a lot of explaining, but finally Antonio came along to headquarters. His boy, Antonio, Jr., when he saw his father being led away, crawled into the arms of the woman at whose house the father and son have been living and cried for "grandma."

"I should go back and I shouldn't. First this judge says go away and forget it. Now he writes you and tells you to tell me for him that he wants to see me quick. Maybe I shouldn't go," he suggested with a shrug of his shoulders. And then he smiled. "Well, you tell that judge I won't go back," he said and so Antonio is going to fight ex-tradition. "I don't like Swedish cooking," was his explanation.

Shore Leave by Jack Lait

THEY say a sailor has a sweetheart in every port. That may be so, but it doesn't look it. Anyway, New York is regarded as a port of some considerable importance, and in New York the sailors wander about in stag groups, getting dizzy looking at the tall buildings, about the most sweetheartless and forsaken outfit that the eye may classify.

I have seen them especially on Sunday afternoons, for week-end leave is most popular on the liners and the cruisers and destroyers hanging about the harbor and the Hudson. On Sunday afternoons the streets, even famed Broadway, are relatively deserted. Then the uniformed jackies stand out more conspicuously, and their lonesomeness is most striking. Then they are noted, leaning against lamp-posts, lounging on corners, half-heartedly going in and out of the cheap beaneries.

Sailors rarely have money to amount to anything. They are marked by their livery of the sea, a warning that advertises to the great body of girls a hug in Central Park and a bus ride, but no cocktails in demi-tasses, no papier-mache cabarets, no taxis, no audible shows, no roof garden ritzing or roadhouse rough stuff. And in New York such notice automatically eliminates exactly 81 per cent of the potential femininity.

There are plenty of nice, honest, respectable and eligible girls who do not crave giddy dissipations. But they are girls who expect "serious intentions," and nobody takes a sailor seriously. So the butterflies don't want them and the grubs won't have them, and the sailors stand first on one foot and then on the other, light fag after fag, exchange lies, drag out the shore leave they coveted so expectantly, and conduct their dogs back to their ships to tell the stay-in-boats what a larkey time they had.

Now and then, though, a jackie does score a "pick-up."

And if there was one whom you'd bet on to land, I venture you'd pick Merri Encil.

Merriweather Encil, Jr., was the sole and single son of the best known citizen of New Essex, New Hampshire. The current edition of a long line of Anglo-Saxon stock, he had the inches and the complexion and the eyes of the Northern gods. He had been carefully—yea, exactingly—reared to be a trader, an Episcopalian, a successor to his father and a credit to the town.

But somewhere in the Encil ancestry was the sea-going streak. Many of his forebears had been navigators. And so Merri got gooseflesh at the prospect of negotiating real estate deals, and chafed at the routine of small-town New England affairs. He was not rebellious or insubordinate, and it is likely that he would have bent to the life laid out for him had it not been for the war. When that came, Merri waited no longer, but enlisted in the navy. And he did service, such as fell his way.

When he was discharged, though, the salt had bitten too thoroughly into his veins. His absence abroad had given him an independence beyond his years and had given him the courage to talk back, even to his father. And when Merri made known that he proposed to follow the sea, he argued it out with his dad as man to man, stood pat and walked out. That caused an estrangement, if not a rupture. The old man hadn't threatened to "cut him off with a dime," or told him to "never darken my door again." But there was no weekly exchange of letters. Merri was to all intents and practical purposes an orphan dependent on his pay as a sailor before the smokestack, or whatever has taken the place of the mast as a modern figure for metaphor.

Thus he had all the financial, social and economic attributes of the common sailor, without losing or being able to lose or being particularly eager to lose the breeding and the charm of a hearty, healthy, high-schooled youngster. On shipboard they knew him as a bird who laughed and pranked, but who would fight. He mingled with the crew on even terms without ever being quite one of them. Merri was no snob, but neither was he a slob.

Like every sailor, like every man, he liked the girls. He was no sordid dive roisterer, seeking any kind of woman anywhere. He was romantic and selective. His romance ran to cute little ones, his selection ran right with it. He didn't sigh for duchesses or crave debutantes. He would give an eye, though, to a snappy cutie, without first looking up her family tree or her pater's rating. He never flitted coarsely and never approached a strange woman with familiarities. But he stood where he could see and be seen, and if he saw what pleased his eye, and if what pleased his eye saw back and was pleased, Merri was not against walking a step or two to hyphenate, so to speak, the pleases.

Flirting is mostly done that way and in that spirit. The crude "Haven't I met you somewhere?" is hokum, and a self-respecting white-wing wouldn't be guilty of it—only an occasional millionaire or foreign nobleman attempts it. The out-and-out wink is cut. But an eyelid may just happen to quiver; a man give a passing girl the up-and-down (nowadays it's usually the down-and-up), and keep right on walking; then he may turn, and she may turn, too; and if he turns at the same moment when she turns and their eyes meet, then it has clicked. Then the man is justified, if he seeks that sort of justification, in an about-face and double-quick, and he may raise his hat when he overtakes the girl, who will be walking slowly or having trouble picking her pretty way through sidewalk traffic, and he may say "Hello!" and fall in beside her, and there need be no camouflage.

Merri's technique operated in that manner to bring him up to the elbow of a nifty little blonde along the Central Park wall. She had a retrousse noselet, round and appealing eyes and a tricky figure. She wore a becoming sweater and an intriguing li'l outdoor hat and walking boots. Obviously, she was neither an upper-crust flapper nor a working girl. Merri "pegged" her for a chorus pony. He didn't miss it very far—only about a month.

She took Merri's arm after a couple of blocks. Somehow, sailors' girls always take their arms. She called him "Mr. Sailor Man," and he named her "Cuddles" before even they had sat down on a bench.

Merri was a mixer of experience. He had taught himself to be not too impulsive. He had felt his blood shift gears over slue-eyed Slovaks, seraphic Scandinavians, ribald Russians, chic Chinks and flaming French. But Cuddles got to him faster and harder than any girl he had ever known before. He found that she cramped his style badly. The regular run of small talk, the insinuating progression of ideas known to work the stray acquaintanceship up to a rapid verdict on how the parties "stood" with one another, he side-stepped.

They sat for two minutes, speechless. Then she sighed, a nervous, quick, spasmodic little sigh. And he sighed, a deep-drawn, eloquet big sigh. And they turned eyes toward each other's eyes. And both knew something was happening—had happened. And he said:

"A—a lot of cars pass by here."

And she answered:

"Uhum—it's a one-way street. I live on this street."

She lived on this street? On Central Park West, in the upper Seventies? Rents along the one side which was inhabited were drawn, eloquent, big sigh. And they turned eyes toward each of a glance up and down the avenue, huge apartment structures of granite and whitestone met his look. At the doors stood liveried doormen. Over the entrances to the curb were costly canopies. The street had the smell of high costs.

"I live over there," she picked it up, "in that apartment hotel."

He looked at that one, individually. It was up to the rest in everything, and beyond most of them in most things.

"Well, I hope you can afford it," he half laughed and half sighed.

"Don't lose any sleep about it, Mr. Sailor Man," she half sighed and half laughed. "My bills are all paid."

Something about the emphasis she had put on the passive case in which she declared the bills were paid, rather than phrasing it, "I pay my bills," hit Merri's ear like a discord.

"Yes?" he asked. "Who pays 'em?"

That was a blunt question. He wanted a frank answer, and he hoped it wouldn't be the answer he feared it might be.

"We're taught not to mention names," she replied.

He sat for a considerable time, rolling that answer over and over in his mind. It accounted for her prosperous appearance, then; it explained the girl of young beauty and palpable "of-the-people" origin, at leisure in mid-afternoon of a work-day, strolling for air on the yellow-back line of the park parallelogram, flirting with a sailor. Merri nursed no illusions about the social stratum to which the seaman was assigned. When a woman listened to him—in uniform—he had her placed as one of several sorts—this one was of that sort, eh?

She Took Merri's Arm After a Couple of Blocks.

"That's too bad," he said.

"What's too bad—for what?"

"Oh, nothing. It's none of my business. You've known me half an hour, and I'm not going to start in rewriting your life or passing any uncalled-for opinions as to this and that. But I don't mind a bit telling you this hurts me."

"Don't be a sap," she half whispered. "I'm nothing to you. You never saw me before. It's going to bother you a whole lot, when you're out in the middle of some ocean that I even couldn't pronounce, and I'm up there in one of the dozens of flats in one of the thousands of buildings in one of the towns where you once took a walk, isn't it?"

"Maybe," he said. "There are millions of girls in millions of places, but to everybody somewhere there is one in one place, and as he shuts his eyes and takes in the whole world, that one of all the hundreds of millions, in that one isolated spot in the billions of acres that hold all sorts of dwellings, from dives to palaces—that one in that spot outweighs all the others bound together in all the rest of the world.

"And I suppose there is one, some place, who'll shine for you when you're miles away, and there are lots of dames, or senoritas, or ma'mselles, or houris, or geishas right close?"

"There is."

"And where will she be?"

"Across this street, in that building."

She caught her breath midway in her windpipe. Bromidic as such answers may be to reading, eavesdropping, listening-in or listening-on audiences, they may still carry the suspense, the surprise, the climax and those other ingredients which compose drama to those who say them and to those unto whom they are said. Cuddles liked Merri on sight. And his demeanor had been a pleasant shock to her. And what he had now said jarred her and tickled her at once.

"Go 'way, Mr. Sailor Man," she told him. "This quick work shows itself up."

"Why? Don't you believe I care for you?"

"'Course not. How could you?"

"Don't you care for me?"

"I—well, that is, I"——

"Don't you care for me? Talk up; I won't take advantage of your answer. Don't you care for me—I mean a great deal?"

The girl hung her pert head.

Then she lifted and dropped it, slowly, gravely.

Merri's hand sneaked over and found her dimpled, soft, girlish hand, which had perhaps been born for work, but had cheated it, and which had certainly been born to be held in a big, strong hand, and was perfect for it.

"Then you can believe, can't you, that I love you?" he said, in her ear.

She lifted her face.

"Sailor Man," she breathed, "you've hit me a wallop so hard that I'm taking the count. This must be it, because I've heard a lot about it and never believed it, and now I feel it and don't remember anything like it ever before.

"I'm eighteen. And I'm an old-timer. I've played the riffraff around road shows, the come-and-go oilcans around Broadway revues, and the silk-lined real class on the midnight roofs. When I say I've played 'em, I mean I've been a kid who had a yen for fast cars and whoopy parties and crepe lingerie and a few stones.

"I haven't been bad—not so good, but not so bad. By that I mean I haven't been a gold-digger or a grifter or a badger-worker or a set-up. I never in my life answered mash notes or strange 'phone calls, and, until this hour, never flirted or was flirted with. Believe me or not—I guess it sounds watery.

"My ideas about some things haven't always been just what the Sunday editorials and the advice to young girls in a large city laid down. Some of the items of life which have appealed to some of the big preachers and great writers and highbrow thinkers as vital and all-decisive in a girl's life haven't hit me as being the most important things, at all.

"My mother was a showgirl. My father was an architect. My father got dippy about my mother in a cafe. My mother never cared a hatful of ozone about my dad. But they stuck it along together for years. My father used to teach me how to eat with a fork and how to read the English language intelligently and how to do what I thought was right and tell the rest of the world to take the gate. And he taught me that a slight corruption of one of the three graces had crept in through constant misusage. The world had Volsteaded those three sacred injunctions into 'Faith, Hope and Chastity.' He hadn't any prejudice against the third, but that third at one time had been billed as 'the greatest of these,' and that couldn't quite stand up under the new statute. He thought charity was still the greatest of these, even after it ceased to be named as being even one of these.

"So he took more pains to try and make me cheerful than he did to try and make me careful, and he cautioned me more against the pitfalls of false pride and fake prejudice than against the devil's temptations that lurk in the alcoholic content and in the velour landaulet.

"Maybe he did me a lot of harm. Maybe he didn't. Maybe I misunderstood just what he was shooting at, and maybe I got exactly his slant on ethics, morals, etiquette, political economy and feminine diplomacy.

"Anyway, I have found this: My dad had some great ideas, but he was a democrat in a republican world. The whole population seemed divided between a small gang of outlaws anxious to drag me far past where he ever dared to fear I'd venture, and the rest a committee on the whole to see that the book ideas were enforced to the letter—or thumbs down.

"I didn't string with the social bolsheviki to the limit. And I didn't scare as hard at the lily-pures as I might have. I sort of picked my own way along, falling for what I thought I had a right to do with myself what I wanted as long as it didn't cost anybody else anything—and discarding what offended my sensibilities, my conscience (such as it was) and my individual taste (such as that was).

"Now, we don't have to do a Kellerman into all the details. I've told you a few things, and you can guess the rest according to your best lights. But I'll make you a proposition, Mr. Sailor Man.

"Across the street I have as giddy and gaudy a little layout as any girl in New York could ask. I don't have to work, I don't have to worry. I have a couple of thousand in the bank, besides, and a few trinkets that Uncle Levinsky wouldn't turn up his nose at. I have youth, I have a fair flock of looks, I have a lot to look forward to and I'm ready never to look back. Besides, what's a whole lot more, I think I love you.

"Now, I'm willing and ready to go across the street—with you—and pack, and beat it—also with you. I ask nothing. The rest is up to you."

Merri sat, silent. His hand released her hand and found his own, and he dovetailed all his fingers in between the fingers of the other hand. He scraped his heel on the paving. He looked at her again for just the infant child of a second, out of the farthest corner of his near eye. Then he looked down again. Then he started to speak and decided it was not yet time. At last he spoke.

"Good-by, Cuddles," he said.

She looked at him sharply, intensely.

"That's it, then?" she asked, trying to keep the quaver out of her voice.

"It has to be," said he. "You've told me all about yourself. I've told you nothing about myself. I come from New Hampshire."

"What has that got to do with it? I wouldn't care if you came from Tasmania."

"If I came from Tasmania, everything would be different. But I come from New Hampshire. If you'd asked me ten minutes ago, I'd have told you I hated New Hampshire—and I thought I did. Why, I ran away from it—couldn't stand it—had no patience for it or sympatsy with it. But I guess New Hampshire is in my blood. The new third grace isn't new there, and it has run the old one right into the sea and drowned it."

"Just a second," she said. "Have you always lived by it and up to it?"

"I? Oh, no—it was written for women."

"Did you ever read that paragraph, in the same book, I believe, which had something to do with lifting up a certain girl, and throwing stones, and sinning no more?"

"Yes. But I was taught, like most Christians, to do as the superintendent of the Sunday school ruled, not according to all that had been ruled before, by holier teachers. I thought I resented it. I thought I hated it. I thought I was running away from it. But I wasn't. Good-bye, Cuddles. Good luck to you."

And he rose.

"Good-bye," said she. "Good-bye, Sailor Man," and she rose. "Some time, when you're out at sea, will you think of one girl of the millions, in one flat of the millions, who may be thinking of you?"

"I'll think of you often," he said. "But not at sea. I'm going back to New Hampshire—where I belong."

BUSY CHILD IS GOOD CHILD.

At best prohibition and punishment will restrain a child only so long as the commands resound in his ears, or his skin tingles from the punishment, says Mothers' Magazine. His memory is short simply because his instincts and impulses surge up in him and obliterate all the commands that have been given him, and the whippings he has received. But if he has got into the habit of going down to his workshop when he has leisure to make something in which he is interested he will not be tempted to cut and mar and paint the piano. If he knows he can go to a public playground and have good games with his fellows, he will not wish to slide down the bannister or use the furniture to make a train of cars. U. S. TURF WORLD IS STARTLED BY LANG.

Has Won Three Races on Two Successive Days.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—By Canadian Press.)—Canada may furnish the United States turf with its leading rider for the 1921 season. Recent developments point strongly to little Chick Lang, son of a Hamilton, Ont., fish dealer, for that coveted honor. Also in the running is Marinelli, whose father is an Italian cobbler in Newark, N. J.

Lang has startled the local turf world by riding three winners on two successive days. He has won nine races within five days and heads the list here. Marinelli, starting riding the same day with mounts not carefully chosen, has been lucky to get home in front just once. Marinelli's record for the season is 119 winners. Lang's is 116. Lang is moee eagerly sought by horsemen than Marinelli because he brings a five-pound allowance in selling and claiming races and a three-pound allowance in handicaps. Lang has had his employer, James Arthur, the same who developed Rodriguez, Ritchcreek and L. Morris busy selecting the most desirable mounts from among the many bids.

Marinelli has virtually been forced to make his own engagements. He came with orders to report to Trainer Albert Simons until the return of his manager, Trainer Tommy Griffin, from California. Simons has Cotilletti and Gantner to look out for. Marinelli has necessarily been deserving of only third consideration in the Simons establishment.

Arthur has refused $10,000 for Lang's contract. The yoongster can ride at ninety-eight pounds today. Unless he grows like a weed he ought to be good for at least four years more as a lightweight. Arthur has not decided whether Lang will be sent to Mexico with the division of the stable which is intended for racing at Mexico City during January and February. If he does there will be a gloomy army of Lang followers here.

POLICE ORDER HITS GAMBLING.

Employers of Men Found in Raided Establishments To Be Notified.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—All business places in the city hereafter will be potified if any of their employes are found in gambling institutions when raids are made, according to Dr. James W. Inches, police commissioner.

The commissioner decided on this procedure following a favorable report from the Cadillac Motor Car Co., after this action had been taken in the case of employes of that institution who were found in a Michigan avenue gambling house.

Due to defects in the law police find it difficult to put gambling institutions out of business. The gamblers are aware of this condition, and as a result of gambling places of all descriptions are springiug up in the downtown section "like mushrooms."

Employes Chagrined

Charles W. Carson, industrial manager of the Cadillac company, wrote Inspector John A. MacLennan as follows:

"All the men who were taken in the raid at 4229 Michigan Avenue a few days ago have been interviewed by myself and the superintendents of the plant. Practically all of them have admitted that they were there to bet on 'the ponies.' Most of them are mightily chagrined to think that they got caught and all of them vow this is their last offense.

"We have given each man one more opportunity to make good on the job on his promise not to repeat the offense. I posted a notice in our factory covering the matter, a copy of which I am enclosing for you.

"I am sure the whole proceeding has had a very salutary effect on our organization. I appreciate your promptness in this matter very much."

Man Who Bets is Loser

The notice which Mr. Carson has posted in the Cadillac plant follows in part:

We all know that the only persons benefited by gambling are those who conduct the gambling house, the man who bets always comes out poorer than when he went in.

This notice is to state that in the future any man who works for the Cadillac Motor Car Co., and who is found using his money for gambling purposes, will be relieved of his job immediately and the job given to some one who needs the money to buy food, clothing and the other necessaries of life.

Also, if we find any one with a racing form in his possession while in our plant, we will assume that he has it for no good purpose and deal with him accordingly.

Explains Difficulty

In explaining to the commissioner the difficulty the police are having with gambling institutions which take bets on horse races, William P. Rutledge, superintendent, says:

"The elimination of handbooks is a very difficult problem, since the courts have ruled that the law prohibiting the sale of form sheets posting odds on horses and having the same shipped through the mails was unconstitutional.

"The courts have ruled that men can not be prosecuted for accepting bets on horses which are assumed to be racing, unless the officer can prove by an eye-witness that the horse actually raced on that day and at the time and place mentioned on the betting ticket, which may be at New Orleans, Havana or Tijuana."

CITY LEAGUERS MEET SATURDAY

ALL CLUBS NOT REPRESENTED AT MEETING TO DRAW UP SCHEDULE.

At the City Hockey League meeting last night, Lakeviews were drawn to play C.G.E. in the first game of the schedule. This left Wm. Hamilton A.A. to meet Bankers in the second contest of the opening double bill. It was decided to open the championship race on Wednesday, January 11th.

The president and first vice-president of the League and the manager of the Lakeviews attended the meeting last night.

It has since been learned that the decisions of the meeting are not acceptable to all the clubs, and in view of this situation the President has called another meeting, to be held at the Chamber of Commerce on Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

ONE OF WONDERS OF SCIENTIFIC WORLD

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Orville Wright, pioneer airman, who made the world's first successful airplane flight on December 17 eighteen years ago at Kitty Hawk, N.C., recently declared that the progress made in the development of power-propelled planes since that time was one of the wonders of the scientific world.

"Flight seems so easy today," he said in a statement issued at the offices of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, 'that one naturally wonders at the long delay in its accomplishment. Yet eighteen years ago because of thousands of failures, flying was classed with perpetual motion and the few who expressed belief in its possibilities were looked upon as mentally unbalanced.

"Up to 1900 only a few measurements of airplane wings had been made along successful lines and most flying experiments had been made on clumsy, unscientific plans which if continued would have postponed the accomplishment of flight for centuries.

"The problem was not one to be solved by guesswork. Duechemin, about the middle of the last century, published a formula for calculating the pressure on planes at different angles—Lilienthal, in the eighties, published his measurements of several curved surfaces, with other valuable scientific work, and Langley, in the nineties, published his measurements of plane surfaces, corroborating the earlier work of Deuchemin. It was to the work of Lilienthal, however, that I and my brother were most deeply indebted.

"Owing to various defects in the systems of measuring, all of this work was found too inaccurate and too meagre for purposes of design. In 1901, my brother Wilbur and I, having proved by actual gliding tests the inaccuracy of these tables, began a scientific study of the subject. We designed new types of measuring instruments and made measurements of hundreds of differing wing surfaces in a wind tunnel. It was due to the accuracy of these measurements that we were able, in 1903, to design a new type of biplane, almost entirely from calculation, which was capable of lifting itself and an operator into the air with a crude motor weighing more than 12 pounds per horsepower.

"We had already developed a new system of control, the system with which our name has been so largely connected.

"The flight on December 17, 1903, was of 59 seconds duration at a speed of 30 miles an hour. Today continuous flights of more than 24 hours have been made, with speeds in excess of 175 miles an hour. Many laboratories in all countries are now at work in this field of science."

IRISH QUESTION

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Associated Press).—The big questions at issue between the British Government and the representatives of the Irish Republican Parliament have been:

Shall Ireland become entirely independent or, if it remains within the British Empire, shall there be two separate governments in Ireland, one for Ulster and one for the rest of the country?

Prime Minister Lloyd George has refused to consider any proposal which would put Ireland outside the Empire.

The Sinn Feiners refused to admit that Ireland should be split in two parts.

Ulster refused to unite in one parliament with the Sinn Feiners. It has organized a parliament of its own under the Government of Ireland Act.

The Sinn Feiners refused to set up a parliament for the south of Ireland, as proposed in that Act. They adhered to their own Irish parliament, called the Dail Eireann, which they had set up independently as the governing body of the Irish Republic.

That was the situation when the truce began last July, after King George had made a conciliatory speech at the opening of the new parliament in Ulster.

The purpose of the negotiations now in progress, as defined by Lloyd George and accepted by the Sinn Fein representatives, is "to ascertain how the association of Ireland with the community of nations known as the British Empire may be best reconciled with Irish national operations."

The conferences began in July. Both sides have at times entertained higher hopes of a final and satisfactory settlement probably than at any time since the Irish question became a thorn in the side of the British Empire, but there have been several crises when the negotiations seemed doomed to failure.

The first of these occurred when Lloyd George offered to de Valera at consultation in London a form of self-government in Ireland something like that prevailing in the British Dominions. The Dail Eireann utterly rejected this proposal on the ground that it did not afford even genuine Dominion rule. For a time it seemed that a deadlock had been reached.

Lloyd George endeavored to resume negotiations, but this move seemed likely to be balked by de Valera's insistence that the Irish delegates to such a conference must be accepted as having derived their authority from a free and independent Ireland. The British Premier refused to concede that point as, he said, it would constitute a recognition at the very outset of Ireland's claims for separation from the British Empire.

This obstacle was overcome by the two parties agreeing upon Lloyd George's formula that the purpose of the conference should be to ascertain how Ireland's association with the Empire might be best reconciled with Ireland's national aspirations.

Under that formula, meetings have been in progress since early October. The proceedings have been secret. It has been reported, however, that British representatives submitted a plan to give Ireland a status of "association" with the Empire and to allow her an almost complete measure of self-government to be governed by separate parliaments in Ulster and South Ireland, respectively, and by a central council jointly chosen.

This brought Ulster again into the negotiations and compelled Premier Lloyd George to defer his trip to the Washington Conference on Limitation of Armament so that he could devote his time to an effort to overcome Ulster's hesitation or objection to co-operate with the south of Ireland in any form of common government.

The general understanding was that the Sinn Fein delegates insisted that there must be no partition of Ireland into the north and south with different forms of government and different relations to the Empire.

To reconcile these conflicting viewpoints, Lloyd George invited Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, to come to London in the first week in November to talk things over. The situation was so delicate that Sir James desired the support and advice of other Ulster leaders, and finally all the members of the Ulster Cabinet were called to London. Unionist opinion in England has been steadfastly against any "coercion of Ulster." It was generally conceded that one of the most difficult stages of the negotiations had been reached.

DEFENDED COST OF CANAL

BELMONT Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Adam Beck here last night declared criticism of Hydro as unfair and defended in cost and purpose of Chippewa power development. He ridiculed the suggestion that the province should take power rights from Municipalities and administer them as Provincial undertaking and challenged Premier Drury if he really desired to secure benefits of cheap power for farmers to cause Provincial grant to apply to secondary as well as primary lines and make it retroactive so that rural districts which have already installed Hydro should benefit

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

It is unusual that a photodrama is filmed on the actual locale of the story, but that is the case with "The Kiss," the Universal picture in which Carmel Myers will be seen at the Regent Theatre to-night. The story paints a romantic chapter from old California history and it was filmed under the direction of Jack Conway on the site of an historic old rancho near San Juan Capistrano.

AT THE CAPITOL.

A very unusual picture, with dramatic and tense situations, is "Uncharted Seas," at the Capitol this week, with the attractive Alice Lake in the stellar role. Backgrounds of icebergs in polar seas, of a terrible wind storm which sends the huge white cakes crashing down on the party that struggles valiantly through cold and sleet, of the Northern Lights sending their weird streamers up into the cold sky, they all provide a dramatic setting for a story of love and passion which begins in a New York drawing-room, and ends at "the top of the world," with a peculiar suddenness. Their several parts are enacted by the chief characters with a strong fidelity to life which lends much to the attraction of a thrilling production.

The music rendered by the Capitol orchestra for this feature is most appropriate, and adds immeasurably to its presentation, and the balance of the short-reel programme is excellent, with a funny comedy.

Archer and Carlow supply the vaudeville element, in a heartily encored act of musical specialties, the feature being the musical bottle stunt.

AT THE ROYAL.

The man, woman or child who hankers for a thrill can procure their heart's desire by seeing the wonderful seven reel picture called "CONFLICT" at the Royal. As noted in yesterday's issue seven of New York's greatest journals devoted space to the daring stunts of Priscilla Dean in this amazing picture. As part of her work in carrying out the exciting incidents of this great play Miss Dean in riding rolling thirty inch thick saw logs as they flush and fall in the foam crested waves of turbulent rapids recalls two lines of the change of the Light Brigade "Into the jaws of death, into the valley of hell"! The wonder of it is that this intrepid girl refused to let the dangerous task of riding logs through the awful rapids to be played by a "double". As the huge logs weighing a ton each are tossed about like corks and flung bodily into the air, although one slip of the foot meant certain death, Miss Dean plays an actual part that many seasoned Lumberman would refuse. Every yard of her progress among the whirling logs in a death defying feat that will never be excelled in the history of lumbering. The three reel Western picture is something unique being a comedy played by cowboys. The other films for tonight are also of exceptional interest The Royal confines its business to moving pictures alone. Money that we could save by putting on a cheaper picture service and giving vaudeville is spent on procuring the best pictures available. The Royal is strictly a picture theater and our patrons get the benefit.

AT THE GRAND.

REX STOCK COMPANY.

When the Rex Stock Company decided to play "Parlour, Bedroom and Bath" for the re-opening bill on Monday afternoon, December 26th, they chose a sure fire hit, and Grand audiences should greet the popular players with genuine enthusiasm. The play is of the variety which appeals most to the average run of theatre-goers. It is a genuine farce and gives ample opportunity for the gales of laughter will emanate from all sections of the house when Rex makes his first appearance. The public never seems to tire of the genus "bedroom farce," but this play evidently has something to do with a pocket-edition apartment or flat. There are three rooms mentioned. Can't you see at once the usual seaside hotel with its cosey living-room or parlour furnished in conventional catalogue style for out-of-town hotels, the adjoining sleeping chamber and the all-important bathroom? I wonder if Rex figures prominently in the last named apartment? It really is only done in the movies seemingly, but so often in modern dramas the hero splashes about in a luxurious bath, while the audience looks on indifferently at the apparently wanton destruction.

At any rate, there are very funny situations, strange complications, a good deal of right-up-to-the-minute dialogue and a much worried husband. Also, there is a surprise in store for the Grand patrons. The regular cast is augmented by the addition of a talented and clever actress, who joins the Rex Company and who will appear on Monday. Miss Florence Winters will be a valued acquisition and will become instantly popular. Don't forget, Monday, matinee and night, at the Grand Theatre.

MANY PLAYERS AT THE FIRST HOCKEY PRACTICE

ALL THREE OF PETERBOROUGH'S O. H. A. TEAMS WORKED OUT AT BROCK STREET RINK LAST NIGHT—PLENTY OF JUNIORS IN LINE.

The hockey season opened with a bang at Brock street rink last night, when all three of Peterborough's O. H.A. teams had their preliminary canter. A whole regiment of players turned out and the puck had a lively session from 6 o'clock until 9.30. The railbirds were on hand in droves, all anxious to get a line on the prospects for the season and there is every evidence of an unusual interest in hockey.

The Holy Name Society's O.H.A. squad were the first bunch to step out on the ice and they had a lively work-out under the direction of Coach Jerry Coughlin. The H.N.S. crew have the majority of last year's team in line, losing only Bergoine and Collins, who are over age and Sabatino, who will be in Lakefield this year. They have three or four candidates for the goaler's job, two promising forwards, "Scotty" McPherson and Killoran, who were with St. Peter's school last season, and two youngsters from Trenton, Lemoire and Barre. There will be no difficulty in selecting a rattling fine forward line, for Ranger, Legon, Foley and Pethick of last year's team are all stepping along in great style, and if they can build up a defence with as much class as the attacking division the team will give them all a fight.

The P.A.A.A. intermediates were the next bunch out, with Walter Smaill in charge of the work-out. He divided them into two squads and let them go to it, devoting the evening to getting a line on the material so that he will be in shape to begin building up a team. Among those out were K. Murray, Jackson, Pete Thornton, Sheehan, Gillespie, Williams, Ford Graham, Burgess, Tingley, McMartin, J. Murray and Collins. Burgess, who hails from Nova Scotia, where he played with the Dalhousie University team, made the most favourable impression among the new material out. He is fast, a clever stick-handler, and showed a willingness to play combination that was promising.

The last squad to show their wares for the evening were the P.A.A.A. juniors— just about thirty-five of them. Coach Smaill had to work them in five minute shifts there were so many youngsters out, and he expects to be able to select a line-up from the small army of recruits that will give a good account of themselves. It is expected that the P.A.A.A. juniors will do some of their practising at the Armouries rink until the squad is whittled down to workable size. There is no lack of material and the youngsters will be given every chance to make good.

BELLEVILLE HERE FOR GAME ON WEDNESDAY EVENING

Local fans will not have to wait long to see the P.A.A.A. intermediates in action, for the management has been successful in arranging for an exhibition game for next Wednesday night at Brock street rink with the fast Belleville team. It is several years since the Belleville crew were seen in action in Peterborough and the game should be a rattling good exhibition. It is likely that concessions will be made in the matter of substitutes to allow each team to work out its material and in this way the pace will be hot from start to finish. If the cold weather continues, both teams will be in fairly good shape, as they will have had nearly a week's hard practising under their belts. "Soup" Goyer, Vernon Weir and other well known Central League ball stars will be here with the Belleville team and the game will be a fitting start for what promises to be a good season.

DISTRICT SPORT COMMENT

Lindsay Post: The schedules for this group in the O.H.A. were drafted at a meeting held in Peterborough on Tuesday, 20th, at which Lindsay had no representative. The local men were informed but told the Peterborough men to go ahead and make out the schedule as long as they arranged no conflicting dates. Lindsay never, in any way, consented to the splitting up in groups of the teams. This is a thing that they have been trying to get away from all the time. The Petes have dropped their weak team in with Lakefield and left the rest in a group by themselves. This arrangement will be strenuously objected to by Lindsay.

Lindsay Post: Where is the Lindsay hockey coach? Time he was on the job and at work with the boys. The ice will be ready in a few days and the boys are practically all signed up.

Lindsay Post: The friends to the south are a foxy lot.

The Port Hope Guide opines that the Lindsay Association does not need a ladies' hockey team as, if their memory serves them aright, the Lindsay Intermediates play like a bunch of old maids.

The Lindsay skating rink, which has been the property of Mr. J. Parkin, of Winnipeg, has changed hands. Mr. John Carew, of Lindsay, is the purchaser. The rink has been leased to Mr. George Coombs for season. Next year, it is understood, Mr. Carew will make important changes in connection with the structure.

With a view to developing players for Oshawa's coming O.H.A. teams, a league has been organized comprising two series, Junior and Senior. Up to the present time four teams have entered the Senior competition, while five entries have been sent for the Junior series.

A special meeting of the Bobcaygeon Hockey Club was held in the G.W.V.A. Hall, Bobcaygeon, Tuesday evening. The meeting opened with the manager, Mr. L. McQuoit, in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and passed. The necessity for the meeting was to approve of the terms for the rink for this season. Everything was satisfactory and now the only thing lacking is ice for hockey. A new treasurer had to be appointed as Mr. Wilson, who is at present the treasurer, is leaving for Fenelon Falls. Mr. Bulger was elected to succeed Mr. Wilson. The meeting adjourned until the next regular meeting.

Belleville players have had their first ice practice. The following is their probable team:

Pat. Boland, in goal: Canning, a former junior, who will likely play defence; Harold (Bouncer) Holway also billed for the defence, and Sammy Symons, Vernon Weir, Soup Goyer. Hagerman was there and the younger Holway, who, however, may play with the juniors. If he does he will be a tower of strength to them. Bill Green was not out, nor was Daw Whelan, although at the rink. Gunner Arnott was present also as a spectator. It is doubtful if he will play this season.

A.A.A. squad With two hours available for practise to-night there will be an opportunity for a large number to work out

LAKEVIEWS WILL PRACTICE TUESDAY

Walter Smaill, the P.A.A.A. sports director, is arranging a Junior City League which promises to produce lots of hockey for youngsters inside the Junior O.H.A. age limit. The preliminary games will be played at the Armouries rink, with the finals at Brock street rink, and no Senior City League or Junior O.H.A. men will be allowed to compete. Players who will be under twenty years on the 1st of January next will be eligible for this league. Teams wishing to enter are asked to leave the name of their team, and the manager's name and address with Mr. Smaill at the Y.M.C.A. before Tuesday. An organization meeting will likely be held on Tuesday night.

CONFERENCES ON THE KING CABINET CHRISTMAS SEASON

DEFINITE ANNOUNCEMENT OF PERSONNEL BY NEW YEAR

OTTAWA, December 23. Canadian Press. — The Christmas season will likely be one of conferences in connection with the formation of the King Cabinet and it is probable that the New Year will see a definite announcement. It is expected that with the Hon. . A. Crerar here to-morrow, accompanied by western followers, negotiations for a Liberal-Progressive alliance will open in earnest.

Any difficulties in the formation of an alliance will lie in the allotment of portfolios and it is stated that the Quebec delegation of Liberals is opposed to one third representation of Progressives in the Cobinet but the difficulty may be surmounted by the inclusion of Mr. Crerar and two or three others from the West, who, while not Progressives, would meet with the approval of the party.

The names suggested are Hon. A. B. Hudson and Hon. Charles Stewart.

Sir Lomer Gouin has not indicated his course but it is thought that he will give his support to such a working alliance.

WARSHIPS ORDERED OUT.
MALTA, December 23 (Canadian Press). — In view of the disturbances at Cairo to-day, when Said Zagloul Pasha, the Nationalist leader was removed to Suez by the British authorities, two British warships have received orders to proceed to Egypt immediately, and other units are ready to leave at short notice.

CHRISTMAS TREE AT ST. ANDREW'S

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS ENJOY JOLLY EVENING

Over 350 members of the Sunday School classes of St. Andrew's Church were entertained in their Sunday School Hall last evening with the annual Christmas tree and concert. An enjoyable programme was rendered by choruses, recitations and songs from the different classes, in which the small tots of four and five years, and the little girls' chorus were outstanding features.

A dialogue entitled "Squire Hawley's Christmas" was prettily rendered by children from the Queen Mary School, and Miss Hazel Davidson contributed some readings in her usual excellent style. Mr. J. Johns acted as Santa Claus, and distributed a gift to every member from the laden tree.

A member of Mr. J. Johns' class, Mr. Ian Munro, gave a very interesting and brief address on "Optimism," which was well received.

Mr. J. A. McKone is superintendent of the Sunday School, and had a great deal to do with the success of the entertainment.

Mr. G. W. Gilman donated the home-made candy for the little tots' stockings, which was much appreciated by everyone.

MARK STREET MISSION BAND HAS SCRAMBLE
On Wednesday afternoon the Mission Band of Mark Street Church was enertained by the Superintendent, the President and the Pastor. About 55 members were present and the youngsters will never tire telling about the "time" and the "doings" of the evening.

After the usual program, the officers passed home-made candy, which was refused by none. Then the "decks were cleared for action" in the basement. The boys and girls were divided into three groups, primary intermediate and the bigger boys and girls. Circles were formed of each group. When all was ready, the pastor deluged each circle with nuts. Oh, what a scramble. "I tell you my pockets is jam full" said one lad, while "you bet" rang out on every side. "How'd you make out?" said one girl to another. Oh all O.K., was the reply. "Yes, we're all loaded said another, "rope there'll be another next year." How much does it mean to entertain these future men and women?

HAD ALL EARMARKS OF A CHRISTMAS MARKET

LARGE QUANTITY OF FOWL OFFERED TO CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS—EGGS LOWER IN PRICE

MEAT PRICES UP

The farmers' Christmas market today lived up to its reputation. Long before dawn was spreading its gray wings across the blacks sky and city houses were quiet as death, the farmers were already on the way to town wih fowl piled high in the buggy's and Old Dobbin prancing along the country road with the honest joy of every good horse in taking some part in the Christmas activities.

By 9 a.m. the table space was prety well taken and by 10 oclock not many more baskets could have been accomodated. What a vast amount of fowl must be consumed? Today's mar'ket makes three large ones, and on Wednesday there was a pretty fair one. Tons of turkeys geese and chickens have been sold but today the housewives and the menfolks oo assailed the basketers as soon as they appeared and sales of ran as steadily as ever.

Turkeys 55 Cents

There was no limit to the turkeys Practicaly all the vendors wanted 55 cents a pound bu some were selling at 50 cents.

Geese ranged from 30 to 40c; plucked birds were all 40 cents. Ducks were quite abundant and sold at 35 and 40 cents. Some splendid chickens saved till the last week going at 25 cents a pound.

Eggs offered in greater quantities than some weeks were going freely at 65 cents. Housewives refused to pay more and the price was in danger of further collapses. Butter sold a little unsteadily at 45 cents but as has occurred every week was down to 40 cents before noon.

There were more loiterers around the market than ever before this winter. If chains were provided the basketers would likely to be crowded out alogeher. However, today it was cold in the open market and the men had a satisfactory reason for hovering about the box stove. The huge crowd of shin warmers interfered with business though.

A couple of loads of Christmas trees gave a real Yuletide touch to the open section. A nice spruce costs 50 cents but lower grades were selling as low as 10 cents. The last mentioned were small enough to mount on a table.

Meat Prices Higher

Beef and pork were as plentiful as ever. Beef has recovered a few cents and sold at 12 to 15 cents, fore and hindquarters and pork 15 to 17 cents. Potatoes were offered at a $1.65 a bag. Apples were going slowly at 50 cents and 60 cents a peck. Spys not very pletiful were 60 cents a peck.

U. F. O. CAUCUS

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— Whatever decision was arrived at by Premier Drury, his followers and Progressive leader T. A. Crerar yesterday is known only to themselves, for throughout their conferences here they have preserved a "sphinx like" attitude. Mr. Crerar was met at the train by Hon. Manning Doherty and whisked away to the Parliament Buildings, where he entered into a two hour conference with Premier Drury. Later he met the complete Ontario coterie of U.F.O. members elect in the Methodist book room in their first secret session since the election. He left, however, for Ottawa without giving any indication of what had been decided.

REEVE H. BAPTIE OF CAVAN RETIRES.

Vacates Office After 12 Years' Efficient Service.

In the retirement from municipal official life of Reeve Baptie, of Cavan, that community loses, to general regret, the exemplary offices of a zealous, competent and attentive Chief Executive, says the Millbrook Reporter. During twelve strenuous years of faithful service Reeve Harold Baptie always exercised a clear vision befitting the office, and he had the backbone to meet every situation and made good on the whole. His retirement will be regretted by his many friends. J. L. McCamus, deputy reeve, is stepping up the higher chair.

He is a successful business man, and has always been interested in the city's success.

A CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT

A very pleasant Christmas entertainment was held in Fairview Church on Thursday evening, Dec. 22nd. The programme was given by the pupils of Hall's School, S.S. No. 4, Smith. All acted their parts well and made the concert a great success. The programme was as follows:

At the close of the preceding chorus, Santa's bells were heard in the distance, and in a few minutes he appeared on the platform. He greeted the girls and boys, and then, with the help of the eight girls who had taken part in the chorus, he unloaded the Christmas tree.

The evening's programme closed with the National Anthem.

THE WEATHER

Eight above zero at noon, a falling thermometer, and the prospect of decidedly cold weather for the next few days. Christmas day of last year was fine and sharp, two inches of snow on the ground. The same day of 1919 we had it 7 below zero: no sleighing. Christmas day of 1918, saw a snow storm in the forenoon, and good sleighing. As to-morrow will be Christmas allow me to wish the reader the compliments of the season in the truest sense of the word. Should you be a stranger in a strange place, this greeting is for you especially. Should you know, or not know, "W.P." the greeting is equally warm and sincere. May your Christmas be a Merry one, but, better still, a Happy one.—W. P.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

BY "SAPPER" (CYRIL McNEILE)

He remembered the German who had lain motionless for an hour in a little gully by Hebuterne, while he from behind a stunted bush had tried to locate him. And then that one creak as the Boche had moved his leg. And then the end. On that night, too, the little hummocks had moved and taken to themselves strange shapes: fifty times he had imagined he saw him; fifty times he knew he was wrong—in time. He was used to it; the night held no terrors for him, only a fierce excitement. And thus it was that as he crouched in the bushes, waiting for the game to start, his pulse was as normal, and his nerves as steady, as if he had been sitting down to supper. The only difference was that in his hand he held something tight-gripped.

At last faintly in the distance he heard the hum of a car. Rapidly it grew louder, and he smiled grimly to himself as the sound of five unmelodious voices singing lustily struck his ear. They passed along the road in front of the house. There was a sudden crash—then silence; but only for a moment.

Peter's voice came first:

"You priceless old ass, you've rammed the blinking gate."

It was Jerry Seymour who then took up the ball. His voice was intensely solemn—also extremely loud.

"Preposhterous. Perfectly preposhterous. We must go and apologise to the owner. I . . . I . . . . absholutely musht apologise. Quite unpardonable. You can't go about country knocking down gates. Out of queshtion."

Half-consciously Hugh listened, but, now that the moment for action had come, every faculty was concentrated on his own job. He saw half a dozen men go rushing out into the garden through a side door, and then two more ran out and came straight towards him. They crashed past him and went on into the darkness, and for an instant he wondered what they were doing. A little later he was destined to find out.

Then came a peal at the front-door bell, and he determined to wait no longer. He darted through the garden door, to find a flight of back stairs in front of him, and in another moment he was on the first floor. He walked rapidly along the landing, trying to find his bearings, and, turning a corner, he found himself at the top of the main staircase—the spot where he had fought Peterson two nights previously.

From below Jerry Seymour's voice came clearly.

"Are you the pro-propri-tor, ole friend? Because there's been acchident. . . ."

He waited to hear no more, but walked quickly on to the room which he calculated was the one where he had seen the shadow on the blind. Without a second's hesitation he flung the door open and walked in. There, lying in the bed, was the American, while crouched beside him, with a revolver in his hand, was a man.

For a few seconds they watched one another in silence, and then the man straightened up.

"The soldier!" he snarled. "You young pup!"

Deliberately, almost casually, he raised his revolver, and then the unexpected happened. A jet of liquid ammonia struck him full in the face, and with a short laugh Hugh dropped his water-pistol in his pocket, and turned his attention to the bed. Wrapping the millionaire in a blanket, he picked him up, and, paying no more attention to the man gasping and choking in a corner, he raced for the back stairs.

Below he could still hear Jerry hiccoughing gently, and explaining to the pro . . pro . . . pritor that he pershonally would repair . . inshisted on repairing . . . any and every gateposht he posshessed. And then he reached the garden.

Everything had fallen out exactly as he had hoped, but had hardly dared to expect. He heard Peterson's voice, calm and suave as usual, answering Jerry. From the garden in front came the dreadful sound of a duet by Algy and Peter. Not a soul was in sight; the back of the house was clear. All that he had to do was to walk quietly through the wicket-gate to The Larches with his semi-conscious burden, get to his car and drive off. It all seemed so easy that he laughed.

But there were one or two factors that he had forgotten, and the first and most important one was the man upstairs. The window was thrown up suddenly, and the man leaned out waving his arms. He was still gasping with the strength of the ammonia, but Hugh saw him clearly in the light from the room behind. And as he cursed himself for a fool in not having tied him up, from the trees close by there came the sharp clang of metal.

With a quick catch in his breath he began to run. The two men who had rushed past him before he had entered the house, and whom, save for a passing thought, he had disregarded, had become the principal danger. For he had heard that clang before; he remembered Jem Smith's white horror-struck face, and then his sigh of relief as the thing—whatever it was—was shut in its cage. And now it was out, dodging through the trees, let loose by the two men.

Turning his head from side to side, peering into the gloom, he ran on. What an interminable distance it seemed to the gate and even then . . . He heard something crash into a bush on his right, and give a snarl of anger. Like a flash he swerved into the undergrowth on the left.

Then began a dreadful game. He was still some way from the fence, and he was hampered at every step by the man slung over his back. He could hear the thing blundering about searching for him, and suddenly, with a cold feeling of fear, he realised that the animal was in front of him—that his way to the gate was barred. The next moment he saw it.

Shadowy, indistinct, in the darkness, he saw something glide between two bushes. Then it came out into the open and he knew it had seen him, though as yet he could not make out what it was. Grotesque and horrible it crouched on the ground, and he could hear its heavy breathing, as it waited for him to move.

SEA RIP VAN WINKLE WAKES; GETS A JOB.

Ship, 50 Years Old, Waddles To Lakes for Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Rising like a ghost from the marine graveyard where she had been lying for many years, the steamship George W. Clyde is plodding along from Philadelphia for Chicago, by way of the Great Lakes, with every intention next month of celebrating her fiftieth birthday.

After serving her time as a coastal trader, the Clyde found herself outstripped in speed and carrying capacity. Consigned to a Philadelphia anchorage, she recently was purchased by the Chicago Lines Municipal Piers Co. and ordered to push off for her new home port.

Advices received here from Capt. D. S. Kindell reported her aged ribs and plates had survived a buffeting in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and that with her 35-foot beam and 265 feet over all, she had just managed to squeeze through the locks of the Welland Canal.

ALL TOGETHER AT CHRISTMAS

To the Editor of Examiner:

May I through your columns offer my warm Christmas greetings to all old friends and associates, as well as sincere best wishes for the continued prosperity of Peterborough and the welfare of its citizens generally.

There must be very many former citizens, not only in Toronto, Montreal and other centres, but scattered also throughout the world whose hearts turn at this joyful season of re-union to their old home city with happy remembrances of by-gone days in its well-known churches, streets and home.

Few places look so well from an outside standpoint, and few places have so strong a realization of the value of enterprising co-operative citizenship than which there can hardly be a more valuable asset.

Those of the past, no less than those of the present, are concerned in a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year for Peterborough!

Yours, etc.,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

CHRISTMAS PEACE MESSAGE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British Arms Conference delegation, last night issued the following Christmas message to the American people:

"I welcome the opportunity which has been granted me of sending Christmas greetings to my American friends, known and unknown.

"If this be the season which, above all others, suggests thoughts of peace on earth and good will toward men, surely there are no nations between whom that peace should be more secure and that good will more ardent than the two great peoples of English speech. Such has always been my faith, and never did it seem nearer complete realization than at a moment than when, under American leadership, so much is being done towards diminishing armaments and removing causes of international offence.

"A Christmastide so spent should be the surest prelude to a happy New Year."

NATIONAL LEAGUE SCHEDULE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Schedules of the American and National Leagues for the 1922 season will be drafted at a meeting of the schedule committee to be held in French Lick, Ind., January 3, President Ban Johnson, of the American League, announced last night.

The National League committee will be President Heydler and Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Club.

A "HARTAL" DECLARED.

CALCUTTA, India, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press). — A hartal of a completely non-violent nature, lasting 24 hours, was declared for December 24, the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales to the city.

Instructions urge the public to refrain from anything which might lead to disturbance; no one should abuse, intimidate or retaliate, however great the provocation, and no one should go to the races or participate in any festivities.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

WINDSOR, N.S., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Sarah Miller 85 years of age, was found dead on the road near Poplar Grove, about 12 miles from Windsor yesterday, death evidently resulting from exposure to the zero weather of yesterday. Mrs. Miller left her home at five o'clock last evening for Brooklands, and presumably strayed in the cold and became exhausted.

ASSAULT CASE ADJOURNED.

ST. HYACINTHE, Q., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—The case of Arthur Courtemanche, charged with having struck Rev. Father Belanger, parish priest of St. Dominique de Bagot, senseless and then to have kicked him in the abdomen as he lay on the floor of the presbytery, was adjourned yesterday to January 12 next for voluntary statement by the accused. Doctor Archambault testified that he had been called in to the victim and had found him to be suffering from bruises on the forehead, wounded in ribs and other places, and that he was in a very weak condition generally. Internal complications were possible from the kick in the abdomen. The assault grew out of the refusal of Father Belanger to grant accused the right to a pew in the parish church, he having no domicile in the parish.

SHOULD BE THROWN OUT.

SYDNEY, N.S., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—H. F. S. Paisley, editor of the Sydney Record, and an authority on college sports in the Maritimes, in an editorial declares that if the charges of professionalism against the young men named by President Covey, of the M.P.B. of the A.A.U. of C. are proved, the offenders should be thrown out of amateur sports forever, but if the charges fizzle, then those who made them should be prosecuted in the courts.

PLAYER ON CARPET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press.)—President Slattery, of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, has called a meeting here for Saturday afternoon to consider the case of Edouard Bouchard, of Quebec, charged under affidavit of Manager Latreille of the local Hochelaag hockey club with having accepted pay for games played with that team last season. It is possible that Latreille, who has been confined to hospital for some time, will be present at the meeting to support his affidavit.

BIG LIQUOR SHIPMENT.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 24.—With one of the largest and most valuable liquor consignments shipped to the British Columbia coast, the U. S. Shipping Board steamer, "Eastern Merchant," arrived here yesterday from Hamburg and Liverpool with seventeen thousand cases of assorted spirits aboard. Five thousand cases are for this port and 12,000 cases for Vancouver.

ALIENS RELEASED AT ELLIS ISLAND

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The gates of Ellis Island swung open late yesterday, freeing more than 1,000 aliens, detained under the immigration quota law, so that they might spend Christmas with friends and relatives in various parts of the United States. They will be at liberty for 90 days under an order issued at Washington, but must return at the end of that time for deportation, unless promised attacks on the constitutionality of the restrictive law have borne fruit, or the Government decides to make more exceptions in their cases.

REMOVED BY AUTHORITIES

CAIRO IS BRISTLING WITH POLICE AND TROOPS—MANY ARRESTS MADE.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press). — Cairo bristled with police and troops last night, and airplanes circled over the Delta of the Nile, following disturbances in connection with the forcible removal of Said Zagloul Pasha, a Nationalist leader, by the authorities to Suez, early yesterday. His removal came as a result of his refusal to obey an order issued by the military authorities that he and his chief followers cease all political activity and leave Cairo.

Although much wanton destruction occurred during the disturbances, the authorities claim that the incident is relatively unimportant, and that the situation need not be regarded with particular anxiety. The disturbances appear to have been confined to Cairo, and reports last night were that everything was quiet in the neighboring provinces.

Six of Zagloul's were arrested on the charge of refusing to obey the same order to return to their home villages. Two demonstrators were killed during the disturbances by rifle shots.

PARDON FOR A SOCIALIST

SENTENCE OF EUGENE DEBS COMMUTED BY PRESIDENT HARDING--COMES AS A CHRISTMAS GIFT TO MANY OFFENDERS

OTHERS IN SIGHT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press). — Eugene V. Debs, former Socialist candidate for President, serving a sentence of ten years at Atlanta Penitentiary for violating the Espionage Act, and twenty-three other persons convicted on charges of hindering the United States Government during the war with Germany, have received from President Harding commutations of sentences, to become effective Christmas Day. At the same time five former United States soldiers serving life sentences pronounced by a military court for the murder of a British officer while serving with the American Army on the Rhine, received full pardons, effective Christmas Day.

The commutations, it was explained, do not operate to restore citizenship lost by the felony convictions, but the pardons do. Several civilian offenders will be deported to the European countries of their nativity; two are under observation at hospitals for the insane, and others are now out on parols which were granted by President Wilson.

Utterances which resulted in Debs' conviction were contained in a speech at Canton, Ohio, June 16, 1918. Mr. Debs offered no evidence in his defence, and made his own address to the jury at the trial in Cleveland, in September, 1918. When Federal Judge Westenhaver pronounced sentence, Debs' only statement was that "all will work out well in God's own good time."

With the incoming of the Harding administration, renewed efforts were made to obtain clemency of the Socialist party head. Mr. Harding gave no definite answer but there were indications that the administra-

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Mr. A. O. Norton, the millionaire Jack Manufacturer, of Boston, who recently died, was a great "booster" for Zutoo Tablets.
He suffered from headaches from childhood and when he found Zutoo Tablets stopped these headaches in a few minutes and left no bad effect, he began recommending them to his family and friends. In an unsolicited letter, Mr. Norton says in closing:
"My family use them when ever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

SATURDAY, DEC. 24TH, 1921.

CHRISTMAS.

Tomorrow would be the best Christmas that Peterborough has ever known if all the wealth of generosity and human kindness that the Yuletide season engenders could be stored up for use throughout all the days that are to come. The Christmas spirit, the warm impulses that cause people to make sacrifices that others may be happy, what a world it would be if they were with us all the year round. When humanity reaches that stage, when we are warm-hearted and generous and eager to help ever day in the year, when we forget ourselves in our anxiety to bring brightness to others, then the angels' message, "Peace on earth, good-will toward men," will be closer to realization than it ever has been. May that happy time soon be reached is The Examiner's fervent hope.

THE SEASON'S GREETINGS.

In wishing its readers a very Merry Christmas The Examiner realizes that because of the unemployment situation the wish would be in many cases mere mockery were it not for the efforts of those societies and individuals who have splendidly arisen to the occasion and have endeavoured to see that no home in Peterborough will be without some substantial evidence of Christmas cheer. The Examiner hopes that no family has been overlooked, that every household where the unemployment of the breadwinner had brought distress has been visited.

In the wider field of world events there are many reasons why Christmas of 1921 should be a particularly happy one. The Washington Conference is bringing peace closer to reality than the world has ever known before. The coming together of the nations to plan for less burdensome conditions and to remove possible causes of international conflict supplies a new cause for Yuletide rejoicing. On the other side of the Atlantic the prospects of peace in Ireland brings a glowing ray of hope to the whole British Empire.

The Examiner is sure that its readers will remember these events in their Christmas rejoicing.

A LAME DEFENCE.

Mr. Tooms, M.L.A., cannot excuse the failure of the Drury Government to meet its responsibility in the present industrial crisis by accusing The Examiner of a change of front as to the relative merits of providing work or relief doles. The Examiner, it is true, has maintained that it would be a sounder and more desirable policy to furnish employment to those who are out of work, but if work cannot be found hundreds of families cannot be left to suffer from the effects of short rations and fuelless homes. And, so far as the Ontario Government is concerned, the workless are to be left to starve and freeze, except the small percentage who possibly may be given a measure of employment under the limited scheme of assistance which represents the sole effort of the Queen's Park administration to deal with the most urgent problem of the day. Mr. Tooms is a member of that Government. Moreover he was elected as a Labour representative who may reasonably be expected to lead the battle for the relief of the unemployed. He must know that the Dominion Government has stood ready to pay one-third of the cost of financing an emergency fund for victims of the industrial depression as was done last year, the city of Peterborough is equally prepared to do its part, but the Ontario Government has refused to follow its policy of a year ago and contribute one-third of the fund. The whole burden is therefore laid upon the shoulders of the tax-payers of Peterborough. And Mr. Tooms seems quite willing to allow it to remain there. Talk about what the Drury Government has done for the "under dog" may satisfy the Labour member for West Peterborough, but it is a poor substitute for what the Drury Government has not done to help the hundreds of Peterborough citizens who are feeling the pinch of an unusual situation.

THE NOMINATIONS.

If all the candidates nominated yesterday for the various vacancies in the civic bodies, or even a fairly large percentage of them decide to stay in the fight and make the necessary declarations, the citizens will have less than the usual chance to complain that the choice is limited. For the Mayoralty the electors can select between two well-known citizens, Messrs. J. J. Turner and W. H. Taylor, both of whom have served in the City Council and both of whom, too, have had the honour of being the city's Finance Minister as Chairman of the Finance Committee. For the vacant position on the Utilities Commission there is a wider choice, for three candidates, Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, G. H. Duncan and A. A. McIntyre, all of three of whom have a long record of good municipal experience, including in each case a two years' occupany of the Mayor's chair. Six good names are to be found in the Board of Education list, while for the Council an even two dozen were nominated last evening. Among them are many well-known citizens, many of them with previous experience on the Council, and while many of those nominated may decide not to qualify, there should be enough left to ensure a good field from which the citizens can make their selection on New Year's Day.

STABILIZING THE WORLD.

The close relation of peace and prosperity is once again emphasized by improved conditions in London and other world centres following the Irish peace treaty and the Pacific Pact. One of the essentials of modern life is stability, and there can be no stability where there is no peace. Capital insists upon seeing sure returns before it will risk investment, and there is sound reason for this attitude. Capital represents a certain amount of self-denial, because it is merely that portion of wealth which man refrains from using or dissipating after he has created it. It is equally true that this self-denial is mainly selfish, because by reserving this share of the wealth he has produced he is enabled to produce more with greater ease.

But all so-called self-denial, that is denying oneself one desire for the sake of gratifying a more imperative one, is selfish, although the sort of selfishness involved may differ somewhat. Self-denial is entitled to its return, no matter what its sort. The value of that return may be measured in dollars and cents, as in the case of the capitalist who invests his reserve funds in some paying business or industrial enterprise. Or it may be of that incalculable value, beyond any human computation, which comes to him who invests all his reserve funds of love, sympathy and understanding in an effort to better his fellows, who, in short, gives himself for an ideal. Each brings a reward of its own kind, to which each is equally entitled.

Hence it is unreasonable to rail against capital's timidity, one of its salient characteristics, where adequate returns are not assured. When there is no peace or prospect of peace there is no assured return for capital invested in any industry save that of producing armaments and munitions. Such production, however profitable, limits all other profitable production, increases living costs and makes for industrial and commercial depression.

It is, therefore, only what might have been expected as a result of the two pacts entered into during the week just passed, that business should be reviving in Britain and throughout Europe. Sterling has risen again to the highest point since the war, and, as Christmas dawns, there will be some chance of singnig with deeper fervor the song of the angels over Bethlehm, "Peace on earth, good-will to men." Stable political conditions being established in the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and on the Pacific, will result in stable currency conditions, and then business will once more go forward to success.—Brockville Record and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

May it be a Merry Christmas for everyone in Peterborough.

It is sure to be for those who have extended a helping hand to others less fortunate.

Civic service can't be too bad after all, when three ex-Mayors are competing for one position on the Utilities Commission.

Mr. Tooms declares that the Ontario Government's policy in regard to unemployment was decided upon the opinions of the class who claim to know—not the Labour leaders. Does he mean the U.F.O. portion of the administration?

When it comes to feats in journalistic acrobatics The Toronto Star earns brackets. Nothing but a newspaper gymnast could hope to support the Drury Government and public-owned Hydro-radials at the same time.

SAFETY IN WEAKNESS.

If the British Navy or any other navy is to be really useful, it must clearly be equally powerful on the sea, under the sea and in the heavens above. There is, however, one other alternative that neither the super-dreadnought zealot, the submarine bigot nor the aeroplane missionary might be expected to put forward. It is that these three branches of the service, instead of being made equally powerful, should in every navy be made equally weak. That is what those of us who are not experts supposed in our innocence the Washington Conference had set out to accomplish.—London Daily News.

OAK HALL

Christmas Greetings

Christmas has come again, with its fairy light for childhood, its cherished memories for age, its kindly thoughts and acts for those between them both. The broad mantle of love, born of Him Whose birth the Christmas festivities are meant to celebrate, falls upon all the sons of men while this busy world pauses for this great world-festival and listens to hear the angels sing!

If it be true, as the greatest Authority has assured us, that "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things that he possesseth," and that the real gains, the truly precious things of life, are love, and joy, and friendship, and the sweets of a happy home, then Christmas is surely the very richest season of all the year.

Oak Hall makes no secret of its keen pursuit of business, a pursuit whose rewards have deepened through the years—both in financial returns, and, higher, in the sense of honest business discharged with profit to buyer and seller alike—but Oak Hall desires at this glad season to cease long enough from the busy whirl to salute the radiant flag of our common human fellowship—to recognize the higher things of life, and to wish all our patrons, past, present and prospective — and all who may read these lines—a Merry, Merry Christmas and a Glad and Prosperous New Year.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press.)—Trade in cash grain in the local market yesterday was quiet with little demand. A firm feeling prevails in the flour market. There was no further change in prices in mill feed but the undertone to the market continues strong. Demand is steady and prices firm for rolled oats. The demand for baled hay is quiet. There is nothing new in the egg situation. Prices for potatoes are steady. Both the butter and cheese markets were quiet.

FINANCE FARM LOANS.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—The 1922 operations of the Manitoba Farm Loans Association will be financed without monetary assistance from the provincial government by floating its own bonds, it was announced here yesterday. More than $6,147,650 has been loaned to farmers in Manitoba since the farms loan act came into force. Of this sum $1,626,000 was loaned in 1921.

Many applications for next year are already in and more than $850,000 has been approved to date.

PROHIBITS AERIAL TRICKS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Acrobatic tricks, involving entering or leaving an aeroplane while in flight are barred under a new clause which has been added to the air regulations. The clause reads as follows:

"No person shall enter or attempt to enter any aircraft in flight; or leave or attempt to leave any aircraft in flight, except for the purpost of making a parachute descent; or give upon any aircraft in flight, any gymnastic or other like exhibition."

MARKET FOR POTATOES.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Dec. 24. —(Canadian Press).—Shut out of the American market by the Fordney tariff, New Brunswick potatoes have found a profitable profit in Cuba. By the inauguration of a new direct steamship service between St. John, N.B., it was possible recently to ship between two thousand and three thousand barrels of the home product, and it was announced that the ruling price in the Cuban capital was $3.75 per barrel. Local shippers are paying $1.50 to $2.00 per barrel, so that with a continuance of the present prices in Cuba, New Brunswick growers and shippers will no longer be dependent upon the border markets to take care of their surplus stocks.

FUR AUCTION COMPANY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Announcement was made here of the incorporation of the New York Auction Company with a capitalization of $1,000,000, to conduct public auction sales of raw furs and skins. The company was organized following the failure to re-organize the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, which had been holding raw fur auctions here three times a year since 1916, but which met with financial trouble following the slump in fur prices about a year ago.

PROGRESSIVE ELECTED.

CALGARY, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Captain J. T. Shaw, Independent Progressive, is elected by 16 majority over Hon. R. B. Bennet Minister of Justice, it was announced last eevning.

After the recount of ballots by Judge Winter, the result is: Shaw, 7,369; Bennet, 7,353; Ryan, 1,351.

THE LONGSHOREMEN'S STRIKE.

PORTLAND, Maine, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press). — Members of a citizens' committee appointed by Mayor Chaplin to bring about a settlement of the longshoremen's strike resulting from a dispute over working conditions, conferred with a committee from the union and urged the men to return to work. John T. Caselden, secretary of the union, said the union had never refused to confer with steamship agents on any disagreement, but that negotiations had been broken off because the union refused to accept a change in working conditions which had prevailed for 35 years.

HONORED MEMORY.

MONTREAL, Dec. 244.—(Canadian Press).—The memory of Madame d'Youville, the French woman who died 150 years ago yesterday, after a life of service to the sick and needy of the community in which she lives, was honored here yesterday in the Mother House of the Grey Nuns, Guy Street, this city, who, with their 1,200 sisters, perpetuate the work which she began in the eighteenth century. The order now administers 19 hospitals in Canada and the United States.

FOR RELIEF OF DISTRESS.

DUBLIN, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Pope Benedict, it was announced here last night, has added 22,214 lire to the sum of $21,446, which Archbishop Keane, of Dubuque, Iowa, recently sent to the Pontiff for the relief of distress in Ireland.

tion was giving serious consideration to the appeal and then a ray of hope broke for the followers of Debs for about April 1, Mr. Harding ordered a review of the case by the Department of Justice.

A Model Prisoner.

Then it was that Debs came from Atlanta Prison to Washington unannounced and unattended, for a conference with Attorney-General Daugherty. He slipped into this city quietly, held a three-hour conference with Mr. Daugherty, and was aboard a train travelling southward again before his presence was announced by Mr. Daugherty to a group of dumbfounded newspaper correspondents.

Mr. Debs was described as a model prisoner at Atlanta; in fact, Warden Verst, and Father Byrne, prison chaplain, united in declaring him to be "an influence for good." While serving his sentence he was the choice of nearly a million voters for President. He was 66 years of age last month.

"The list in the main," said an executive statement given out at the White House, "is made up of those who opposed the war in one way or another, and it is made up of less than a third of I.W.W. prisoners, and these have either expressed full penitence, or are booked for deportation. The Department of Justice has given no recommendation in behalf of the advocates of Sabotage or the destruction of government by force, and the President let it be known that he would not consider such cases. In addition to the five soldiers on the list, many other cases are under consideration.

Salvation Army Bandsman's Testimonial in Favour of

Dr. Henderson's Herb Tablets

Mr. Russell Reeve, 23 Cornhill St., Chatham, Ont., says:

Gentlemen: Just a few lines to thank you for the wonderful benefit I have received from Dr. Henderson's Herb Treatment. For 25 years or more I have suffered from Catarrh of the head, brought on by going under the water too much. I had a very disagreeable discharge from my ear, which was very annoying as well as loathsome. I had tried several different treatments that were recommended to me, but they did not appear to help me. I purchased a box of your Herb Treatment and after using it for a time the discharge had ceased and it has never bothered me for over a year. I am certainly grateful to your agent for ever selling them to me. You can use this letter in any way that you choose for the benefit of others.

Dr. Henderson's Herb Tablets are not a "Cure all." It is simply a combination of herbs, roots, barks and juice of fruits that act directly upon the important internal organs, aiding them to perform their functions properly and thus to expel wastes and poisons from the system. In this natural way the body is given a thorough internal cleansing and then the forces of Nature can act vigorously and freely in rebuilding and restoring the affected parts. Try a box and watch the results. Price 25c., 50c. and $1.00 per box at WARNE'S DRUG STORE, Peterborough.

A Merry Christmas To You All

We take this means to extend to each and every one the Compliments of the Season and to wish you all a Merry Christmas

RICHARD HALL & SON LTD

MR. F. H. DOBBIN ON FACTS

The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I thank you for your moderate, rather kindly and wholly justified remarks on my letter of, and in your issue of, Thursday. May I also commend your strictures as such as may assist in drawing out further dicussions on this matter, that of desirable civic representation in our municipal Council. But, my dear sir, I think your comparisons are not well taken. No one expects that you or the staff would essay any of the works you mention, no matter how needful or laborious they might be.

For instance, and in a similar vein. If you and I were on a summer day to go waterway down the river to Harwood, and you should assume and take charge of the engine, why I at once ,and judiciously, would ask to be put ashore. If we attended service at a local church on a Sunday and you walked into the pulpit and essayed to preach the sermon, why I, justifiably, I think, would make for home. Every man to his trade.

But what I really wished was that you, in order to get for yourself the facts first-hand, would go out and pry into the public mind, feel the public pulse and learn and gain first-hand impressions. I really do believe that you would then write with appreciation of what this municipalty is up against. Try it next year, about December the first. It is, I know, human nature to point out a way, but the fellows who really count are those who blaze a trail and then work to make it passable.

May I illustrate the situation by reference to another phase of deep public concern. Hundreds of people in this city have heard and talked of unemployment and privation. Paid about as much attention to the situtions and statements as they did to the rash of sacrlet fever cards that are tacked up on our houses. But now, thank goodness, you have over a hundred men and women roused to the actual situation and busy in trying by practical work to allay want and scarcity.

These people have no illusions I assure. They have come from the homes and have seen, have talked the situation over with those who are in want. Realize as they did not conceive what the situation really is. That "there are lots of people who won't work" is not just as truthful as they inferred. For there be homes where when privation came in at the door love flew out at the window.

In passing may I add that if you had sent your able and carefully competent writer, Miss Kathleen McCarthy, with her womanly sympathies and feminine intuition around with a couple of men to-day, who made thirty-one calls and left tokens of their visits you would have a story, that without trespassing on individual self-respect, would have moved the city. And in some such way I wish you would go hunting up possible candidates of the right sort, the "better men." Be a municipal missionary in the field of selection.

Getting the facts first-hand is important. When I went into the newspaper business (no, profession) and word came in that a man had fallen off a three-story building and broken a wheelbarrow in his fall. I was told to see the man, if possible, and to look at the wheelbarrow. The injuries to the man would be bad enough but to the wheelbarrow not so serious as reported. Then the matter could be written up with clearness, having assessed both casualties.

May I ask you, after this election is over, to review the situation in the light of the results and the possibilities for the future and sound the city if we should go not back to the ward system. I repeat my impression that the general vote for aldermen, is a failure. Sitting with twenty men, not one could suggest two men available from East City. Yet East City knows, and would produce the men if not hindered by this general vote business. And I make this statement, as having voted, in Council, in favor of it. But I think I have seen a light. The intimate knowledge that men and women voters living in a ward have of their fellow citizens is a thing that may not be gained in a review of the city at large. I may be wrong, but by Heck I'll stick to it anyway.

Yours to Christmas,
F. H. DOBBIN.

BIG SISTERHOOD ARE DOING SPLENDID WORK

COMPREHENSIVE CHRISTIAN WORK COVERS ALMOST EVERY WANT.

The receiving room for food and clothing which is situated above the Peterborough Milk Products' establishment on Aylmer street, and is used as a central receiving station by the Big Sisterhood, who are doing so much good this winter in aid of the needy and afflicted, is a busy centre. Here are all sorts of supplies; clothing in piles, men's and boys' suits, coats, skirts, shoes, hats; bedding in the shape of quilts and comforters soft and warm for the bitter weather; bags of potatoes and of apples; pork in sizable portions; dry vegetables; Christmas cheer and toys in boxes ready for distribution; lists ready for the packing of the Christmas baskets, a comprehensive charity spirit prevailing which covers almost every want of those who are unable, through long-continued sickness or unemployment, to help themselves to any great extent Particularly in cases where there are children, the need is immediate. The adults have perhaps a greater resistance to the evils of partial hunger, cold and privation, but the health of little things may be irreparably injured by want in early life, even if it exists for a period of a few months. These women come across many pitiful cases, and find, they say, always some kind impulse to help the evil, if it but made known. A woman in need of milk and unable to buy it was promised a quart a day by an unknown benefactor, another, whose appearance on a casual call did not betray any particular need, was asked if anything could be given her at Christmas time which would be particularly acceptable, the caller thinking toys for the children might be requested. The answer was: "some bread and tea for the little ones." Another family had sold nearly everything in the house which might be converted into cash before they would appeal for assistance, and still another had an almost absolutely empty larder when visited, and a substantial order, including such filling things as materials for good stout porridge for the children and a hearty soup-pot, was dispatched immediately on application to a generous friend. A man in dire need of fuel was relieved by a load of wood brought in by a kindly farm resident, and so the tale goes, day by day. It is not easy or luxurious work, by any means. There isn't anything very attractive in making up clothing of all sorts, and going out in all weather to provide help for those in need, but it is a work that brings its own reward, and the workers are happy and cheerful. They would like more than anything else, just now, gifts of vegetables and food stuffs, as they have quite a supply of clothing on hand.

Outside Contributions.

Ladies from Springville and from Fairbanks have sent in a large quantity of useful articles, including some good bedding; ladies from North Monaghan have donated many excellent things, and eighteen boxes of Christmas cheer; potatoes and apples, cakes, pies, butter have been received from kind friends in the city, and Mr. V. E. Taplin made the very generous and acceptable present of a quarter of beef to be distributed by the workers.

Donations in cash are gratefully acknowledged by the Big Sisterhood, as follows: His Lordship, Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterborough, $10; Fairbanks Sunday school, $5; Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, $1; Mr. J. P. Cunningham $5. Total $21.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

INMATES PROTESTANT HOME ENTERTAINED

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS EVENT OFFERED ABUNDANCE OF GOOD CHEER.

The annual Christmas entertainment for the inmates of the Protestant Home was held yesterday afternoon, when a very enjoyable time was spent by the members of the Home and the Board of Managers. The large Christmas tree and the pretty living-room were beautifully decorated with bright holly wreaths, tinsel and festoons of red and green, and the tree itself was laden with useful and pretty gifts for every one of the thirty odd members. "It is quite evident," as one onlooker remarked, "that Miss Lancaster spares no time nor effort, in getting up this treat. Every person in the house is remembered most generously and frequently."

A very good musical programme was rendered by vocal solos from Mrs. Walter Byers, Rev. J. A. Mackenzie, Mr. F. E. Walden and Master Kenneth McCannon, with a beautiful quartette; "Holy Night," by the combined voices. Excellent readings were given by Miss Marguerite Mason. Mr. Walden acted as accompanist for the occasion, and Rev. J. A. Mackenzie took the chair in his usual proficient way.

Regret was expressed by members at the unavoidable absence, through illness, of the president of the Board, Mrs. W. Roger, and of Miss Flora Davidson, the secretary, whose recent bereavement made it impossible for her to be present.

ABOLITION OF SUBMARINE CONSIDERED IMPROBABLE.

LONDON, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—General newspaper opinion here favors the abolition of the submarine and there are many regrets that there seems to be no prospect of its being brought about, but on the other hand there is some skepticism regarding the possibility of preventing the use of submersibles even if the conference adopted Lord Lee's proposal.

KAISER DEBATE ROCKS GERMANY.

Correspondence Re-opens the Query Whether Flight to Holland Was Cowardice

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—Is the former Kaiser, Wilhelm II. a coward or a martyr?

This question confronts the German nation following publication of his correspondence with Field Mrashal Von Hindenburg in which the former Emperor passed the "buck" for his flight into Holland following the collapse of the German army.

Publication of the letters was designed to prove William was not guilty of cowardice in fleeing from Germany, and that he had attempted ed to prevent the war.

The entire Nationalist press has accepted all the statements in the letters as true and is fairly reveling in eulogies of the "noble sacrifice" of the former war lord.

Junkers Rap Both

The only jarring note was sounded by some of the Junker newspapers, which expressed the opinion that the Kaiser's place at the moment of the nation's gravest peril was at the head of the army. The Junker papers put the resonsibility upon Von Hindenburg for proposing the Kaiser's flight, but say that the advice should not have been taken.

Leaders of the Junker faction charactize the revelations as "Hindenburg's Christmas present to the nation". It has come as a shock however, in view of the fact that it was sprung at the hour of Germany's admitted bankruptcy and on the eve of the conference of Premier Lloyd George and Premier Briand in London. It is feared that the correspondence will furnish ammunition for the French irreconcilables

As to Hindenburg, his unshaken loyalty to his old sovereign is universally admitted. Even enemies of the aged veteran praise his devotion.

Cite Effect On Army

Impartial critics, not allied with the Nationalists or Junker groups contend that the former Kaiser's fight was an unpardonable mistake. They argue that instead of averting internal bloodshed, it was the straw that broke the camel's back —the camel being Prusian army discipline. With the war lord gone the bottom dropped out.

The opinion was widely held that while the correspondence might soften the bitterness against Wilhelm, it was not sufficient to create any sympathy in his behalf or raise any desire for his return.

It was freely admitted that Germany—now a land of apathy indifference and uncertainities—is through with him and the former Crown Prince.

An indication of the general tenor of the sentiment was the action of the Reichstag in rejecting by a large majority, a resolution to retain the old Imperial standard over Germany's merchant ships.

Hindenburg's Protest

In his letter sent late in March Hindenburg declared that German representatives had been blackmailed into admitting Germany's war guilt adding:

"During my long military service I had the good fortune and honor to come into close personal relations with Your Majesty. I know that your Majesty's work and endeavor during your whole period of rule served to maintain the peace."

In his reply on April 5, Wilhelm sad in part:

"As you know I wrestled my way to the heavy frightful decision to leave the country only on your urgent representations and those of my other responsible advisers, that in this way alone would it be possible to obtain more favorable armistice condition for our country, and spare it bloody civil war. The sacrifice has not been in vain.

"Had we ever had war-like intentons we would have acted in 1900 when England was tied up by the Boer war, or in 1905 when Russia was tied up by the Japanese war."

HAVE NO DIFFIDENCE IN ASKING FOR RELIEF

BUREAU AT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ACTS SYMPATHETICALLY AND CONFIDENTIALLY.

The bureau for confidential information just established at the Chamber of Commerce by the Federated Charities of the city, is already doing some good work. A young lady is in charge, and is kept quite busy answering enquiries and receiving information of all sorts in connection with the work. Eighteen societies interested in charitable endeavor are already affiliated with the bureau and are finding it a source of help in the carrying out of their business.

As there is always only a certain sum available by any one organization to carry on its charitable work, and, although its aims may be large, its finances cannot stretch over a given outlay, each society therefore wishes to expend its funds to the very best possible advantage, and to aid the greatest number of people. Two or more different societies in different sections of the city, with different church affiliations, which might possibly be assisting the same set of peop'e, while others were in need just around the corner, and not in the way of being helped by anyone, would really not be doing as good or efficient service to the community as a society helping a certain number of people who were receiving no assistance from any other source. In other words, there are cases on record, which have been discovered since the bureau of information was opened, where certain people were practically making a business of receiving charitable aid from four or five or six different organizations, while several deserving cases have been unearthed through the same means where no assistance whatever was rendered from any quarter.

Strictly Confidential.

The system of absolute confidence with which all information is regarded and maintained makes it possible for even the most proud-spirited people to apply for help, without the fear that their condition will be reported to unsympathetic ears, and the secret record which is kept of all cases is available to two members only from each affiliated society who are supplied with a secret code number which is required before any information will be given.

Cheer and Work.

In the distributing of Christmas cheer, the purpose of which is to reach as many needy families without duplication, if possible, the bureau has proved of assistance, to the G.W.V.A.; to the Kiwanis Club, which is supplying forty families with orders of $4 each on local merchants; and to the Rotary Club, whose operations include the looking after of forty or more families also. The latter club does not rest content with supplying Christmas cheer. It is interested also in the supplying of work, wherever possible, in assistance with regard to fuel and to arrears of rent, as in the case of a man who was served with a bailiff's notice for a rent bill of $17, and it interests itself in minor matters, such as the replacing of a broken pump, an all-round sort of charitable endeavor which is doubtless mighty comforting to the people who come within its influence.

That the kindly impulses which are directed towards the alleviation of want and distress, particularly at this season of the year, might be made a matter of unscrupulous commercialization, is always possible and it is to avoid this, and spread the mantle of their help farther than it extends at present, that the little clearing-house for charitable information has been established. Those societies who make use of it have already profited by its help, which is rendered all the more efficient by the active co-operation of the City Relief Officer, Mr. F. W. Miller.

TRADE OPTIMISM FOR NEW YEAR IS APPARENT IN WEST.

RETAIL BUSINESS IN LARGER ONTARIO CITIES GREATLY IMPROVED PAST TWO WEEKS

WINNIPEG, Dec. 14.—(By Canadian Press.)— Business conditions in general throughout Canada cannot quite be judged by seasonable activity and for the same reason statistics are always difficult to obtain at this time of the year. A summing up of the situation, however, would lead one to believe that little change has taken place in manufacturing wholesale and jobbing circles during the past two weeks and the word "quiet" in most advices received seems generally sustantiated states the weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Man's Trust Association.

Montreal and Quebec provincial reports state that wholesalers, manufacturers and jobbers find the trade situation about the same. Naturally during the past few weeks there has been considerable improvement in retail circles, but less actively than for the same time in 1920. Failures have recently shown a decline, this being usual in December and collections are "fair to slow."

Toronto wholesalers found orders slackening up with the near approach of Christmas. Furniture, ladies' and men's wear, musical instruments and groceries are about the only lines fairly active. Retail trade in larger cities has greatly improved during the past two weeks. Collections are fair only.

Winnipeg and the west reports orders received by wholesalers are receiving very close scrutiny before being filled, and the volume of business thus curtailed. The general feeling in producing circles is that there are still many retailers who will have to take losses and unload in order to be able to re-stock at replacement values and successfully meet outside competition which is more than ever felt, mostly in country towns. The general opinion among leading business men is that the bottom of the "ladder" has been reached and that 1922 cannot but see a distinct improvement in western conditions. Retail trade in the larger cities this Christmas season has surpassed expectatons, many leading merchants say, and and a general feeling of optimism for the New Year is apparent.

THE ARMS CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, December 24. — Canadian Press. — The submarine problem and the new four power treaty, the one constituting the unfinished business of the arms conference and the other attracting interest, because of the differen e in view between President Harding and the United States delegation, last night divided the attention of the plenipotentiaries of the powers assembled in Washington.

New prominence was given the treaty discussions during the day by a public statement by the President characterizing the differences over interpretation of the pact as "unimportant" and declaring the United States delegates had the full confidence of the White House.

Milady Looks to Parley In Vain For New Styles

WASHINGTON, December 23—Historians say the fashions of the common people are set by the plenipotentiaries of both sexes. If that law were applied to the present Arms Conference, the everyday woman would certainly be at a loss as regards "what to wear."

If the Conference first ladies — Mme. Viviani, Mme. Koo, and Lady Lee—brought with them any novel ideas of style, the American ladies never knew it. And, conversely, if the American modistes had anything new to offer in the way of troitcours or paniers or crepe de chines, the Conference ladies never knw it.

Hairdressers in the several hotels caught occasional glimpses of patronage, but in each case, with the possible exception of Mme. Koo, no new ideas were developed on the coiffeur. Each lady stood out for the status quo of her permanent wave. At least Mme. Koo has been riding down town several times a week to have her hair dressed. She alone has taken a stand against the permanent wave and always wears her hair combed straight back. If one would see an American counterpart of this, let her attend the nearest "vamp" movie.

Never has the British influence predominated in the drapery of the feminine form. All-out-of-doors is the ruling passion of the English woman, and the gorgeous refinements of dress seem to occupy a secondary position in her life.

Not so the French woman. From the incongruous squareness of her short-vamped slippers to the riotous colour of her tea-time turban (and all the lures of abbreviated dress, thin silk stockings, rouge and curiously scented powder) she reflects a vitality of interest in clothes.

But all the French influence in Washington antedated the Conference. No debutante or matron approached her dressmaker with the demand for "a dress like the one Mme. Viviani wore at the President's dinner." The presence of Mme. Koo, the charmingly beautiful wife of China's ranking delegate and the daughter of Java's "sugar king," interposed no Oriental cross-current of style. Even she was ruled by the French mode and all her finery was purchased abroad.

To those whose panorama of the Conference was not confined to the drab routine of society columns, perhaps the European manner of painting the face and arching the eyebrow did not escape unnoticed. However, the fact that these visiting ladies do not use rouge on their cheeks, but cover their faces with a cream-coloured powder, paint their lips, and pencil their eyebrows and eyelids, has not changed the technique of the beauty parlours in Washington. The debutante still rouges and the matron still enamels and the big pink blotch of dry, hard colour on every cheek bone holds its place.

THE SPIRITUAL RAILROAD.

The road to heaven by Christ was made,
With heavenly truths the rails were laid;
From earth to heaven the line extends,
To life eternal, where it ends.

Repentence is the station then,
Where passengers are taken in.
No fee is there for them to pay
For Jesus is Himself the way.

The Bible is the engineer
That points the way to heaven so clear.
All then who would to glory ride
Must come to Christ, in Him abide.

We're travelling through a desert here
Of glimmering hope and glimmering fear;
Though dangers here our road may cross,
Twill crave our gain, but not our loss.

At times our steam is very low,
We do not move nor seem to go;
But move we ought and never stand
Until we gain that happy land.

A GOLD WATCH FOR MR. HARRY BEATTY.

Handsome Christmas Gift for Utilities Foreman.

On Friday evening, at Sherbrooke street sub-station, the employees of the electric light line construction gang of the Utilities Commission presented their foreman; Mr. Harry Beatty, with a handsome Christmas gift in the form of a beautiful gold watch. The presentation, which was made by Mr. Jno. Masters was accompanied by an address read by Mr. Jas. Platt as follows:

"To Mr. H. Beatty: As the Yuletide season is fast approaching, and the year is coming to a close, the boys wish to show the esteem in which you are held by them, and ask you to accept this watch, hoping that while you wear it, you will always remember the boys of 1921.

Wishing you and your family a merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.',

Signed on behalf of the boys.

Mr. Beatty made a suitable reply in acknowledgment.

Fruit, cheese omelet and rice griddle cakes make a satisfying breakfast.

A Christmas Story For Peterborough Kiddies

(By Jeannette.)

Bobby was restless. He didn't want to go to sleep, and had cried and cut up dreadfully when they put him to bed, for it was the night before Christmas, and this was the night when Santa came with his reindeer and filled up your stocking. Bobbie's stocking was fastened securely to the bed-post. The wide-open little eyes could see the limp blackness of it in the faint glimmer from the hall light.

Suppose Santa didn't come Suppose there wasn't any Santa, like Tommy Smith had said last week at school. Bobby was only five, and Santa was one of his most cherished gods. He had written the old gentleman a long letter, and there weren't so many things in it after all. Just a drum, and an engine with tracks, and some tin soldiers, and an elephant, and a game of Twirligig, and two picture books and some oranges and candy and nuts, and a postscript requesting a candy cane. That was all.

If there wasn't any Santa, where did all the letters go to? And who filled por stocking Tommy said it was your father and mother and yet Daddy had promised to let the grate-fire burn down, so Santa wouldn't get his coat-tails burned, and Mother said she would leave a lunch on the table for him. Cheese and bread and a cup of tea. But the tea would be cold before he came, Daddy and Mother both said he never came until the middle of the black night. Suppose he didn't come, and there wouldn't be anything in the stocking in the morning, suppose—Bobby was asleep.

And then Santa came and Bobby heard him, but he didn't wake up. First a clatter of tiny hoofs, and a stamp, stamp of restless feet as the laden sledge coasted on to the roof. Santa jumped out and addressed his wife, Mrs. Claus, who had insisted upon accompanying him on this trip. Bobby could hear their voices as plain as anything. Santa said rather crossly, "But this is the little boy who doesn't believe in me, and besides, he wants too much. Look at the list he sent, and you know how many children I have to visit to-night, and most of them don't want as much as this child." And Bobby could hear Mrs. Santa say softly, "Well, you must leave him something. He isn't a bad child." The little listener shrieked at the top of his voice, "Yes, and I've been as good as good can be and never got a spanking all last week," but nobody paid any attention to him, and when he stole downstairs and into the living room, Santa never even glanced at him. The old gentleman was standing by the fireside, rubbing his knee, which had been bruised a little in the narrow chimney, and his red coat and white fur collar, long, bushy beard and pointed cap were just as Bobby had always pictured him. He was eating the bread and cheese when Bobby apeared, but neglected the tea, which had become very cold.

Presently Mrs. Santa called down the chimney for him to hurry up, and, with a last hasty swallow, he took a litle red drum and a big gray-cloth elephant from his capacious pockets and deposited them on the table, and scrambled back up the chimney again.

The last the speechless little watcher saw of him was his heavy leather boots disappearing up the black orifice. Bobby sighed deeply, rubbed his eyes and went upstairs to bed.

And in the morning, when he was showing his drum and his big gray elephant to Tommy Smith, he said: "You see, Daddy and Mother filled up my stocking, because Santa hadn't time for that, but he brought me these, for I saw him, and I think he was pretty good to remember me, when there were so many other little girls and boys wanting things, don't you?"

Christmas Pictures

Kitchen filled with spicy, sweet odors; pounds of stoned raisins and jar of molasses on sundry tables; oranges and grapes and dates in yellow and green and brown piles in the fruit stores; spotless meringues and cherry-dotten icings in the cake-shops; proud fowls, treacherously fattened, strutting about a snow-caked barnyard; the same fowl in stiff, tied-up rows on market tables; red and green paper and golden tinsel in the windows; long lines of people waiting the pleasure of a harassed young man at a busy post-office window; hundreds of pairs of aching feet behind long counters; silks and satins in rose-pink and jade and heavy cream; pom-pomed slippers in trim, dainty styles; misty hand kerchiefs in piled cornucopias; holly with spiked leaves and gleaming red berries; cries of "Merry Christmas" on crowded streets; diamonds gleaming and blinking in white velvet cases in the jeweller's windows; two ragged children picking a cut-out picture book from a garbage can; Sunday school treats, with throngs of excited faces and a plenitude of and many more.

sweets; Santa Claus perspiring in red suits and heavy- bearded masks; little letters to "The North Pole," asking for a "tie for daddy and a rolling-pin for Mother"; charitable women workers toiling over musty piles of old clothing and heavy bags of raw potatoes; clerks in the banks computing the probable amount of their yearly bonus; men out of work gazing in the shop windows; women with baby carriages on the thronged ways; flowers in pale-green paper wrappings speeding to hospitals, and homes, and funerals; a woman asking for "bread and tea" for the children, in a house with an empty larder; Christmas gifts in bureau drawers, tied with red ribbon and white, crinkly paper; choirs in churches practising carols; a baby in toy-land rejecting the novelties and demanding a "real live baby" for her Christmas; a family who have sold most of their furniture tearing up the stair carpet to sell for food; women buying last minute gifts with feverish intensity; trains rushing people from one centre to spend the holiday, and back again to get some more passengers to go somewhere else; these,

SO MANY PEOPLE ARE NERVOUS

"Fruit-a-tives" the Greatest of all Nerve Remedies

This Fruit Medicine Restores Health

The increase in the number of persons suffering from Nervousness is world-wide; due, in a measure, to the reaction following the war. Sleeplessness, Headaches, Mental Depression, Rheumatism, Nervous Dyspepsia, Bad Heart Action, are the results of a disturbed condition of the Nervous System.

The nerves and the blood are so intimately, so vitally, connected that the condition of one is bound to affect the condition of the other. If the blood is laden with impurities, it is impossible to have strong, steady nerves.

The first essential in treating nervous troubles is to purify and enrich the blood. This, "FRUIT-A-TIVES" will do.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" stimulates the bowels, kidneys and skin and purifies the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" improves appetite and digestion and insures food being properly digested, thus enabling the blood to carry wholesome nourishment to build up the body, particularly the nerves.

Men and women who take "Fruit-a-tives" for some form of nervousness—because they cannot eat or sleep or work or enjoy life—say that this fruit medicine is simply marvellous in its action.

THE FIRST POEM ABOUT CHRISTMAS

"The first poem written about Christmas," says a writer, "is really the first half of the second chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke. True and wondrous poetry is this simple but sublime narration giving us the living and breathing spirit of Christmas."

"Perhaps the most ancient Christmas poem we have was written in Latin by Seduluis, a native of Ireland, born about the year 400. It is curious and strange to note that from the time of Seduluis we have to go forward a full thousand years before we find Christmas poems written in English, and even then, these poems need a glossary to be perfectly understood. William Dunbar, who was born in 145 and died in 1520, wrote a poem on Christmas, one stanza of which runs:

"Sing, hevin imperial, most of hicht
Regions of air mak armony!
All fish in flud and fowl of flicht
Be mirthful and mak melody!
All 'Gloria in Excelsis' cry,
Heaven, erd, se, man, bird and best—
He that is crownit abone the sky,
Puer nobis Puer natus est!"

From an even earlier (anonymous) poem:

"The flour spronge in heye Bedlem
That is both bryht and schen;
The rose is Mary hevene gwyn
Out of her bosom
the blosme sprong.'

The greatest of Christmas poems is doubtless John Milton's celebrated "Ode on the Nativity," and Richard Crashaw, born in 1613, was another of the earlier English poets who sang of Christmas:

"I saw the curled drops, soft and slow,
Come hovering over the place's head,
Offring their whitest sheets of snow
To furnish the fair Infant's bed.
Forbear, said I, be not too bold,
Your fleece is white, but 'tis too cold!"

John Keble, the illustrious author of "The Christian Year," sang of the Nativity:

"But where Thou dwellest, Lord,
No other thought should be,
Once duly welcomed and adored,
How should I part with Thee?
Bethlehem must lose Thee soon, but
Thou wilt grace
The single heart to be Thy sure
abiding-place!"

Robert Stephen Hawker, one of the moderns, writes of "King Arthur's Waes-Hael":

"Waes-hael! in shadowy scene,
Lo! Chistmas children we;
Drink-hael; behold we lean
At a fair Mother's knee;
To dream that thus her bosom smiled,
And learn the lisp of Bethlehem's
Child!"

John Bannister Tabb is another modern who excells in minute little gems of poesy, like:

THE LAMB-CHILD.

When Christ the Babe was born,
Full many a little lamb
Upon the wintry hills forlorn
Was nestled near its dam;

And, waking or asleep,
Upon his mother's breast,
For love of her, each mother-sheep
And baby lamb He blessed.

THE CHILDREN'S TIME.

(By Jeannette.)

Little faces at th window,
Peering through the heavy plate,
Little eyes grow round with wonder,
'Mother, look, ain't Santa great "
Little hands are tired of waiting,
Reaching out for painted toys,
"Go to sleep; you must remember
Santa likes good girls and boys."
Little voices raised in laughter,
Bare feet slipping down the stair,
"Look, a doll," and "Here's my engine,"
"See my wee red rocking-chair."
Prattling tongues and happy faces,
Soon they'll reach to manhood's prime;
Make them happy while they're little,
Christmas s the children's time.

"Ye Miracles of Ye Seasons"

"Whosoever on ye nighte of ye nativity of ye young Lord Jesus, in e greate snows, shall fare forth bearing a succulent bone for e loste and lamenting hounds, a wisp of hay for ye shivering horse, a cloak of warm raiment for ye stranded warfarer, a bundle of faggots for ye twittering crone, a flagon of red wine for him whose marrow withers, a garland of bright berries for one who has worn chains, gay arias of lute and harp for all huddled birds who thought that song was dead, and divers lush sweetmeats for such babes' faces as peer from lonely windows—

'To him shall be proferred and returned gifts of such an astonishment as will rival the hues of the peacock and the harmonies of heaven, so that that though he live to ye greate age when man goes stooping and querulous because of the nothing that is left in him, yet shall he walk upright and remembering as one whose heart shines like a greate star in his creaste."

HAPPY CHRISTMAS

(A Christcmas Message From the Rev. Dyson Hague of Toronto.)

Not long ago, a teacher asked the scholars in a city school this question: "Why do we keep Christmas" and a tinq little mite, in the ingenious answer of innocence, voiced a world of meaning when she said: "Please, sir, because it is God's birthday." Yes. That little one was right. That's why this old old world once more is shedding for a day its selfishness and its hardness of heart. That's why once more a million hearts are radiant with gladness, peace and hope. That's why the angels' songs are re-echoing not only in that tiny corner of the Orient, but in a chorus of super-national happiness, in the East, in the West, in the North, in the South. Strange and innumerable have been the changes of this world in twenty centuries, but the jubilations still go on. In the darkest season of the year, the rays of love and charity, of hilarious giving and simple joy, break forth with undiminished splendour. All that is best and beautiful in the world to-day was born that day, and the reason why that day changed the world was simply this: It was God's birthday!

Did you ever think what the first syllable of Christmas is? The letters just spell out the word Christ. That explains everything. The songs, the music, the angels, the light, the glory, the brilliant sky the entralling words: "Good tidings—great joy—unto you—this day—is born—, for all—on earth—peace—goodwill."

O, children, come, and glady bring the treasures of your hearts, like gold and frankincense and myrrh and give them as your gifts to your Saviour, Christ the Lord. And you, oh parents, as you deck the Christmas tree, remember that all the deepest, truest joy of home and hearth and heart, comes from the coming of that Saviour Child. And, oh, you care-worn men and women of this busy world, surcease once more your toil, and in a new-born dream of highest pleasure, if only for a day, tread after Him who went about doing good, drown every grudge, kill every hate, give happiness to some poor brother sister heart. Oh, that the tired, weary, listless ones of this chart-hungry world colld only take the place of that little one who heard for the first time in her lrst church service, the wonderful story, "Unto us a child is born," and whispered to her mother, in the light of a sudden revelation, "Mother! Mother! he means us." Yes, and sweeter still, "This wonderful just means—me."

A Christmas Story For Peterborough Kiddies

(By Jeannette.)

Bobby was restless. He didn't want to go to sleep, and had cried and cut up dreadfully when they put him to bed, for it was the night before Christmas, and this was the night when Santa came with his reindeer and filled up your stocking. Bobbie's stocking was fastened securely to the bed-post. The wide-open little eyes could see the limp blackness of it in the faint glimmer from the hall light.

Suppose Santa didn't come Suppose there wasn't any Santa, like Tommy Smith had said last week at school. Bobby was only five, and Santa was one of his most cherished gods. He had written the old gentleman a long letter, and there weren't so many things in it after all. Just a drum, and an engine with tracks, and some tin soldiers, and an elephant, and a game of Twirligig, and two picture books and some oranges and candy and nuts, and a postscript requesting a candy cane. That was all.

If there wasn't any Santa, where did all the letters go to? And who filled por stocking Tommy said it was your father and mother and yet Daddy had promised to let the grate-fire burn down, so Santa wouldn't get his coat-tails burned, and Mother said she would leave a lunch on the table for him. Cheese and bread and a cup of tea. But the tea would be cold before he came. Daddy and Mother both said he never came until the middle of the black night. Suppose he didn't come, and there wouldn't be anything in the stocking in the morning, suppose—Bobby was asleep.

And then Santa came and Bobby heard him, but he didn't wake up. First a clatter of tiny hoofs, and a stamp, stamp of restless feet as the laden sledge coasted on to the roof. Santa jumped out and addressed his wife, Mrs. Claus, who had insisted upon accompanying him on this trip. Bobby could hear their voices as plain as anything. Santa said rather crossly, "But this is the little boy who doesn't believe in me, and besides, he wants too much. Look at the list he sent, and you know how many children I have to visit to-night, and most of them don't want as much as this child." And Bobby could hear Mrs. Santa say softly, "Well, you must leave him something. He isn't a bad child." The little listener shrieked at the top of his voice, "Yes, and I've been as good as good can be and never got a spanking all last week," but nobody paid any attention to him, and when he stole downstairs and into the living room, Santa never even glanced at him. The old gentleman was standing by the fireside, rubbing his knee, which had been bruised a little in the narrow chimney, and his red coat and white fur collar, long, bushy beard and pointed cap were just as Bobby had always pictured him. He was eating the bread and cheese when Bobby apeared, but neglected the tea, which had become very cold.

Presently Mrs. Santa called down the chimney for him to hurry up, and, with a last hasty swallow, he took a little red drum and a big gray-cloth elephant from his capacious pockets and deposited them on the table, and scrambled back up the chimney again.

The last the speechless little watcher saw of him was his heavy leather boots disappearing up the black orifice. Bobby sighed deeply, rubbed his eyes and went upstairs to bed.

And in the morning, when he was showing his drum and his big gray elephant to Tommy Smith, he said: "You see, Daddy and Mother filled up my stocking, because Santa hadn't time for that, but he brought me these, for I saw him, and I think he was pretty good to remember me, when there were so many other little girls and boys wanting things, don't you?"

Christmas Pictures

Kitchen filled with spicy, sweet odors; pounds of stoned raisins and jar of molasses on sundry tables; oranges and grapes and dates in yellow and green and brown piles in the fruit stores; spotless meringues and cherry-dotten icings in the cake-shops; proud fowls, treacherously fattened, strutting about a snow-caked barnyard; the same fowl in stiff, tied-up rows on market tables; red and green paper and golden tinsel in the windows; long lines of people waiting the pleasure of a harassed young man at a busy post-office window; hundreds of pairs of aching feet behind long counters; silks and satins in rose-pink and jade and heavy cream; pom-pomed slippers in trim, dainty styles; misty hand kerchiefs in piled cornucopias; holly with spiked leaves and gleaming red berries; cries of "Merry Christmas" on crowded streets; diamonds gleaming and blinking in white velvet cases in the jeweller's windows; two ragged children picking a cut-out picture book from a garbage can; Sunday school treats, with throngs of excited faces and a plenitude of and many more.

sweets; Santa Claus perspiring in red suits and heavy- bearded masks; little letters to "The North Pole," asking for a "tie for daddy and a rolling-pin for Mother"; charitable women workers toiling over musty piles of old clothing and heavy bags of raw potatoes; clerks in the banks computing the probable amount of their yearly bonus; men out of work gazing in the shop windows; women with baby carriages on the thronged ways; flowers in pale-green paper wrappings speeding to hospitals, and homes, and funerals; a woman asking for "bread and tea" for the children, in a house with an empty larder; Christmas gifts in bureau drawers, tied with red ribbon and white, crinkly paper; choirs in churches practising carols; a baby in toy-land rejecting the novelties and demanding a "real live baby" for her Christmas; a family who have sold most of their furniture tearing up the stair carpet to sell for food; women buying last minute gifts with feverish intensity; trains rushing people from one centre to spend the holiday, and back again to get some more passengers to go somewhere else; these,

SO MANY PEOPLE ARE NERVOUS

This Fruit Medicine Restores Health

The increase in the number of persons suffering from Nervousness is world-wide; due, in a measure, to the reaction following the war. Sleeplessness, Headaches, Mental Depression, Rheumatism, Nervous Dyspepsia, Bad Heart Action, are the results of a disturbed condition of the Nervous System.

The nerves and the blood are so intimately, so vitally, connected that the condition of one is bound to affect the condition of the other. If the blood is laden with impurities, it is impossible to have strong, steady nerves.

The first essential in treating nervous troubles is to purify and enrich the blood. This, "FRUIT-A-TIVES" will do.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" stimulates the bowels, kidneys and skin and purifies the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" improves appetite and digestion and insures food being properly digested, thus enabling the blood to carry wholesome nourishment to build up the body, particularly the nerves.

Men and women who take "Fruit-a-tives" for some form of nervousness—because they cannot eat or sleep or work or enjoy life—say that this fruit medicine is simply marvellous in its action.

THE FIRST POEM ABOUT CHRISTMAS

"The first poem written about Christmas," says a writer, "is really the first half of the second chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke. True and wondrous poetry is this simple but sublime narration giving us the living and breathing spirit of Christmas."

"Perhaps the most ancient Christmas poem we have was written in Latin by Seduluis, a native of Ireland, born about the year 400. It is curious and strange to note that from the time of Seduluis we have to go forward a full thousand years before we find Christmas poems written in English, and even then, these poems need a glossary to be perfectly understood. William Dunbar, who was born in 145 and died in 1520, wrote a poem on Christmas, one stanza of which runs:

"Sing, hevin imperial, most of hicht
Regions of air mak armony!
All fish in flud and fowl of flicht
Be mirthful and mak melody!
All 'Gloria in Excelsis' cry,
Heaven, erd, se, man, bird and best—
He that is crownit abone the sky,
Puer nobis Puer natus est!"

From an even earlier (anonymous) poem:

"The flour spronge in heye Bedlem
That is both bryht and schen;
The rose is Mary hevene gwyn
Out of her bosom
the blosme sprong.'

The greatest of Christmas poems is doubtless John Milton's celebrated "Ode on the Nativity," and Richard Crashaw, born in 1613, was another of the earlier English poets who sang of Christmas:

"I saw the curled drops, soft and slow,
Come hovering over the place's head,
Off'ring their whitest sheets of snow
To furnish the fair Infant's bed.
Forbear, said I, be not too bold,
Your fleece is white, but 'tis too cold!"

John Keble, the illustrious author of "The Christian Year," sang of the Nativity:

"But where Thou dwellest, Lord,
No other thought should be,
Once duly welcomed and adored,
How should I part with Thee?
Bethlehem must lose Thee soon, but
Thou wilt grace
The single heart to be Thy sure
abiding-place!"

Robert Stephen Hawker, one of the moderns, writes of "King Arthur's Waes-Hael":

"Waes-hael! in shadowy scene,
Lo! Chistmas children we;
Drink-hael; behold we lean
At a fair Mother's knee;
To dream that thus her bosom smiled,
And learn the lisp of Bethlehem's Child!"

THE LAMB-CHILD.

When Christ the Babe was born,
Full many a little lamb
Upon the wintry hills forlorn
Was nestled near its dam;

And, waking or asleep,
Upon his mother's breast,
For love of her, each mother-sheep
And baby lamb He blessed.

THE CHILDREN'S TIME.

(By Jeannette.)

Little faces at th window,
Peering through the heavy plate,
Little eyes grow round with wonder,
'Mother, look, ain't Santa great "
Little hands are tired of waiting,
Reaching out for painted toys,
"Go to sleep; you must remember
Santa likes good girls and boys."
Little voices raised in laughter,
Bare feet slipping down the stair,
"Look, a doll," and "Here's my engine,"
"See my wee red rocking-chair."
Prattling tongues and happy faces,
Soon they'll reach to manhood's prime;
Make them happy while they're little,
Christmas s the children's time.

3 Days—Commencing Monday

Jesse L. Lasky presents Thomas Meighan in "The Easy Road"

The sparkle of life—and the dregs! The top and bottom. Between them—the Easy Road! The romance of a poor genius who married a rich heiress. And learned through ease and folly what it is that makes life worth while.

A love journey that starts on the path of pleasure and ends on the way to happiness.

Notice to the Public

SINCE the opening of this beautiful theatre last April, we have tried in every way to please our thousands of patrons by giving them at all times a program of the best pictures produced in the world, selected at all times with the one idea in mind, namely to please you. Our music is the best in the city, and the comfort, sanitary arrangements, cosy appearance and perfect ventilation of the Capitol makes this theatre stand out in a class all by itself in Peterboro. We do not try to draw comparisons, either in the class of entertainment we offer the public, or the beautiful temple of the silent drama which we present. "Capitol Entertainments"—there is no comparison.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

For Monday the Royal has been fortunate enough to secure what is possibly the best selection of pictures evtr shown at once in any Canadian theatre. To begin with, whilst in Toronto yesterday, Mr. Pappas arranged for production here on Monday of the Vitagraph super-feature seven reel picture, Flower of the North. This play is adapted from that novel of the same name the novel having run over a million and a half copies. The scenes are taken mainly in the Canadian mountains north of the 53rd degree in a country never screened before. The play is a touching romance, replete with situations of dramatic interest. One's mind is kept constantly on the theme of the pretty story told and the picture in thrills and scenic splendour exceeds anything before presented.

One scene particularly impressive is the escape of the heroine from her enemies by flight down the dangerous rapids of Big Thunder river in a canoe. She upsets and is rescued just above the falls, to have passed which was certain death, by her lover. This picture required the services of hundreds of actors and a whole tribe of Indians.

The bill also includes the tihrd episode of Breaking Through, the serial that has made a nation-wide sensation. Then there is a special selection of pictures showing encounters with wild animals, with Hal Lloyd drama.

The Royal, the home of best pictures, presents no vaudeville. Our money and that our our patrons is used to get the best class of pictures

"FLOWER OF THE NORTH."

James Oliver Curwood's Famous Novel Picturized in Mammoth Production at the Royal, Commencing Monday.

In "Flower of the North" Vitagraph has produced a truly wonderful picture in every sense of the word. It is based upon a famous novel by James Oliver Curwood, whose works are among the best sellers and have over a million and a half circulation.

Out of all the stories Curwood wrote, "Flower of the North" is perhaps one of the best. It deals with the country "north of 53" in the summer time, and is full of action—a struggle between the hero and the force of wealth and greed that are united to crush him. But at the heart of the story is a romance that centres about Jeanne, who has grown to womanhood at the Fort o' God where the wild flavor of the wilderness is so strongly blended with the courtly atmosphere of old France.

The story is spectacular to the extreme. It contains thrilling fights and flights, heroic rescues and the miraculous escape of Philip and Jeanne through Big Thunder Rapids, which provide one of the big scenes of the play. From both a scenic and story viewpoint "Flower of the North" offers motion picture opportunities not equalled by any of the other Curwood stories.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Monday Xmas Day, The Capitol Offers A Splendid Holiday Program at Both the Matinee and Evening Performances.

Monday Xmas day, the Capitol will celebrate their first Xmas as an amusement resort in Peterboro, by presenting to the public an excellent program, a show that has been especially arranged to please all classes of the public. Thomas Meighen's big picture, 'The Easy Road' and a big list of exceptional short reel subjects and comedies, "False Roomers" and a funny Rolin comedy will spice the program with Topics of the Day, Pathe News and other good pictures and a first class vaudeville act, if one can be procured; there is a shortage of good acts at present and unless a first class act can be secured for the holiday, Manager Abbey prefers to use just his high-class picture program, combined with the splendid musical selections of the popular Capitol orchestra.

Some of the sweetest romances ever told are those which develop after marriage, when husband and wife, estranged or separated perhaps, are finally brought together again with that understanding that insures future happiness. Such is the romance in "The Easy Road," the new Paramount picture, starring Thomas Meighen, which will be shown at the Capitol theatre next Monday, Xmas day.

The husband, who in spite of hardships has achieved fame as a novelist, settles down on easy street with his rich wife to enjoy life. But with pleasure as his false idol, his life and his character deteriorate. His wife, in the hope of renewing his ideals goes abroad. The novelist goes from bad to worse. He is about to commit suicide when something happens that inspires him anew and he again becomes the man of old. The wife returns half thinking to get a divorce and marry another. The ensuing episodes show how both find happiness.

Gladys George has the leading feminine role opposite Mr. Meighen and Grace Goodall, Arthur Carew, Maxime Elliot Hicks and Lura Anson are in the cast.

Added to the programme at the Capitol last evening was an excellent bill of local vaudeville, four acts of which were put on by clever Peterboro dancers and musicians. The Misses Mary O'Donohue and Olive Bacon had a pretty song number; Messrs. Ken Cullen and Vernon Willard gave some fine vocal, pianoforte and Hawaiian guitar selections Miss Betty Massey-Cooke sang "I Know Where the Flies Go", with a graceful dance accompaniment, with a clever interpretative dance as an encore; and Master Joseph Nazimok and Arnold Spencer rendered a violin duett with a brilliance surprising in such young performers.

A big holiday extraordinary vaudeville attraction, Anderson and Goiner, black face comedians, singing, talking and dancing. This act is a big headliner direct from Keith's Circuit, and only through special arrangements Paramount Theatres were able to secure this act for their special holiday programme.

AT THE REGENT.

NEW FILM HERE WITH SHIRLEY MASON, STAR

The William Fox production "The Lamplighter", in which Shirley Mason will be seen at the Regent Theatre, beginning next Monday, is reported to be an exceedingly dainty picture, admirably suited to this dainty star.

The story of "The Lamplighter" was written by Maria Susanna Cummins, and the production was directed by Howard, M. Mitchell.

Miss Mason enacts the role of a young girl who, as a baby, has been stolen from her mother's arms and later made to suffer cruelty at the hands of a vicious woman in charge of her. After many strange experiences she is restored to her mother through "The Lamplighter"—a lovable character who helps assuage the girl's sufferings.

The story is of intensely absorbing interest, and offers its star according to report one of the most pathetic roles of her screen career.

AT THE GRAND.

REX STOCK COMPANY

This popular farce has never before been played by any company in any of the smaller cities and towns in Canada. It is one of the very best of so-called bed-room farces. Critics in Toronto and Montreal spoke very highly of it and while the chief interest centres around a husband who has to live up to his reputation to suit his wife who professes to admire the Don Juan type of conjugal partner there is really much less of the usual suggestiveness whch Avery Hopwood injects in his plays. Of course there will be some glimpses of feminine charms and delectable lingerie but spice in food—enough's enough.

Did you ever try to live up to a reputation you really didn't deserve? Did you ever play the bold, brave, gallant whom wifey thinks you, when actually the very idea distresses you? Fancy then the plight of our hero in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath"! In all communities large enough to enjoy a really established coterie of society a troublesome little sheet called "Town Topics" or something similar. In this case, one of the most successful gatherers of sensational news items is an ex-actress. Anything that the episodes lack she furnishes her racy, slangy accounts of them. Our Mr. Irving, the Lothario-like hubby of the play, figures weekly in headlines and his adoring little wife Angeline instead of being distressed is delighted to be the sole legal owner and proprietor of the much-desired male. On the verge of destroying the illusion and confessing himself a harmless, ordinary individual, Angy's friends cook up a plan which places Mr. Irving and 'the girls" in quite as gay of light as any one could desire and at the same time cures wifey of her nonsense.

Miss Florence Winters, comes to the Rex Stock Company after filling a long and successful contract. She is a very clever and versatile actress and though still young for "character" she fills these roles admirably when called upon to do so. In striking contrast to Mrs. Snelgrove she is a decided brunette and before long will be just as popular with local play goers as are the now well known and familiar members of the company

In mid-winter when out-door sports may be indulged in for a limited time only, nothing gives more pleasure than a holiday matinee—so Monday, December the twenty-sixth, the official Christmas is an ideal time to see the Rex players at the Grand, in "Parlor Bedroom and Bath."

"Lest We Forget"—The name of the clever person, man or woman who wins that $10.00 in gold, will be made known and perhaps a budding playwright will be discovered when Mr. Snelgrove presents the award of merit to the successful candidate.

The management of the Grand Opera House has brought to Peterborough for three night, starting Thursday, Dec. 29, with special matinee for ladies only on Friday, one of the mystery men of the entertainment stage and from expressions heard from all who have seen and heard this mystery man, it is evident that his claims are genuine. Khaym is the son of an American diplomat and was born in Bombay, India, 38 years ago, receiving his early education there and not coming to the United States until he was 14 years of age. He was thoroughly saturated with his philosophy of the Yogis and is the only white man who has been admitted to many of their secrets. Khaym states that his father was formerly Secretary of the American Consulate in Bombay, India, and that it was in that city that he was born. For twelve years he resided among the Hindus with his parents and then his father was transferred to Rio De Janeiro, Brazil. The son, however, stayed in India with the family of an English officer, until he was 14 years of age, and then came to this country. He stated that he was also a student at Oxford, England, and that during 1915 and 1916 he occupied the chair of psycholgy in Harvard University. His present tour, he states, is being made under the auspices of the Harvard Society of Psychic Research and that all money aside from actual expenses is turned over to that organization. His tour brings him in touch with problems in psychology and occult matters, which are valuable to himself and to the society which he represents. Khaym scouts the theory of spiritualism insofar as it pertains to communication with the spirits that have gone to the great beyond. He illustrates his theory with the example that in his mind it is not necessary for a person to go to some supernatural personage to communicate with one's mother who might have gone beyond. The third person knows nothing of the family affairs, and it is reflected upon the divine right of God to think that a person on earth has the power of communication.

EMMA, DRESSED UP, CAN'T FIND ANY PLACE TO GO

RIGA, Dec. 23.—The chances of Emma Goldman, Alexander Berkman and Alexander Shapiro, American anarchists, being sent back to Russia increased when the German consulate informed Miss Goldman that it could grant her a vise to enter Germany only in the event it received the assurance that she would go from Germany to some other country, and would be in Germany only during the period of transit. As the Lettish authorities will permit the three anarchists to remain in Riga only a few days longer, Miss Goldman yesterday left her bed, where she had been incapacitated by illness, and with Berkman made unsuccessful rounds of various consulates in Riga asking for vises to some country beyond Germany.

TWENTY-FOUR NOMINEES

A Big Slate.

Nominations for Mayor, Aldermen, Utilities Commission and the Board of Education, were completed as above at a meeting in the Council Chamber last night at which no less than 24 names were advanced for the five seats to be filled. Two years ago a list of 14 nominees seemed large enough; last year there were 16; but 1921 with 24 nominations for the city council, has gone "over the top," and although some of the proposed candidates will drop out the citizens will have no reason to complain of a dearth of good Council timber being nominated.

Yesterday morning the nominations for Mayor, Utilities Commission and School Board took place, and as a result there is the somewhat unique occurrence of three ex-Mayors contesting the vacancy caused on the Utilities Commissioner C. R. Sissons removal to Toronto.

There are five vacant seats on the council, five on the School Board, and only one in the Utilities Commission.

While the official nominations are closed, candidates must make their declarations of qualifications before 9 p.m. to-night but this does not involve more than being located legally on the voters' list, property qualifications being no longer required, due to legislation of the Drury government.

Record Broken.

It has been many years since there has been such an influx of nominations for the Council. From 7.30 p.m., when City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, announced that he was ready to receive nomination, till 8.30, the names came in steadily. By 8 p.m., the City Clerk was able to announce 14 nominated, and the interested crowd that filled the back benches, were provided with meat for discussion that seemed to make the hands of the timepiece in the Council Chamber move a trifle faster. The proceedings were accompanied by the usual bustle.

The long list of nominees tried even Mr. Armstrong's well practised voice, but this vocular effort had to be followed up with an announcement of the polling booths, and the official declaration that the nominations were closed, and the meeting open for the hearing of the candidates if the audience so desired.

Nine Spoke.

Of the 24 nominated only nine spoke, several of the nominees making a clever escape before their turn arrived. Those who addressed the meeting were W. H. Lytle, ex-Ald. N. E. Phelan, J. C. Ellis, Frederick Tuggey, J. O. Fife, ex-Ald. John Edgar, Walter Stocker, ex-Ald. R. N. Jones and ex-Ald. D. H. Kerneghan.

Following addresses of the proposed candidates for the Council, W. H. Taylor and J. J. Turner who are contesting the Mayoralty, spoke, each being allotted ten minutes.

Mr. Taylor confined his appeal for support to several brief sentences and declared he intended to carry on his campaign through the press and expected to burden himself on the ratepayers enough in this without a length speech.

Ex-Ald. J. J. Turner covered a comprehensive field. He vouched his support to the sewage disposal scheme, and dwelling on the business of the Utilities Commission, he said he felt that the Commission should, through the filtration plant not being in operation as soon as expected, make a further refund to the water users. In connection with city lighting, this candidate for Mayor declared he stood for an improved system, and if elected would take steps to have an up-to-date scheme for lighting effected, for he considered the present system faulty in many ways.

The Economy Slogan.

"Economy in city business" was the slogan of William H. Lytle. Mr. Lytle said he stood first, last and always for economy, which he said, was pertinent in Peterboro "as this city is fighting with its back against the wall."

Ex-Ald. Nagel Phelan who has served 20 months in the council said he sought election on his record of service during that time. This candidate said he was opposed to the construction of the sewage disposal plant on the command of the Provincial Board of Health until the Provincial government should share in its cost. Discussing the need of enlarging the street railway he declared that he would do all in his power to have street car service for East City and bring about a five-cent fare.

Under the Bridge.

On account of his "being under the Hunter street bridge," James C. Ellis said that he was disqualified from running, the same fate which had befallen him on two previous occasions.

Frederick Tuggey, in doubt as to his candidature, said that if he did run run and was elected he stood for a reduction of the salaries of the city employees, as the wages of the men with the pick and shovel had been liberally sliced.

J. O. Fife said that he had been a resident of the city for 16 years, and if elected would give every attention to civic business.

Ex-Ald. John Edgar told the meeting he did not think he could accept the nomination, but he said he appreciated the honour shown him. In his address he contended that aldermen should receive remuneration for their civic work and he considered that legislation would be enacted to allow the city to remunerate its councillors. He referred in this connection to the tedious and attentive work of the Aldermanic Board and the unfair criticism levelled at its members from ratepayers ignorant of the facts.

Has the Time.

Walter Stocker, whose name was proposed, announced that having retired from business he was in a position to give considerable time to municipal affairs, and for that reason had accepted nomination.

REPLY FROM MAYOR A. A. McINTYRE

Editor of The Evening Examiner.

Sir,—After reading your series of articles in Thursday's and Friday's issues of The Examiner with reference to a grant from the Ontario Government for unemployment relief, I would say that this matter has received the serious attention of myself as Mayor of the city. The City Council has not let the grass grow under its feet by any means. The system of work, not doles, as commended by The Examiner, has been dealt with. The City Engineer has forwarded the estimates for this work to the Government, which has already stated that a grant will be forthcoming conditionally, which is one-third from the Provincial and one-third from the Federal Governments of the extra cost over normal conditions. This it is realised by the Council to be inadequate to meet the immediate needs, as the appropriation will be small from the two Governments.

I appreciate fully the interest you have shown in this matter. The Council are approaching the Drury Government for further relief; and it is the sincere hope of myself and the entire City Council that this matter will be settled before the end of the year.

Hoping that Mayor McIntyre's last act will have a happy conclusion, also hoping the coming year will be one of much more happy and prosperous outlook for Peterborough, whose interest we all have so much at heart.—I remain.

Sincerely yours,
A. A. McIntyre.

Ald. R. N. Jones went into the work of the Property Committee of which he has been chairman, and he said he was glad to be able to declare that their appropriation had not been overdrawn, and that at the end of the year his committee expected to show a margin of at least $200.

Ex-Ald. Kerneghan said he was not sure as to his candidature but he was in a position to give more attention to the city affairs now than when he was a member before, and would direct his efforts, if he stood and was elected, along sane and reasonable administrative lines.

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 24, 1921.

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having been honoured with nomination for the office of Utilities Commissioner and urged by very many people to stand for election, I respectfully solicit your support and influence. If honored by your confidence, I pledge myself to give the same conscientious consideration to all ratepayers and matters pertaining to this office as I have to all public affairs pertaining to the City of Peterborough in the past.

Wishing you All the Compliments of the Season, I am—

Faithfully yours,
A. A. McINTYRE,
The People's Candidate For the Utilities Commission.

THE MAYORALTY

When a person aspires to public office, is nominated and qualifies for the position, the Electors make inquiries as to the Candidate's ability to fill the position to which he aspires in event of Election.

These inquiries search through the public work and utterances during previous term of office or public duty in any capacity, and so far are quite right and proper.

Attention is sometimes paid to the conduct of the Candidate's business, and a great deal of guessing is done and distributed for true facts. A report has reached my ears stating that the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons, Limited, of which I am a member, do not pay adequate wages to their employees. What are the facts? Some employees have been in our employ for nineteen years, some sixteen, many fourteen to fifteen, some twelve, and a large number seven to ten years. Surely if the statement were true our employees would be constantly changing. Our employees are co-operating with us for pre-war production, which enables us to reduce our cost of manufacture without reduction of wages until general necessities reach a lower level.

For fear there are some who do not know the members of my Firm and understand their honesty and integrity, as well as those who have lived longer in the community, I thought it wise to set forth facts and nip untruths and half-truths in the bud.

Yours sincerely,
J. J. TURNER.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Special Christmas music will be given by the choir again tomorrow in George Street Church. The numerous requests which have been made for a repetition of the cantata, "In Excelsis," given so successfully last Sunday evening, have led the choir to plan to give some excerpts from it tomorrow. Two numbers will be sung at the morning service, and in the evening several others will be given. In addition, music appropriate to the last service of the year will be given in the evening. Solo parts will be taken by Mrs. Renwick, Miss Doris Rathbone, Mr. Edward Jones, Mr. Harold Jones and Mr. Thorpe.

Mr. Young will preach at both services, the morning topic being "Christmas At the Heart of God," and the evening "1921," the latter being a brief retrospect of some of the events and lessons of the closing year. All are heartily invited to these services.

A Big Slate.

Nominations for Mayor, Aldermen, Utilities Commission and the Board of Education, were completed as above at a meeting in the Council Chamber last night at which no less than 24 names were advanced for the five seats to be filled. Two years ago a list of 14 nominees seemed large enough; last year there were 16; but 1921 with 24 nominations for the city council, has gone "over the top," and although some of the proposed candidates will drop out the citizens will have no reason to complain of a dearth of good Council timber being nominated.

Yesterday morning the nominations for Mayor, Utilities Commission and School Board took place, and as a result there is the somewhat unique occurrence of three ex-Mayors contesting the vacancy caused on the Utilities Commissioner C. B. Sissons removal to Toronto.

There are five vacant seats on the council, five on the School Board, and only one in the Utilities Commission.

While the official nominations are closed, candidates must make their declarations of qualifications before 9 p.m. to-night but this does not involve more than being located legally on the voters' list, property qualifications being no longer required, due to legislation of the Drury government.

Record Broken.

It has been many years since there has been such an influx of nominations for the Council. From 7.30 p.m., when City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, announced that he was ready to receive nomination, till 8.30, the names came in steadily. By 8 p.m., the City Clerk was able to announce 14 nominated, and the interested crowd that filled the back benches, were provided with meat for discussion that seemed to make the hands of the timepiece in the Council Chamber move a trifle faster. The proceedings were accompanied by the usual bustle.

The long list of nominees tried even Mr. Armstrong's well practised voice, but this vocular effort had to be followed up with an announcement of the polling booths, and the official declaration that the nominations were closed, and the meeting open for the hearing of the candidates if the audience so desired.

Nine Spoke.

Of the 24 nominated only nine spoke, several of the nominees making a clever escape before their turn arrived. Those who addressed the meeting were W. H. Lytle, ex-Ald. N. E. Phelan, J. C. Ellis, Frederick Tuggey, J. O. Fife, ex-Ald. John Edgar, Walter Stocker, ex-Ald. R. N. Jones and ex-Ald. D. H. Kerneghan.

Following addresses of the proposed candidates for the Council, W. H. Taylor and J. J. Turner who are contesting the Mayoralty, spoke, each being allotted ten minutes.

Mr. Taylor confined his appeal for support to several brief sentences and declared he intended to carry on his campaign through the press and expected to burden himself on the ratepayers enough in this without a length speech.

Ex-Ald. J. J. Turner covered a comprehensive field. He vouched his support to the sewage disposal scheme, and dwelling on the business of the Utilities Commission, he said he felt that the Commission should, through the filtration plant not being in operation as soon as expected, make a further refund to the water users. In connection with city lighting, this candidate for Mayor declared he stood for an improved system, and if elected would take steps to have an up-to-date scheme for lighting effected, for he considered the present system faulty in many ways.

The Economy Slogan.

"Economy in city business" was the slogan of William H. Lytle. Mr. Lytle said he stood first, last and always for economy, which he said, was pertinent in Peterboro "as this city is fighting with its back against the wall."

Ex-Ald. Nagel Phelan who has served 20 months in the council said he sought election on his record of service during that time. This candidate said he was opposed to the construction of the sewage disposal plant on the command of the Provincial Board of Health until the Provincial government should share in its cost. Discussing the need of enlarging the street railway he declared that he would do all in his power to have street car service for East City and bring about a five-cent fare.

Under the Bridge.

On account of his "being under the Hunter street bridge," James C. Ellis said that he was disqualified from running, the same fate which had befallen him on two previous occasions.

Frederick Tuggey, in doubt as to his candidature, said that if he did run run and was elected he stood for a reduction of the salaries of the city employees, as the wages of the men with the pick and shovel had been liberally sliced.

J. O. Fife said that he had been a resident of the city for 16 years, and if elected would give every attention to civic business.

Ex-Ald. John Edgar told the meeting he did not think he could accept the nomination, but he said he appreciated the honour shown him. In his address he contended that aldermen should receive remuneration for their civic work and he considered that legislation would be enacted to allow the city to remunerate its councillors. He referred in this connection to the tedious and attentive work of the Aldermanic Board and the unfair criticism levelled at its members from ratepayers ignorant of the facts.

Has the Time.

Walter Stocker, whose name was proposed, announced that having retired from business he was in a position to give considerable time to municipal affairs, and for that reason had accepted nomination.

REPLY FROM MAYOR A. A. McINTYRE

Editor of The Evening Examiner.

Sir,—After reading your series of articles in Thursday's and Friday's issues of The Examiner with reference to a grant from the Ontario Government for unemployment relief, I would say that this matter has received the serious attention of myself as Mayor of the city. The City Council has not let the grass grow under its feet by any means. The system of work, not doles, as commended by The Examiner, has been dealt with. The City Engineer has forwarded the estimates for this work to the Government, which has already stated that a grant will be forthcoming conditionally, which is one-third from the Provincial and one-third from the Federal Governments of the extra cost over normal conditions. This it is realised by the Council to be inadequate to meet the immediate needs, as the appropriation will be small from the two Governments.

I appreciate fully the interest you have shown in this matter. The Council are approaching the Drury Government for further relief; and it is the sincere hope of myself and the entire City Council that this matter will be settled before the end of the year.

Hoping that Mayor McIntyre's last act will have a happy conclusion, also hoping the coming year will be one of much more happy and prosperous outlook for Peterborough, whose interest we all have so much at heart.—I remain.

Sincerely yours,
A. A. McIntyre.

Ald. R. N. Jones went into the work of the Property Committee of which he has been chairman, and he said he was glad to be able to declare that their appropriation had not been overdrawn, and that at the end of the year his committee expected to show a margin of at least $200.

Ex-Ald. Kerneghan said he was not sure as to his candidature but he was in a position to give more attention to the city affairs now than when he was a member before, and would direct his efforts, if he stood and was elected, along sane and reasonable administrative lines.

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 24, 1921.

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having been honoured with nomination for the office of Utilities Commissioner and urged by very many people to stand for election, I respectfully solicit your support and influence. If honored by your confidence, I pledge myself to give the same conscientious consideration to all ratepayers and matters pertaining to this office as I have to all public affairs pertaining to the City of Peterborough in the past.

Wishing you All the Compliments of the Season, I am—

Faithfully yours,
A. A. McINTYRE,
The People's Candidate For the Utilities Commission.

THE MAYORALTY

When a person aspires to public office, is nominated and qualifies for the position, the Electors make inquiries as to the Candidate's ability to fill the position to which he aspires in event of Election.

These inquiries search through the public work and utterances during previous term of office or public duty in any capacity, and so far are quite right and proper.

Attention is sometimes paid to the conduct of the Candidate's business, and a great deal of guessing is done and distributed for true facts. A report has reached my ears stating that the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons, Limited, of which I am a member, do not pay adequate wages to their employees. What are the facts? Some employees have been in our employ for nineteen years, some sixteen, many fourteen to fifteen, some twelve, and a large number seven to ten years. Surely if the statement were true our employees would be constantly changing. Our employees are co-operating with us for pre-war production, which enables us to reduce our cost of manufacture without reduction of wages until general necessities reach a lower level.

For fear there are some who do not know the members of my Firm and understand their honesty and integrity, as well as those who have lived longer in the community, I thought it wise to set forth facts and nip untruths and half-truths in the bud.

Yours sincerely,
J. J. TURNER.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

Special Christmas music will be given by the choir again tomorrow in George Street Church. The numerous requests which have been made for a repetition of the cantata, "In Excelsis," given so successfully last Sunday evening, have led the choir to plan to give some excerpts from it tomorrow. Two numbers will be sung at the morning service, and in the evening several others will be given. In addition, music appropriate to the last service of the year will be given in the evening. Solo parts will be taken by Mrs. Renwick, Miss Doris Rathbone, Mr. Edward Jones, Mr. Harold Jones and Mr. Thorpe.

Mr. Young will preach at both services, the morning topic being "Christmas At the Heart of God," and the evening "1921," the latter being a brief retrospect of some of the events and lessons of the closing year. All are heartily invited to these services.

To The Public

We Wish at this Happy Christmas Time that all the Citizens of Peterborough will have a Very Merry Christmas, and to our Customers we give thanks for their liberal patronage.

Catarrhal Colds Spoil Companionship

Weekly Health Talk No. 10
By A. P. Rogers, D.C.

Catarrhal colds spoil companionship, cause bad breath, break up the sleep, and if not checked in time, cause a run-down condition that makes the sufferer a ready victim of influenza or pneumonia. A catarrhal cold, in fact, is usually a forerunner of these dread diseases.

Uncle Ben Says:
If a fellow's a game fish he's willing to struggle up-stream. It's the sick man who drifts toward the Rocks.

The onset of the cold is generally marked by chilliness along the back, headache and a tired feeling. There may be a slight fever, sneezing and a feeling of dryness in the nostrils. At first the secretion discharging from the nose is thin and watery, then it thickens and becomes purulent. It is in this stage that the breath becomes tainted, that companionship is impossible. Sometimes when the stoppage of the nose is very complete, there is deafness. Under chiropractic spinal adjustments a normal condition of the mucous membranes is induced, the bowels and kidneys become more active and the disease gradually clears up.

COLDS, LIVER TROUBLE AND CONSTIPATION ENDED

"I suffered for several years with severe headaches, liver trouble and constipation, and was subject to colds. A chiropractor pulled me through a bad case of pneumonia this year. To-day I am in better physical condition than at any time. Chiropractic has done wonders for my baby too, after specialists had failed."—E. H. Lewis. Chiropractic Research Bureau. A Merry Christmas

We wish all our friends and patients a Merry Christmas. If you are happy and healthy this Christmas, owing to the fact that you have taken Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments, pass the good word along to your friends and acquaintances.

Everyone enjoys the opportunity to impersonate Santa Claus and bring good cheer to others. You like to see your friends happy, not only at Christmas time, but ALL THE TIME. If they are sick they cannot be happy, so what better Christmas gift could they receive than to be told of a science which will help them to regain and keep their health. It is a fine thing for each of us to be happy and healthy, but it is much finer if we can each do our little bit towards helping others to be HAPPY AND HEALTHY.

Cane, vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America, District 18, and Peter Hoft, picket, are under arrest, more than three hundred men are on strike, and miners in general are in open revolt as a result of the action of the management of the mines at Drumheller, who put into effect a twenty-five per cent. reduction in wages, notwithstanding that an agreement between the operators and miners does not expire until next March.

BEEKEEPERS' ASSN. ORGANIZED HERE

AFFILIATED WITH THE ONTARIO BODY—OFFICERS ELECTED.

At a meeting of fifteen of the beekeepers of Peterborough County in the U. F. O. Rooms on Simcoe Street December 24th, at 2.30 p.m., Mr. T. Shield, of the Brown and Shield Apiaries, at the instance of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association, proposed the formation of a county organization. Mr. Shield contended that with a live membership, properly organized, and linked up with the Ontario association, and guided by the up-to-date methods of the Agricultural College at Guelph, every case of foul brood, that great enemy of the beekeeper, could be practically eradicated in a couple of seasons. Mr. Shield enumerated other benefits such as co-operation in buying new stock and in selling the honey product, demonstrations by specialists, etc. Those present were mostly men (only one lady being present), who are quite alive to the benefits of an association as outlined by Mr. Shield, and nominations for officers were called for, the following elections resulting:

Secretary, pro tem, A. H. Boomer; President, Wm. Thompson, Indian River, Ont.; 1st Vice-President, Fred. Campbell, Rural Route, Peterborough; 2nd Vice-President, J. E. Milburn, R. R. 4, Peterborough; Secretary-Treasurer, Allan Brown, 153 Benson Ave., Peterborough.

Those present were: J. E. Milburn, R.R. 4, Peterborough; Howard Dunford, R.R. 2, Lakefield; Ralph T. Greenbank, Norwood; F. J. Sweeting, Lakefield; Wm. Thompson, Indian River; J. O. Ball, R.R. 3, Peterborough; R. R. Dixon, R.R. 8, Peterborough; Wm. B. Anderson, R.R. 5, Peterborough; A. Green, 62 Dunlop Street, Peterborough; Geo. Green, 62 Dunlop Street, Peterborough; Percy Moore, Warsaw; Fred. McMahon, Millbrook; Mrs. Geo. Simpson, Smith Township; A. H. Boomer, Peterborough; T. Shield, 153 Benson Ave., Peterborough.

An Advisory Committee also was chosen, who, with the members of the Executive, met for the first time at the close of the general meeting. The Advisory Committee is composed of Messrs. McMahon, Telford and McCall.

Reports from the various provinces indicate that fully ninety per cent. of the people in 26 counties of southern Ireland want ratification. It is now stated in authoritative circles that when Dail meets treaty will be approved by such majority that an appeal to the country will be unnecessary.

BLANK DOCKET POLICE COURT

HOLIDAY GAVE THE POLICE VERY LITTLE TO DO—A MODEL XMAS

Strange reading as it may be to some old-timers, there was no police court to-day, and the Chief of Police reported the double holiday as one of the quietest they had ever known. Not one arrest was made and no drunks being discovered so far as the police were concerned, it was a model Christmas.

In days of yore a full docket always followed a Christmas, but evidently the O.T.A. confined whatever celebrating there was yesterday to indoors and peace and quietude in the police court to-day are the result of this orderly observance.

KIWANIANS TO PURCHASE PARK

WILL SECURE 37 ACRES OF ARMOUR'S HILL PROPERTY.

With the intention of converting into a park to be known as Kiwanis Park the Kiwanis Club at noon lunch eon today practically decided to buy the 37 acres on Armours Hill from the Armour Estate at the nominal sum of $3000 at which it is offered. The executive committee were authorized to secure an option and to bring in a report at the next meeting.

Action of the club followed an address by Mr. E. H. D Hall in which he pointed out the national advantages of the hill and its adaptability as a park site and also as the site of a tower of some sort commemorating Peterboro's fallen soldiers. Mr. Hall felt the city should convert the waste land into a park especially as the Westclox are planning extensive improvements if a plant is erected on their property to the south. The proposal that the executive secure an option on the property was made by J. J. Duffus and Walter Oke after a discussion which was unanimously favourable to the purchase.

There was over 50 members present at the luncheon. President Frank Whitehouse presided. The following were guests today: Rotarians and Denne W. G Morrow Wilfrid Huckye, Brockville; John Disart, Peterboro; Kiwanian Harold Tanney St. Thomas.

ONE MAN KILLED.

BELFAST, December 27. Canadian Press. — One man was killed and several wounded in a clash between Constabulary Patrol and a number of men in the Marrowbone area this morning.

Cow Stolen Out of Stable in North End of the City Limits

A barefaced theft occurred on Saturday night on the farm of Robert Blackwell, on the east side of the river above Auburn, shortly before six o'clock in the evening. The thief broke into the stable, untied a white cow, and led her across the field to the fence on the Lakefield Road. He then tore down the fence and took her along the road and then across another field and the railway track to the Waterworks Dam, across the Waterworks Dam to the Lakefield Road on the west side of the river. He then turned south and went up the road past the Isolation Hospital for about a mile.

Provincial Constable Stratton was telephoned for shortly after the discovery of the theft, but it was impossible to have the services of this officer until about half-past eight, at what time he went up to the scene of the affair, and with the aid of young Blackwell and another boy the thief was traced to a point a short distance beyond the Isolation Hospital, when the officer ordered the chauffeur to return home.

The tracks of the cow were quite visible as far as the searching party went. How a man leading a cow along a main highway at such a busy time of the day could miss detection is hard to understand. It is confidently expected, however, that the thief will soon be run to earth.

To make this loss more keenly felt, only two days before Mr. Blackwell's house was ransacked and a considerable amount of money stolen. A number of thefts have taken place in this neighbourhood, ducks, geese, and many other things having been confiscated. The dwellers around this section are in constant dread of having their property stolen, and they intend to communicate with the proper officials to see if something cannot be done to detect such outlawry.—Com.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT OCCURS ON HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

EAST CITY RESIDENT WILL ISSUE DAMAGE CLAIM AGAINST THE CITY AS A RESULT—A LONG STANDING MENACE.

In stepping down from the sidewalk level of the east driveway into the Quaker Oats plant at the Hunter street bridge at 8.30 Christmas eve. Mrs. John McLean 133 James street, fell, injuring her left hand and spraining her right shoulder and a claim for damages against the city is likely to follow.

To negotiate from sidewalk to sidewalk on each side of the platforms into the Quaker Oats a person must step down and up, twice, and in stepping down the first time Mrs. McLean tripped, falling forward saving herself from a heavy fall only by her muff. Mrs. Eva Stevenson assisted her to her feet and in considerable pain Mrs. McLean went about the shopping she had started out to complete.

When she returned home her left hand was found to be greatly swollen to such an extent a ring could not be removed. Dr. W. A. Baker was in atendance and Mrs. McLean right shoulder was found to be sprained.

The family today were considering instituting proceedings against the city as several other acidents have occurred at this place which is considered a very dangerous spot, and a likely place for further accidents. No less than seven people have fallen here in crossing the bridge it is said and especially at night it is well situated to cause a broken leg or even a broken neck. The menace to public well-being is carried by the driveway into the Quaker Oats being level with the roadway and by it being divided into east and west drives by a V-island in the centre the same height as the sidewalk and the two channels of traffic and the island must all be negogiated by pedestrians crossing the bridge.

It is several months since a resolution was introduced in the City Council authorizng the removal of this step in front of the Quaker Oats plant.

SUBMARINE PROBLEM IS STILL UNSETTLED.

WASHINGTON, December 27 (Canadian Press). — Suggestions that the whole submarine problem be left to the future world conference gained increasing prominence to-day while delegates to the conference wanted formal replies from France and Japan to the United States' compromise proposal for submarine limitation.

No delegation was prepared to openly advocate the postponement of the problem, and outwardly, all the delegation spokesmen held to the customary diplomatic attitude of optimism over the prospects for ultimate agreement.

NO SKATING TONIGHT AT BROCK STREET

BIG CROWD YESTERDAY AND MILD WEATHER AFFECT THE ICE UNTIL FROST ARRIVES.

In an effort to secure ice for the hockey match to-morrow, there will be no skating at Brock Street Rink to-night. The large crowd present yesterday, and the soft weather following, has put the ice in such shape that it is not advisable to use it to-night. The probabilities are for colder weather, and if it comes, the rink will be in shape for to-morrow night. If the cold weather does not reach here, the ice is not in shape to use, either for hockey or skating.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

BY "SAPPER"

(CYRIL McNEILE)

Cautiously he lowered the millionaire to the ground, and took a step forward. It was enough; with a snarl of fury the crouching form rose and shambled towards him. Two hairy arms shot out towards his throat, he smelt the brute's fœtid breath, hot and loathsome, and he realised what he was up against. It was a partially grown gorilla.

For a full minute they fought in silence, save for the hoarse grunts of the animal as it tried to tear away the man's hand from its throat, and then encircle him with his powerful arms. And with his brain cold as ice Hugh saw his danger and kept his head. It couldn't go on: no human being could last the pace, whatever his strength. And there was only one chance of finishing it quickly, the possibility that the grip taught him by Olaki would serve with a monkey as it did with a man.

He shifted his left thumb an inch or two on the brute's throat, and the gorilla, thinking he was weakening, redoubled its efforts. But still those powerful hands clutched its throat; try as it would, it failed to make them budge. And then, little by little, the fingers moved, and the grip which had been tight before grew tighter still.

Back went its head; something was snapping in its neck. With a scream of fear and rage it wrapped its legs round Drummond, squeezing and writhing. And then suddenly there was a tearing snap, and the great limbs relaxed and grew limp.

For a moment the man stood watching the still quivering brute lying at his feet; then, with a gasp of utter exhaustion, he dropped on the ground himself. He was done—utterly cooked; even Peterson's voice close behind scarcely roused him.

"Quite one of the most amusing entertainments I've seen for a long time." The calm, expressionless voice made him look up wearily, and he saw that he was surrounded by men. The inevitable cigar glowed red in the darkness, and after a moment or two he scrambled unsteadily to his feet.

"I'd forgotten your damned menagerie, I must frankly confess," he remarked. "What's the party for?" He glanced at the men who had closed in around him.

"A guard of honour, my young friend," said Peterson suavely, "to lead you to the house. I wouldn't hesitate. It's very foolish. Your friends have gone, and, strong as you are, I don't think you can manage ten."

Hugh commenced to stroll towards the house.

"Well, don't leave the wretched Potts lying about. I dropped him over there." For a moment the idea of making a dash for it occurred to him, but he dismissed it at once. The odds were too great to make the risk worth while, and in the centre of the group he and Peterson walked side by side.

"The last man whom poor Sambo had words with," said Peterson reminiscently, "was found next day with his throat torn completely out."

"A lovable little thing," murmured Hugh. "I feel quite sorry at having spoilt his record."

Peterson paused with his hand on the sitting-room door, and looked at him benevolently.

"Don't be despondent, Captain Drummond. We have ample time at our disposal to ensure a similar find to-morrow morning."

CHAPTER VII

In Which he Spends an Hour or Two on a Roof

I

DRUMMOND paused for a moment at the door of the sitting-room, then with a slight shrug he stepped past Peterson. During the last few days he had grown to look on this particular room as the private den of the principals of the gang. He associated it in his mind with Peterson himself, suave, impassive, ruthless; with the girl Irma, perfectly gowned, lying on the sofa, smoking innumerable cigarettes, and manicuring her already faultless nails; and in a lesser degree, with Henry Lakington's thin, cruel face, and blue, staring eyes.

But to-night a different scene confronted him. The girl was not there: her accustomed place on the sofa was occupied by an unkempt-looking man with a ragged beard. At the end of the table was a vacant chair, on the right of which sat Lakington regarding him with malevolent fury. Along the table on each side there were half a dozen men, and he glanced at their faces. Some were obviously foreigners; some might have been anything from murderers to Sunday-school teachers. There was one with spectacles and the general appearance of an intimidated rabbit, while his neighbourhood, helped by a large red scar right across his cheek, and two bloodshot eyes, struck Hugh as being the sort of man with whom one would not share a luncheon basket.

"I know he'd snatch both drumsticks and gnaw them simultaneously," he reflected, staring at him fascinated; "and then he'd throw the bones in your face."

Peterson's voice from just behind his shoulder roused him from his distressing reverie.

"Permit me, gentlemen, to introduce to you Captain Drummond, D.S.O., M.C., the originator of the little entertainment we have just had."

Hugh bowed gravely.

"My only regret is that it failed to function," he remarked. "As I told you outside, I'd quite forgotten your menagerie. In fact"—his glance wandered slowly and somewhat pointedly from face to face at the table—"I had no idea it was such a large one."

"So this is the insolent young swine, is it?" The bloodshot eyes of the man with the scarred face turned on him morosely. "What I cannot understand is why he hasn't been killed by now."

Hugh waggled an accusing finger at him.

"I knew you were a nasty man as soon as I saw you. Now look at Henry up at the end of the table; he doesn't say that sort of thing. And you do hate me, don't you, Henry? How's the jaw?"

"Captain Drummond," said Lakington, ignoring Hugh and addressing the first speaker, "was very nearly killed last night. I thought for some time as to whether I would or not, but I finally decided it would be much too easy a death. So it can be remedied to-night."

If Hugh felt a momentary twinge of fear at the calm, expressionless tone, and the half-satisfied grunt which greeted the words, no trace of it showed on his face. Already the realisation had come to him that if he got through the night alive he would be more than passing lucky, but he was too much of a fatalist to let that worry him unduly. So he merely stifled a yawn, and again turned to Lakington.

"So it was you, my little one, whose fairy face I saw pressed against the window. Would it be indiscreet to ask how you got the dope into us?"

Lakington looked at him with an expression of grim satisfaction on his face.

"You were gassed, if you want to know. An admirable invention of my friend Kauffner's nation."

A guttural chuckle came from one of the men, and Hugh looked at him grimly.

"The scum certainly would not be complete," he remarked to Peterson, "without a filthy Boche in it."

The German pushed back his chair with an oath, his face purple with passion.

"A filthy Boche," he muttered thickly, lurching towards Hugh. "Hold him the arms of, and I will the throat tear out."

The intimidated rabbi rose protestingly at this prospect of violence; the scarred sportsman shot out of his chair eagerly, the lust of battle in his bloodshot eyes. The only person save Hugh who made no movement was Peterson, and he, very distinctly, chuckled. Whatever his failings, Peterson had a sense of humour.

It all happened so quickly. At one moment Hugh was apparently intent upon selecting a cigarette, the next instant the case had fallen to the floor; there was a dull, heavy thud, and the Boche crashed back, overturned a chair, and fell like a log to the floor, his head hitting the wall with a vicious crack. The bloodshot being resumed his seat a little limply; the intimidated bunny gave a stifled gasp and breathed heavily; Hugh resumed his search for a cigarette.

"After which breezy interlude," remarked Peterson, "let us to business get."

Hugh paused in the act of striking a match, and for the first time a genuine smile spread over his face.

"There are moments, Peterson," he murmured, "when you really appeal to me."

Peterson took the empty chair next to Lakington.

"Sit down," he said shortly. "I can only hope that I shall appeal to you still more before we kill you."

Hugh bowed and sat down.

"Consideration," he murmured, "was always your strong point. May I ask how long I have to live?"

Peterson smiled genially.

"At the very earnest request of Mr. Lakington you are to be spared until to-morrow morning. At least, that is our present intention. Of course, there might be an accident in the night: in a house like this one can never tell. Or"—he carefully cut the end off a cigar—"you might go mad, in which case we shouldn't bother to kill you. In fact, it would really suit our book better if you did: the disposal of corpses, even in these days of advanced science, presents certain difficulties—not insuperable—but a nuisance. And so, if you go mad, we shall not be displeased."

Once again he smiled genially.

Christmas Tree

The Christmas tree and entertainment given by the Sunday School of the Methodist Church, Cavanville, on Friday evening was an unqualified success. The program of songs, recitations, drills, dialogues, etc. which was given entirely by the members of the school was excellent, and reflected most favorably on the ability and patience of the teachers and officers who had the responsibiity of training the pupils. Mr. Carley acted as 'Santa Claus'" and needless to say the character could not have been impersonated. Thee Chrstmas tree was beautifully decorated and from it each member of the primary and junior class departments received a gift provided by the school to the great delght of the children. Rev. Mr. Rorke acted as chairman and the receipts reached the satisfactory sum of $37.00.

The rewards won during the year by members of the Methodist S.S. Millbrook, for regular attendance, recitation of verses, etc., will be given out next Sunday, January 1st, at the special mass meeting of the school to be held at 2.30 p.m. and addressed by Rev. Archer Wallace, of Toronto.

The next Chatauqua concert, under the auspices of the Woman's Institute, will be held on Wednesday evening when Dr. Arthur D. Carpenter, will give one of his eloquent an inspiring discussions on some scientfc subject. As a lecturer Dr. Carpenter is spoken of in the highest terms.

On Christmas eve the rink was open for the first time this season and was well patronized. The boys have already begun work in putting theer open air hockey rink in shape for the winter's sport.

The 'Sunshine Class" of the Methodist S.S. presented their teacher, Mrs. Offa Williamson, with a box of fine stationery at the class session on Christmas Sunday afternoon as a token of their appreciation and affecton for her personally. and also their apreciation of her services as their teacher.

A vacation would be much more satisfactory if the old pocketbook could enjoy the rest also.—Pasadena Evening Post.

Considerable discussion arose during the meeting, presided over by Mr. W. Sherin, clerk of the village. Different nominees spoke briefly. Mr. Strickland announced that he would stand again. He repeated the statement of the Monday previous regarding taxes, and his long fight in the County Council, and had secured a rebate on the good roads for Lakefield.

Mr. Dawson will stand again for the Council. He paid a special tribute to Reeve Strickland and to Councillor Marling, who had served so faithfully in and out of season.

Mr. Marling, who will stand again for Councillor, said that the stone crusher, which had been rented out under a guarantee for its safe keeping, had netted the sum of $280 for the village, and $90 had been received for the rent of the implement shed. Mr. Morrison will stand again for the Council. He spoke of the Charitable committee, which had been a very economical one, as no money had been expended.

Mr. Spence was ill and unable to be present. Mr. F. J. Moore is uncertain whether he will stand for reeve. He has served in previous years, and it was owing to his efforts that the Dickson Company and the Cement Company and the Government wharf were secured for Lakefield ,and he was instrumental in securing the hydro for the village and also the new dam.

Mr. Tanner will stand for reeve. Dr. Fraser, who resigned after thirty years' service on the school board, finds that his increasing practice demands his individual attention.

Mayor Meyers reviewed the work of the retiring Council, showing the unemloyment situation when the council took office. To give work, sidewalk construction was proceeded with, even under adverse conditions; an up-to-date cement mixer had been purchased. Previous to the passing of sidewalk by-law, 25,000 sq. ft. of sidewalk laid at cost of $3,100, after Aug. 8th 13,000 sq. ft. at cost of $2,800. Mr. Caddy's claim for $5000 damages for injury to his child from fall on sidewalk was explained and council's settlement for $600. Mayor Meyers stated there is a surplus of $1,000, with uncollected taxes $4,200, and if elected for 1922 the tax rate woul dbe reduced. The W. and L. Commission have a surplus of $3,000. Reference was also made to the war memorial, which had been delayed until the citizens of town were more of one mind as to the form the war memorial should take.

Mr. A. E. Wragg, chairman of W. and L. Commission, declared he had carried out all his election promises of 1919. The financial statement had been published in the local paper and the commission had nothing to be ashamed of as the commission had worked in the best interests of the town.

G. A. Kingston, as chairman of the Board of Education, declared work of the Board to be most important and urged the necessity of a new High school and new equipment. Since the Separate school was established, 14 teachers reduced to 11. The congestion in Public school somewhat relieved, but yet crowded. Classes in manual training and domestic science were necessary. Cost of Public school $12,000 or $23 per child per year. High school inspector's report referred to.

Charles Davidson, chairman of Police Commission, declared police conditions satisfactory and council in all departments had done good work, and urged support as he was a candidate for Warden for 1922.

Councillor Palliser, chairman of Finance Department stated there was a surplus of $965 and uncollected taxes and predicted that the tax rate for 1922 would be less than this year. Mr. Palliser signified his intention of being a candidate for Deputy-Reeve for 1922 and asked for support.

Deputy Reeve Stone contradicted the current report of a deficit in the county of $200,000. Instead of this there is a surplus of $73,000. The road and bridge work was carried out carefully and economically. Mr. Stone stated he was a candidate for Deputy-Reeveship and asked for support.

Messrs. T. S. Baker, R. S. Southworth, J. R. Wilkinson, W. S. Wiggins (members of last year's council) declared themselves candidates for 1922. Mr. W. J. Meiklejohn was absent. Mr. J. A. Anderson and R. J. Allan declared that they would not be candidates for 1922. Mr. James Dorrie expressed his intention of being a candidate and asked for support.

Mr. A. H. McKeel did not commit himself as to whether he would be a candidate for the mayoralty or not, while J. M. Arnold stated he would not be a candidate for municipal honors. Mr. J. A. Irwin was absent as was also Mr. S. J. Moore.

Mr. W. S. Russell stated his intention of being a candidate for the W. and L. Commission for 1922. Messrs. C. W. Smith and J. C. Birmingham were absent.

The nominations for the various offices of the Township of Seymour were held in the Opera House, Campbellford, yesterday, between the hours of 12 o'clock noon to 1 o'clock p.m. Mr. G. A. Hay, clerk, occupied the chair. There was a large number of ratepayers present, showing the interest taken in municipal affairs. Reeve Vanvolkenburg briefly recalled the work of the Council for the past year, and stated he was again a candidate for 1922, and asked support. Mr. T. L. Diamond, who has served the township in various canacities most satisfactorily for a number of years, declared himself a candidate for the Reeveship, and, if elected, would, as in the past, serve the best interest of the ratepayers, and asked their support.

Mr. T. H. Rowe, after thanking his mover and seconder, stated he did not intend to be a candidate for 1922.

The members of the retiring Council, except Thos. Fry, signified their intention of being candidates for 1922. These were: H. Donald, William Grills. Messrs. Anderson and Heagle also declared they would be in the field and asked support. Messrs. Scott and Lisle were absent and Messrs. Ira Loucks, P. B. Nelson and Andrew Milne did not definitely commit themselves, but are possible candidates.

Thrift.

She was comely and a widow, and, moreover, she was Scotch. She mourned MacIntosh, her late husband, for eighteen months, and then from a crowd of suiters chose honest, homely MacIntyre for her second.

"I'm no guid enough for ye, dear!" he whispered. "What for did ye choose me oot o' sae mony?"

"Ah, well, ye see, your name's MacIntyre."

"Yes, but—" began the bewildered suitor.

"An' ye ken," finished the widow, "all my linen's marked 'MacI.'—that's why, Donald."

CONVICT HID PACKING BOX

WAS SHOT BY ONE OF THE GUARDS FOLLOWING AN ATTEMPTED JAIL DELIVERY.

ALL RE-CAPTURED

AUBURN, N.Y., Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Five convicts, recently found guilty of rioting in the yard of the Auburn Prison, failed in an attempt to escape on Christmas night through their efforts to carry away one of their number who had broken his leg in flight. This became known when prison officials announced one criminal had been slain.

Cutting their way out of the cells in the Auburn jail in which they had been confined during their trials for rioting, the convicts dropped into the outer yard, when one became crippled. The alarm was spread while he was being taken in a wheelbarrow across the yard, and some of his companions were searching for a ladder with which to scale the outer wall.

The cripple and two others were immediately caught, but the other two were not recantured until they were discovered hiding in a packing box in a private office. A bullet fired to frighten killed one who was crouching in the bottom of the box.

The quintet, all of whom came from Buffalo, had been serving long terms for manslaughter and highway robbery. Clement Pacyna was the convict slain, and those who had planned to escape with him were John Wydro, Alexander Y. Kalimowski Walter Gahdik, and Frank Lubicki.

BULLION SALVAGED.

$28,000,000 Worth Taken From Liner Laurentic.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(Associated Press.)—Nearly $28,000,000 worth of bullion has been recovered from the liner Laurentic, which was sunk in January 1917, off the north coast of Ireland, by a German submarine.

Operations have been suspended for the winter, but they will be resumed again in the spring when an effort will be made to recover the remaining $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 worth of bullion which is said to be still at the bottom of the sea.

Great difficulties have been encountered by the salvage crew, for after three years pounding by the Atlantic swells the liner has been transformed into a heap of twisted debris. Her decks, which settled down on the sea bottom cover an area of several hundreds of feet. The wreck was practically covered with gravel and silt, as it is in a position in which it received the full force of the Atlantic gales.

This obstruction had to be removed, as far as possible, by powerful pumps placed in a position by the divers, as the gold was at the bottom of the huge mass of wreckage.

CALLED UPON BENEFACTOR

EUGENE DEBS, SOCIALIST LEADER RELEASED BY PRES. HARDING WILL CONTINUE WORK.

THE CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, December 27 — Canadian Press. — Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist leader whose ten year prison sentence for violation of the United States Espionage Act, was commuted on Christmas Day, came here direct from the Atlanta federal penitentiary and called upon President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty.

Mr. Daugherty said that Debs came of his own volition, and while Debs declared his visit to Washington was at the "request" of the Attorney General, and that he was given a railway ticket to the capital by the warden of the penitentiary, without choice of destination, although he had planned to go immediately to his home at Terre Haute, Ind.

After his conference with Debs, the Attorney General declared in a statement that there were unusual conditions attached to the commutation of the Socialist leader's sentence, that no advice was offered to Debs, nor was any requested, and he hoped Debs would direct his talents to a useful purpoe.

No statement was made at the White House after the conference there, but upon reaching his hotel, Debs broke the silence he had maintained from the moment of quitting the penitentiary, and declared that he would devote his time to the freedom of all prisoners. He added that he had discussed his opinions with President Harding in order that there might be no misunderstanding as to his principles and ideals.

He first planned to leave Washington as soon as his calls had been paid but last night it was decided to remain over until to-night to confer with friends. One of his first visitors after his return from the White House, was Sampel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who declared that the work for freedom "in behalf of political prisoners," would go on

THE SUB SHOULD GO.

Great Britain's attempt to eliminate the submarine as a factor in naval warfare will probably not succeed, for apparently none of the other important nations represented at the Washington conference are willing to go as far as Britain has offered to go in this direction. The slaughter of neutrals, or women and children, of wounded soldiers on hospital ships by submarines during the great war has faded out of recollection so far as the majority of the Powers are concerned. They are willing for the advantages offered by the sneaky under-sea vessel to condone the cowardly murders that must necessarily follow the use of submarines in warfare. The submarine is not a fair fighter; its work is necessarily treacherous and tricky. The battleship that goes into action with her crew exposed to the fire of the enemy's guns is a picture that thrills, but the assassin that steals up on a defenceless hospital ship or unprotected passenger steamer, and with a shot from the dark, murders men, women and children, is a pirate that should be ruthlessly hunted down. But, apparently, not many of the so-called Christian countries agree with that opinion, and the submarine will continue to kill from behind cover, although some concessions may be made in the matter of numbers.

A FULL BILL-OF-FARE.

Peterborough will have a full municipal bill-of-fare when its annual duty at the polling booths is undertaken on New Year's Day. There are no acclamations to record, for sufficient candidates qualified in each division to ensure a contest. Messrs. J. J. Turner and W. H. Taylor will battle for the Mayoralty; the unusual spectacle of three ex-mayors fighting for one position is furnished in the struggle for the vacant position on the Utilities Commission, with W. H. Bradburn, G. H. Duncan and A. A. McIntyre as participants, and six candidates are in the field for the five positions on the Board of Education, Mrs. Kate Morris and J. W. Worth, Dr. Frank Neal and E. G. Patterson being the former members seeking re-election, while E. B. Fowler and Jos. Wearing are new aspirants for service on the Boarl.

On Friday there were twenty-four nominations for the Council. When the time for filing qualifications had expired on Saturday night at 9 o'clock the two dozen had dwindled down to eleven, of whom only R. N. Jones and Nagle Phelan were members of the Council this year. Of the new candidates, D. H Kerneghan and Malcolm McIntyre have had previous experience, while the others are well known citizens, even if their names have not been associated with municipal politics before. There should be a very pretty race for every position, and the fact that there is to be a battle for the Mayoralty, Utilities Commission, Board of Education and City Council should ensure the polling of a larger proportion of the vote than has been the case for some years.

BABIES VS. HOGS?

There are times when one wonders whether the people of Ontario regard the production of live stock as of more importance than the protection of human lives. Huge expenditures are unhesitatingly expended by the Government in protecting cattle and swine against disease, which is good business, but the fight to save the men, women and children is left largely to the generosity of the public. Even worse than that: We insist upon precautions in the case of animals that are disregarded compeltely in the case of children.

Not long ago the people of Peterboro were called upon to contribute to a fund being raised throughout the province to rebuild the Sanitarium at Gravenhurst for the accommodation of tubercular patients. The main object of such an institution is not the prevention of tuberculosis, but rather to attempt to cure it.

On January 1 1922, there will go into force in Ontario what is known as the Dairy Standards Act which provides among other things that all cheese factories in Ontario must pasteurize the whey before it is returned to the farmer for feed for hogs. The object of course is to stamp out tuberculosis among the hogs of Ontario, for it is a recognized fact that when hogs are shipped to the market consideration is taken of the fact that a percentage of all Ontario hogs are suffering from tuberculosis, and are therefore unfit for food.

We protect the hog against tuberculosis but while we build hospitals to take care of the human beings who contract that dread disease we continue to feed them raw milk and its products.

It looks as if we were going to save the hogs and kill the babies.

THE ECONOMICAL ASPIRANT.

The candidate for municipal honours who declares that his platform is economy in civic affairs, has chosen a popular appeal, but unless he is more specific in his claim for support, is not likely to catch the thinking elector with such a broad and rather meaningless declaration of policy. People are complaining of burdensome taxes, and they often lose sight of the fact that a very large proportion of the civic expenditure is not under the control of the city council, although that body has to see that the revenue is found. And of the controllable portion of the expenditure there is a surprisingly long list of items which the new aldermen will find it hard to eliminate or to reduce. Sincere as may be his desire for economy. All kinds of requisitions for grants and special appropriations come up in the course of the year, invariably backed by a strong demand which the council finds it difficult to withstand. The fact that included in most of the deputations which come along looking for civic support are invariably those who complain the most about municipal extravagance, is an interesting if not a helpful feature of the situation. It is easy to shout for economy when out of office just as it is difficult to practise it when in office. No organization ever protested more loudly or more vigorously about reckless expenditures than the United Farmers; yet when they were called upon to form a government in Ontario, they found that preaching and practising were two quite different things, for they succeeded in piling up a total expenditure that was a record for the province. Economy in municipal, Provincial and Federal administration is as necessary and desirable as it is amongst individual citizens but the candidate whose only plea for support is that he believes in economy and does not advance any line of how he proposes to put it into effect, is asking the electorate to take a whole lot for granted.

THE CHRISTMAS GOSPEL.

It comes in the song of angels to peasants watching their sheep upon the moor: "I bring you tidings of great joy, for there is born to you this day a Savrour." He is not a hero; He is a Saviour. This is the glittering halo which the poetic faith of the first community set upon the head of Jesus.

In the centuries of silence after the great prophets, the Messianic hope had become faint, and the line of David had sunk low. The faithful indeed cherished the early hopes and the pious hid in their hearts the early prophesies. They waited for the consummation of history and the exaltation of Israel—and not of Israel only, for somewhere Isaiah wrote:

"He shall cause the law to go forth to the nations,
He shall not cry aloud nor lift up his voice,
Nor cause it to be heard in the street.
The bruised reed shall He not break,
And the glimmering flax shall He not quench;
He shall send forth law according to truth.
He shall not fail nor become weary,
Until He shall have established justice in the earth,
And distant nations shall wait for His law."

The current thought of Israel about the time of Jesus found expression in two remarkable men—Hillel and Philo, one the glory of Jerusalem, the other the ornament of Adexandria. Hillel was a chief Pharisee, noted for the gentleness of his spirit, for the purity of his life, and for the way in which he cherished the large hope of hs people. Philo, who became the foremost interpreter of the Greek spirit, also spiritualized the Messianic hope of the nation.

The leaders were more materialistic. There was a yoke of oppression wating to be removed; a hungry people waiting to be fed; a throne waiting for an occupant. The miseries of the time pressed heavily upon the people and there was a pervasive and deep-seated political fanaticism ready to burst into flame. There was an eager unrest and longing for speedy deliverance—for the plower to draw near to the reaper, and the treader of the grapes to the sower of the seed. The people longed to rebuild their waste cities and to live in them; to plant their vineyards and drink their wine; to make gardens and eat their fruit. They were impatient to throw off a hated political tyranny.

The Christmas Child was strangely indifferent to the leaven of political and industrial unrest. He used the atmosphere of expectation, and persistently attempted to change the aimof expectation. He would give it a new and nobler interpretation and direct it toward larger and nobler ends. He never lingered upon the surface, never dealt with the external and accidental details, but with steadfast aim, penetrated to the heart of the matter. He attempted to interject into their hopes a new spirit, giving them a moral and spiritual interpretaton which was the only fulfilment possible. Into the mass of hate and selfishness he would interject the leaven of love and service, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

This is emphatically the Christmas Gospel—to guide our feet into the way of peace. When He came into the world, peace was bequeathed. The song of the angels heard in the year one by the shepherds watching their sheep upon the moor, coupled peace with good-will—peace to men of good-will. The words yet belong more to prophecy than to history. The generations have walked down the intervening years hoping for peace and waging war; talking peace and practicing strife; doing everything for peace but the one essential thing, that is, becoming men of goodwill. The Master claimed to know things as they are. He bases his claim to knowledge on his relation with God. "He that sent me is true, and the things that I heard from Him, these speak unto the world." It is just possible that He has revealed the only avenue by which men can accomplish universal peace. At any rate the leaven which He interjected into the world's hate and strife grew in catacombs and slums—the hope first born in a manger, and men will never willingly let it die.

Macaulay points out that on a house near Durham there is a Latin inscription to the effect that it was built "in the year 1697 of the peace of the Gospel, and in the first year of the peace of Ryswick." The treaty is almost forgotten now. It proved an idle basis for peace. Only the peace of the Gospel abides.—Montreal Star.

Our New Year Resolution

"WELCOME, 1922! We are pledged to one New Year resolve for the coming year—to use Long Distance more for both business and social purposes!

"As a business man, my books show I didn't use it enough in 1921. Those who used it more came out better — and I'll tell you why:—

"Service is the bed-rock of business to-day —and service is personal. There is no way in which so much personal service can be rendered to so many people, as by Long Distance.

"The consumer and dealer look on advertising and Long Distance as the source of news of new styles and new prices. Long Distance ended the isolation of small towns. It enables them to keep the rapidly-growing small-town trade at home.

"The Smiths and Browns and Robinsons whose shopping trips to town were formerly planned weeks ahead, now buy advertised goods by Long Distance.

"It enables us to go after sales direct. A letter is a good peddler or order-taker, but it rarely makes a sale. Only salesmen make sales, and they can make lots of them by Long Distance.

"So bring us good luck and prosperity, 1922, and with raised hands we pledge ourselves to use Long Distance more."

As you watch the Old Year out and the New Year in, why not greet distant friends by Long Distance? The night rate on Station-to-Station calls is very low.

Twelve prisoners were liberated from the Portsmouth penitentiary on Wednesday morning on parole.

SCHOOL CONCERT AT YOUNG'S POINT WAS HUGE SUCCESS

TASTY CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS, A RESPONSIVE AUDIENCE AND EXCELLENT CANTATA.

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 27.—An excellent concert rendered by the scholars brought to a close the fall term of S. S. No. 8, Smith.

The pretty and tastily decorated school room was comfortably filled by an appreciative audience at eight o'clock when the programme commenced by the singing of God Save the King.

Mr. Frost, schoolmaster, explained that there was to be "no chairman," and various items would be given without any pauses between them. This was a feature that added to the pleasure of the evening, and was, moreover, justified by the length of the programme, as given below.

From the commencement of the opening chorus, sung in a bright and brisk manner to the last item, there was not a dull moment, and for two hours and forty minutes, with but a ten minutes' interval while the platform was prepared for the cantata, the audience was entertained with song and story.

Before the singing of "The Maple Leaf," Rev. J. L. Hughes mounted the platform and asked the audience to join in a hearty vote of thanks, to Mr. Frost, the scholars and Miss Hilda Wilson, pianist, for the excellent concert they had provided. For the course of his remarks the Rev. Hughes pointed out that an entertainment such as they had enjoyed must have entailed upon the teacher much hard work and patience and upon the scholars hard work and keen interest. In undertaking such a work Mr. Frost was making for the higher education of the children, for education did not merely consist in learning those subjects commonly spoken of as the "Three R's". Education must train the child to take its place and play its part in later life as a useful member of the community in which it will live, and in this respect music and elocution must occupy an important place. By holding such concerts as just closed, a child is often discovered to possess the talent to amuse and entertain others, which talent otherwise would probably lie hidden and unused, and it is a good thing to be able to give joy and pleasure to others by using the talents we possess.

Mr. Hughes then asked for a hearty expression of thanks, which the audience willingly gave.

Mr. Frost briefly replied and thanked all who had helped him in this work.

Santa Claus then arrived and distributed gifts from the well laden Christmas tree among the kiddies.

The Programme.

"He stepped adown the cloudy stair
Out of the Golden glow,
And came to seek a lodging bare,
In Bethlehem below.

The doors were shut, the windows barred
Against His Mother's plea:
A stable-cavern, cold and hard,
His mean abode must be."

Counter Attraction

by Jack Lait

THE great American custom of indiscriminately swapping presents to express concretely the exuberant spirit of Christmas was being served with that properedness which years have taught and which standardized that proverb "Do your shopping early," until it was observed about as much as any of the proverbs ever is. The roaring rush was on and the department store belt was no place for small men or weak women. The forward pass was barred, hitting with one arm free was recognized, and only the fittest arrived.

Arrived where? Arrived at the counters. And behind these were the storied girls, whom O. Henry immortalized and whom melodramas played to ruin and to riches. They were all that the melos had left after electric and pneumatic transmitters scrapped the cash girls. What a blow it was to the writing craft when cash girls ceased, when stenographers' pay went up to men's dimensions, when chorus janes began to refuse road jobs at any pay, instead of begging for them at starvation and destruction wages, when check-room frails began to be hired for their abilities at losing hats rather than for their adolescent appeal.

Welfare work, the increasing humanity of man to woman, the assertiveness of woman at man, State labor laws, high salaries and short hours have certainly cut into the resources of the authoring trade. Only during the brief period between say, December 15 and Decembr 24, has he any logical subject matter. That period is to the sympathetic author like New Year's eve used to be to a waiter and election day used to be to the nobo. That fortnight still taxes the queens who now look also weird things that get together on counters superciliously down upon the eggs that can find not better way to waste their time and money than in buying a miscellaneous mess of plunder to pass around on the Christmas eve, said eggs having in mind the parable of the bread upon the waters rather than the wheeze which holds, that it is better to give than to receive.

Lulu Carr was in notions. Notions are weird slants that get into oblique domes, and they are also weird things that get together on counters when other counters have no place or use for them. Anywhere, except in a department store, notions would be classified as 'miscellaneous.' They range from hairpins to sun spectacles, and past all sorts of things in between. Collar buttons are notions, whereas cuff buttons are jewelry. Toothpicks are notions, whereas toothbrushes are medical supplies. Every large store has several notion departments, assembled from the orphans of the divisions in the nearby sectors. Whenever a floor-guide is in doubt he answers "Notions," and waves his hand in a more or less circular direction, so that he can't go very far wrong.

The notions handled by Lulu ran to gents' goods, and they included collar fasteners, necktie dittos, key-rings, little chains to sew in coat collars and that type of truck. One wouldn't think that the pre-Christmas rush would decisively affect this sort of a department, but it did. They say there isn't a counter in any of the shops that isn't rushed for the holidays, from canned goods to linoleum.

Lulu was used to men. Not that men, alone, buy knicknacks that only men can use—and suspenders are about the only things left now that would answer that restriction—but enough men had passed through the avenue where she regulated traffic to teach her the elemental idiosyncracies of the breed—the general weakness of the sex. And whre Lulu was, men's weakness stood out in relief, for Lulu was what her name said she was. Nature teaches every animal a means of defense, and Lulu had perfected her system of parry-and-thrust, so that she had a counter-bromide for every bromide, a counter-nifty for every regulation whimsy, and maintained her counter balance at all times.

Such amusement park stuff as "What's on for to-night?" made her yawn, and such stencil leads as "Ever toddle?" didn't even raise a sneer. Not that she didn't toddle, or wouldn't. Lulu was far from shackled after hours. She liked to step—high, fast and forte. But she wasn't discussing it or any part of it with the fly-by-nights and ragtag that flowed past her station. Her social world was out, and beyond, in the locality in which she lived, where she was a belle and a personage, and where she could sit down.

Sales girls, even these days, put up with a great many irritating advances and unjustified familiarity, they tell me. The counter in a psychological gate ajar to the masher, and a physical barrier to the girl—it gives him a right to talk to her at all, which so often means a chance to talk to her insolently, and it forbids her to cuss him out as a lady can on the street or in a common carrier, and prevents her from beaning him with a vanity case. Lulu had more than the usual run of pests, because she was pretty, she was winsome, and she smiled.

Lulu smiled because she was a cheerful, healthy, young American girl with a reasonably snowy conscience and a runaway sense of humor. A wink is a wink, and when a girl winks the whole world is hep; but there are many sorts of smiles, and to the passing stranger they all look pretty much alike. There is the smug smile of content, and there is the come-on smile of the flirt, and there is the happy smile of unruffled patience, and there is the specific smile over a tall, angular, loosely-clad, good-looking young chap with eighteen bundles and an umbrella, who is jammed up against a counter by a swarm of men clutching and crowding to get at a counter, and who still stands open-mouthed and gapes at a girl to whom he has never spoken except to say, "I want a"——

She was smiling at just that when Roger Chadwick stopped after the indefinite article. She didn't know it was an indefinite article, and she didn't know what definite article he had intended to name after the indefinite article. But she knew he had met her eyes and had lost his voice.

"Wh—what was it you wanted?" she giggled.

"A—a—I don't know what I wanted."

"Was it something in notions?" and she looked to see whether he had a string tied around one finger.

"My—my notions are all twisted," he muttered.

"I think so," she said. "Please give your order or move aside. Customers waiting."

"Oh!" Chadwick came partly to his senses. He was in a department store and there was a crowd about and she was a sales clerk and—"Oh, give me some of those collar buttons—say a couple of dozen."

"Are you scalping 'em or going in the wholesale business?" she asked.

"All right—I'll take one of them, then."

She gravely picked up one collar button and a bag.

"Anything else, sir?"

"A key ring."

She dropped one of those in the bag also.

"Anything more, sir?"

"A key chain—one of those there. I have two sets of keys and I don't want to get them mixed up."

"Those chains are clothes hangers."

"Just what I need. Give me a dozen—half a dozen."

"My—my notions are all twisted," Muttered Roger.

She started counting them into the bag, one by one.

"Make it half a dozen—a dozen—and count them carefully . . . another dozen. They're great little things. S'prised I got along without them so long."

"They last a lifetime," she suggested, "It'll take a lot o' clo's to eat up a couple o' dozen o' these."

"No matter," he said. "Well, perhaps you are right. S'pose you spill them all out again and make it half a dozen—careful, now."

Lulu painstakingly followed orders. She knew that it was a stall—a clumsy one. But hers was not to question why; as long as customers remained on their own side of the counter and merely asked business questions, issued business requests and talked notions, little cared she whether the high peak of the line indicating her department on next month's chart would show that teh pro rata time per customer was not productive of a profitable ratio of profit as against merchandise, plus overhead plus labor. Courtesy had been her instructions; the customer was to be always right, and to her he was, as long as he remained a customer. She had her own ideas of him when he switched to other estates. But she never quibbled as long as she was but the third party between purchaser and purveyor.

She knew well enough that Chadwick was juggling. But the clock was moving along just as steadily while he ordered chain coat hangers in and chain coat hangers out as it would be after he had gone and the next party would be exercising his eccentricities, whatever they would be.

"Anything else?" she inquired, dispassionately.

"Yes—your name."

"What do you want my name for?"

She answered him with the question instead of saying, 'None of your business," because that, too, was in the rules. So much department store business is now done by telephone and correspondence that salespeople are daily called upon to identify themselves against re-orders or the like.

"I—want to know. I may have some more—more business at your counter."

"If it's business, my name is Miss Carr.

"Carr? And the first name?"

"My first name don't go with it. My las' name belongs to the firm, but my first name is my own. They's only one Miss Carr in this department, so you can't catch the wrong Carr. My number is on the sales-slip."

"Your number?"

"Yes. Not my 'phone number, my employes' number. Eighty-seven cents, please."

"Oh, yes," and he fished up a dollar bill.

"Please stand aside while I send for your change," she asked.

"Aside? I ——"

"Those are the rules. Let the next gem'man be waited on."

Chadwick elbowed himself "aside," about six inches, still holding counter frontage, but off the exact base of Lulu's operations. He looked at her from an angle.

Chadwick was no rich man's heir, but he was no poor man's chump, either. He was a prosperous and energetic young engineer, a bachelor, a city-broke citizen with a sound digestion, a hatful of brains and a dandy future. He had known plenty of girls, and hadn't always been immune. But never in his life had he been so affected as by his first sight of Lulu.

Love at first sight is not an old-fashioned idea, at all. That is, it has not grown obsolete. That is one thing the authors haven't been nicked for. Love at first sight is more plausible these days than it ever was before, because a man gets so much more per sight. Authors have gotten away with it in harem stories, where the heroines wore opaque veils and concealed every line; in Spanish stories, where only the chin and the contour of a comb showed. Therefore, anyone should believe a vibrant young mid-westerner, fed up on a flock of painted crows and misshapen vamps that dotted the city walks he had adopted, would get it and get it good at first sight of Lulu, in a low-cut waist, sleeves to about the elbows, skirts to about the knees. (He was tall, we mentioned, and could look down over a counter.)

In all the branches of bridge construction, in all the logarithms of trigonometric calculation, in all the blue-prints of municipal improvements he had never been snagged into such a stickler. Pretty girls were no novelty to him, and surely he had been attracted by nothing except looks here, for her conduct toward him had been anything but soul-snaring. And here he was, numb, dumb and a rum, his arms full of ridiculous miscellany for aunts and elevator boys, his heart pumping like a stone-crusher, his feet asleep and his head woozy. He had heard a lot about this love nonsense, and not a little of it had been jiggled at him. But he realized now that he had never known. If this was it, what a wonderful, ghastly, inspiring, ludicrous thing it was!

"Your change, sir," she said out of the corner of her bewildering and puny mouth, as she slid at him backhanded.

A man with rights and a belt buckle to buy saw Chadwick pick it up, three pennies and a dime, and asserted himself by shoving Chadwick from the counter. A patron who has received his change has no more standing at a counter.

Chadwick staggered down the aisle, bumping into folks, stepping on their feet. With his other meaningless packages lay the useless one that contained the collar buttons and the coat hangers. It was all apple sauce now. The whole world was just a colorless haze with one punctuating spot, that spot now invisible.

Chadwick got home and dropped his impedimenta. He nibbled at some dinner. He poked the fork into the tablecloth. He lit a pipe and let it go out seven times, then threw it aside.

Her name was Carr, eh? That was no clue. There was a page of Carrs in the 'phone book alone. No way to see her again except at that counter. And that counter was always jammed up and jimmied up, and he had to talk notions there or stand aside.

Next morning he was at the store bright and early. It was one day closer to Christmas, but it was a trifle ahead of the full congestion, even at this season. Lulu was just starting her day, caressing a wayward puff with her pencil, when she turned up her eyelids and saw gangling down the aisle the queer boob who had gawked at her and bought things he didn't want or even understand because he wanted to be near her. "The poor fish," she thought. "Now he'll get gay. And when he does, rules or no rules, I'll paste him one with this order book."

"Miss Carr," he opened up as he came to the counter and bent over toward her, "I want you to marry me."

"You—you want me to do what to you? Beat it before I call a house dick."

"No, no. I am in deadly earnest. I—I love you."

"For what?"

"For—I don't know, except that you are beautiful."

"Well, I admit I'm not exactly a clock-stopper, but where do you get that love stuff so sudden. Gee, I'll say you start right in on high though. Who are you, by the way?"

Chadwick handed her his card—not a bad-looking pasteboard, embossed and everything, and it sounded pretty well as Lulu read it, half aloud.

"Concrete engineer, eh?" she mused. "Solid concrete?"

"Not so solid that you didn't put an awful dent in it—you mean my head, I suppose."

"Was it just a dent—or are you sure it wasn't a crack?"

Chadwick looked squarely at her. She hadn't grown angry, nor was she out-and-out jeering at him. Naturally, she was sparring for wind—it had been abrupt enough to knock the breath out of anyone. Chadwick leaned over a little closer.

"You know what I did before I came over here to see you this morning?" he breathed.

"Went to see a doctor, I hope," she answered—but smilingly.

"I wired my mother. She was coming for Christmas, anyhow, but I can't wait until then."

"That's good—then you'll have some comp'ny, and won't bother me."

"No, you'll love my mother."

"Me? What've I got to do with her?"

"Everything. I wired her because of you. I'm going to have her come here and talk to you. I'm going to have her come here and ask you to marry me. I'm going to have her come here and tell you that I'm a fairly respectable white he-man, that I've been a fairly good son and ought to turn out an average acceptable husband.

"I know that this is no moment lawn with splashing fountains and romantic little hidden benches, like they show in the movies for the honest young swain to lead the beautiful young heroine to, so that he can say 'I love you,' and she can sigh and roll her eyes and say 'Let me think—you shall have your answer to-morrow.'

"I'm willing to wait till tomorrow—if I have to. But I couldn't take any chances on losing you entirely, at least until I got an opportunity to put in my bid.'

"I know this is a busy, public, commercial store where you sell stuff for nickles and dimes, and you ought not to be bothered or distracted from that sacred vocation to entertain a proposal of marriage.

"But I know these stores engage a number of extra sales girls during the Christmas rush, and you might be one of these. If I don't act quickly, you might disappear, swallowed up in a big town, lost in the anonymity of a commonplace last name.

"So I rolled the whole problem over in my mind, and came to the conclusion that I'd better act at once. The atmosphere was such that I couldn't woo you, or nurse this along, because you couldn't proceed with a lengthy flirtation here if you wanted to, and, thank the stars, you're the sort that doesn't want to.

"So I thought I'd step up bright and early and put it to you plain and simple. I love you, I want to marry you."

"Well," she half whistled. "Our instructions are to not hear anything customers say, except on business. But I'll say you're a man who talks business. The word 'marry' ain't chucked around much acrost these counters. It comes in a box marked 'Dynamite, and most men have too much respect for it to kick it and too little love for it to put up with it."

"I know how to handle dynamite," said Chadwick. "Let me engineer this."

She looked at him again, this time more searchingly. Her chest rose just a little more than its orderly breathing would have seemed to require.

"Well," she said, with an effort to giggle through it, "this is a notion counter. But I'll say you got the craz—I mean the most s'prising notion that ever come across it. But you talk pretty straight, and any girl that'd get sore at that style o' conve'sation ain't human."

"Oh, thank you," enthused Chadwick. "My mother will be here to-morrow. I'll send her."

"Send her, nothing—bring her."

Chadwick didn't answer—except with a look. Several men were gathering, and one or two were waiting to be served. He smiled and turned.

"Say," whispered the girl, "the first name is Lulu."

NEW HUN COLORS BITTERLY RESENTED.

Hindenburg Says They Symbolize Fratricidal Warfare.

BERLIN, Dec. 27.—Field Marsha von Hindenburg said in a recent interview that the new German colors, black, red and gold ought never to have been adopted, as to him they symbolized the fratricidal warfare in 1866 between Prussia and other German states.

A historian in the Vorwaerts defends the colors of the republican flag on the ground that they date back to medieval times. The emperor Ludwig of Bavaria, it appears, made black, red and gold the colors of his army as far back as 1336.

In 1815, when the first German students' societies were founded, black, red and gold were adopted as the banner of liberty and progress. Reactionary authorities later forbade the colors, but in 1848 they were again adopted as symbolizing German unity. Again they came under the official ban, for Bismarck disliked black, red and gold, and despite strenuous efforts in many quarters to retain them, they were rejected in 1871 as the new German empire's colors. Black, white and red became instead the official German flag.

The writer cites poetry by Heine and Freiligrath at the time of the democratic awakening in Germany some 70 or 80 years ago, when black was represented as symbolizing the death of tyranny; red meant blood and gold stood for the sacred flame of freedom.

HAVE DONE WITH COMMUNISM IS UKRAINE'S CRY.

Revolution Blazing in Podolia, Kherson Govt.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—(By Canadian Press.)—"Now that all Northwest Ukraine is freed from the Soviet-Beast let us have done with communism!" This is the cry of the Insurgent Army of the Ukraine, awakened to new life by the last demand of famine-ravaged Russia. This year in two provinces of the Ukraine, and two only—Kiev and Podolia—were the crops good. Upon them swooped the Russian devourer. The Bolshevists of Moscow gave orders on October 26 to requisition two million poods (80 million pounds of grain) and three armies of pillagers were sent to secure this from the peasants.

Exiled officials of the former Petlura Government, as shown in letters to a resident of Toronto, had been expecting a revolution in the spring. But even they did not anticipate this sudden rising of an exasperated people. M. Andrew Livitzky, former Prime Minister of the Petlura Government, wrote to Rev. Paul Crath of Toronto under date of November 3 to this effect, being then ignorant of the outbreak.

Revolution Blazing

The "Saborna Ukraina" of November 9, a paper published in Poland, says that the Polish and Ukrainian press give much space to news of the revolution now blazing in Podolia, Kherson Government, Kiev, and even in the Eastern Ukraine. Its leaders—peasants—are Tritiunik, Sheple, Zabalonik and Colonel Paley. Refugees from Podolia say that the Bolsheviki army of occupation is entirely demoralized. Many Bolshevik squads have torn off the red stars from their caps—their only mark of a regiment—and are roaming the country as marauders while they claim to be Ukrainian insurgents. They receive short shrift at the hands of the latter, when it is discovered that they speak Russian and not Ukrainian. They are exterminated without mercy for Ukraine has suffered too much at the hands of the criminals from Soviet Russia appointed as Commissaries.

Russia, even if she would, cannot govern these men whom she allowed to govern, revolver in hand. They know no other law, even when Moscow speaks. Lenine may wish to modify edicts; they do not understand him and would not obey if they did.

The Bolsheviki are to be found in large numbers only in towns. When famine drives them to the country they now meet the armed Insurgents. Sometimes, by stratagem, the latter seek them out in the city. Disguised as friends one such group of men told the Bolsheviki of insurgents whom they could secure. "But first," they said "give us the credentials of your trusted men." So, selecting the sheep from the goats, they fell upon the leaders and hanged them on the spot.

Dr. A. Sushko of Winnipeg, has just welcomed his brother-in-law, a refugee, who says "Petlura is still 'Petluring'." ('Petlura' in the Ukrainian means a man who grinds flour to the finest powder.) Two years ago Petlura said that his time for returning to the Ukraine would come when the Bolsheviki had shed so much peasant blood that they could be endured no longer. Now that time has come. The Bolsheviki Boundary Guard on the Roumanian and Galician line have not been seen since the 13th. They had previously announced that they were no longer Bolsheviki.

Boris Crath, a flight officer in the Insurgent Army, writes (Nov. 1) to his brother, Rev. Paul, Crath, of Toronto, saying that Kamenetz—Podolsk, Winnitzia and even Kiev were in the Insurgents' hands. Gen. Petlura's solders who were interned in Galicia by the Poles disarmed their guards and rushed into the Ukraine and all exiles in Poland and other states are trying to come to the help of their countrymen.

Expel Russians

A fortnight before the Insurrection the Bolsheviki demanded of Poland the expulsion of all Russian and Ukrainian refugees, promising to pay therefor twenty million roubles. The Russian Anti-Bolsheviki, protesting vigorously, left Poland for Western Europe, but the Ukrainians helped them when they reached their homes. The Bolsheviki had claimed that Poland and Roumania, owing to French propaganda, had aided them in their escape, but despatches show that Poland had been strictly neutral and had guarded her boundaries as well as she could. The Revolution is not even Petlura's work, but is a national development hastened by a crisis.

The most hated Bolsheviki organization in the Ukraine is called "Cha-Ka." (Extraordinary Commission to arrest and kill Anti-Bolsheviki). Recently some of these men were evacuating a town and their own drivers turned on them and killed them. When the Insurgents pass through villages the priest comes out to bless them and pray for victory and the people bring them food. The Jews (who usually join the strongest) have joined the Insurgents in large numbers. One, Dr. Rabinovich, has organized a Jewish Regiment.

Hour Has Come

The spirit of the evolution is shown in this proclamation, issued by Colone Paley. "The hour for which we waited has come—the day of reckoning with the Communistic invader." Throughout Ukraine is heard the clamor of Insurrection. All have risen at the call. Death to Bolsheviki rule and its servants.

"In the name of the General Insurgent Command I order all Insurgent Squads, and every individual who has a drop of pity for the sorrows of the people—who has a spark of holy wrath against the Communistic Beast—without delay to arm and march against the local Bolsheviki forces and civil authorities. Exterminate ruthlessly the members of the "Cha-Ka"—to the last one—and also those soldiers and civilians, working for Communist interests. Have no pity on the local commissaries—they are too dangerous to live. Secure valuable documents that when the Ukrainian Government is in power it may know friends from foes. From Zbusch to the Don your brothers are coming to assist you. You must do your share." (Dated October 25, 1921.)

The significance of the rebellion in connection with the whole Russian situation lies in the fact that the two crop-favored provinces meant food-salvation. If they are saved to the Insurgents the Russian famine must increase to such an extent that the condition of Soviet Russia must be terrible.

SURGEONS FALLEN UPON LEAN TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Physicians and surgeons have fallen upon lean times, and complaints of dwindling practices are widespread. The other day a doctor from the fashionable Harley Street district was sued in the courts for a small debt which he declared he was unable to pay because his practice had "dropped almost to the vanishing point."

Fashionable doctors say that so many ordinary practitioners have had wartime experience with surgery cases that, in thousands of instances, they do their own operating instead of sending their patients to specialists. Another reason is that many formerly well-to-do people who would in other circumstances have consulted a prominent physician now go to hospitals where they obtain treatment at much lower cost. Others say that women now prefer to be attended by doctors of their own sex and that psychoanalysis and various forms of faith healing account for the falling off in the number of patients.

To the tariff enthusiasts a thing of duty is a joy forever.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

RURAL SNOBBERY TO BE SQUELCHED.

English Village Clubs Will Do the Trick.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—(By Canadian Press.)—Rural snobbery in this country is to be quelched if an organized campaign against it is as successful as is hoped for by nearly 400 villages which have joined the Village Clubs Association to do the squelching. The Association is incorporated as an organization that has not been formed for profit. Its council comprises representatives of land owners, farmers and laborers. It has the sanction and support of the Ministry of Agriculture and of the Development Commission, and the levelling movement which is fathered by the Association bids fair to become a powerful factor in rural social life.

The Village Clubs Association originated at a meeting of the Agricultural Club in 1918, at the suggestion of Sir Henry Rew, the President of the Agricultural Club. Sir Henry has occupied many important offices on agricultural boards and commissions and has been prominently connected with a number of other public services. He is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Village Clubs Association.

All Are Eligible

One of the principles of the Association is that all villagers, without distinction of class or opinion, are eligible for membership in the Village Club. This occasionally raises difficulties, however, as a letter received by the Executive Committee of the Association shows. It is as follows:

"We have a splendid village hall here, built some years ago. Lately we tried to get the people together by arranging some open dances, but the attempt failed because the wife of the upper-butler would not dance with the under-butler; neither would the wife of the upper-gardener with the under-gardener; and as for the domestic servants, they are made a class apart. What are we to do?"

It has been found that games and sports best encourage the communal spirit and obliterate the distinction of class and occupation. Another letter to the Association contains the following "I cannot imagine a man who has bowled out the village blacksmith, or been bowled out by him, not having a fellow-feeling towards him afterwards."

The Club's Need

The need for the movement is expressed in a story told of a deputation from a village to ask for help to secure a hall and form a club. A farmer's wife, who was the chief speaker of the delegation, said: "I gave two boys to the war; thank God, they have both come back, but now that they are back I have far more anxiety about them than I had all the time they were fighting. In the evenings they have nowhere to go except the roadside or the public house, and they are rapidly going to pieces." Since then this village has had an old barn converted into a hall, and a club has been formed there. Thousands of villages however, are still without a meeting place. In a Cornish village the only place in which ex-Service men can meet is an old cow-shed, where they sit on dry straw on the floor.

Sir Henry Rew, in a statement to a representative of the Times, said that reports from all parts of the country showed that in some villages class suspicion, and, indeed, class hatred, had become greater, and not, as all had hoped, less, since the war. In very many villages, though, there had been an awakening of the social consciousness, Sir Henry said, and a development of the true democratic spirit, which had transformed the whole community.

MARION DAVIES AND HER CHRISTMAS DOLLY

Miss Davies presented the toy to the New York Philanthropic League, which sold it at auction for the benefit of the crippled children of Manhattan. "Marion Davies," as the doll is named, is dressed in rich brocade and real ermine, from material left over from a skating costume which Miss Davies wears.

Answers to Correspondents:

ROMANTIC MAN—You are not "Over Romantic" just because you desire to have a clean, smooth face when you call on your sweetheart. And you certainly would not be business-like if you went to work with an unshaven face in the morning. Of course, frequent shaving will make any skin super-sensitive unless something is used to protect and to soften it. Try CAMPANA'S ITALIAN BALM. It will keep your skin soft and smooth and prevent cracking. It is also fine for the hands; rub some on after each washing. CAMPANA'S ITALIAN BALM really is marvellous. You can buy CAMPANA'S ITALIAN BALM at any Druggist. 40c a large bottle.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

HAPPY CHRISTMAS FOR SCOTCH KIDDIES

SANTA WAS GENEROUS WITH HIS GIFTS FROM CHRISTMAS TREES

A happy band of Scotch children gathered in the W.O.W. Hall Saturday afternoon to celebrate their Christmas entertainment, given by the Club to members' children. Mr. Robt. Veitch put up and decorated two large trees, while the Ladies' Auxiliary laid the tables with dainties of every description. By the time the little guests arrived, everything looked "Christmassy." When the children saw the well-laden trees and beautiful decorations, their smiling faces well repaid those who had spared no effort to get up the treat.

The children being seated, the Rev. J. McKenzie opened the proceedings with the doxology and a blessing. Then everyone did ample justice to the eatables.

After the tables were cleared the concert programme followed. It was entirely conducted by the children themselves, Master Jack Wyllie acting as chairman. First came the Chairman's address, followed by a recitation by Miss Mary Kingsbury. Then, in a clear, sweet voice, Miss Helen Veitch sang "Come ower the Stream Charlie," she being dressed in Highland costume, appropriate to the old balad. A dialogue followed. It was done by Misses Margaret Wyllie, Isabel Reid, Helen Veitch, Dora Adams, and Masters Willie Stratton, Alistair Adams, Robert and Jack Wyllie, and caused great merriment. Master Joe Leith, equipped in plaid and Glengarry bonnet, and carrying a miniature set of bagpipes, mounted the platform and marched up and down in real Highland fashion, and the strains of the pibroch could hardly be heard for the cheers of the crowd. Misses Margaret and Beth McLeod sang very nicely a duet, "God Our Father Made the Night." Miss Irene McArthur danced the Highland Fling, dressed in full Highland costume, and bids fair to wearing a few medals. Then, in the words of the Chairman, came a real little favorite. Master Billie Petrie, who carried all hearts away by singing very cutely, "Peggy O'Neil." At this stage a telegram was received from Santa, which stated that he was frozen in at the Waterworks. This caused some consternation among the little ones, but hopes brightened when Master John McLeod sang "Santa Claus is coming with his Gay Reindeer." A chorus, "The Birks o' Aberfeldy," was then sung by the Heard children. It was well done and a real treat. Miss Mary Pollock sang "Bonnie Bessie o' Dundee," and Master Shaw closed the musical programme with a recitation.

Master Adam Sands proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and all heartily responded, as everyone marvelled at the way in which he conducted the chair.

The rest of the time, until the arrival of Santa, was spent in the playing of games. His arrival was greeted by all the children singing "A Jolly Old Fellow is Santa Claus." He then dismantled the trees and presented each child with a gift and a bag of candy, nuts and oranges. After each child had received a gift he spoke very nicely to the children and sang to them, "The Better Land."

This entertainment, which no doubt carried the hearts of the older people back to similar ones held in days gone by in the Old Land, was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Pipe Band played Santa Claus down the street to the hall, and also gave a few selections in the hall.

RUSSIAN SOVIET CONGRESS FACES HARD PROBLEMS.

Formidable Questions Appear on Agenda of Ninth Session, Dec. 20th.

MOSCOW, Dec. 20.—Many formidable questions appear on the agenda of the Ninth All-Russian Soviet Congress which is to convene here today (December 20). Foremost among these are the consideration of the preliminary results of the new economic policy, which abandons Communism to a considerable extent, and the famine which threatens to wipe out millions of Russians in the Volga districts before the next harves..

It is more than a year since the last meeting of the All-Russian Soviet Congress and the congress has actually become much less important than might be imagined from reading the Soviet constitution. It has over 2,000 members. Village and town Soviets call elections by means of which delegates are selected to attend conventions in provincial capitals which designate the delegates to the Moscow congress.

Only workman, soldiers, sailors and peasants who do not employ any laborers except their own families, are entitled to vote under the constitution. Bolshevists make no claim that the elections to the congress are democratic. They frankly call their system a dictatorship of the proletariat and do not pretend that their government has the support of a majority of Russians.

At every session of the All-Russian Soviet Congress a Central Executive Committee of about 200 members is elected which holds office until the next congress is called and is the body in which the chief functions of government are vested by the contsitution.

In practice this committee, whose members are scattered all over the Russian republic and federated governments, has been found unwieldy. It is too large to assemble conveniently. By degrees the actual control of affairs shifted to the Council of Commissars, which corresponds to a cabinet, and is under the chairmanship of Nikolai Lenine.

M. Kalenine, who is the legal head of the government and is generally spoken of as President of the republic, will preside over the Ninth All-Russian Soviet Congress by virtue of his position as chairman of the Central Executive Committee of that body. He signs treaties, grants pardons, receives diplomatic representatives, and performs other more or less formal tasks, but has no such powers as are vested in the American President.

The calling of the All-Russian Soviet Congress at this time is probably due to the fact that the government desires a formal approval of its changes in economic policy by a more or less representative body.

Leon Trotzky will address the congress concerning the army and military affairs. Lenine will speak on the changed economic policy. Kamenoff will discuss the famine. Chicherin will report on international relations and Bagdanoff, chairman of the Supreme Economic Council, will discuss the progress of plans for the revival of industries. The re-establishment of agriculture will also be considered.

Sessions of the congress generally last about a week and resemble the national convention of an American political party more than a session of the American congress. Commissars make reports of the work of their departments, the Central Executive Committee makes a report and nominations are made for a new Central Executive Committee, which is promptly elected and the session adjourned.

M'LAUGHLIN CARS ARE CUT IN PRICE

FROM $800 TO $1,700 LESS THAN COST IN DECEMBER LAST.

A substantial reduction in the price of Canadian-built automobiles comes as a uniqeu Christmas present to the motoring public of Canada, many of whom have deferred the purchase of a new car, waiting for the price to be back to normal.

The new prices of the McLaughlin-Buick automobiles announced today by the McLaughlin Motor Car Co., Ltd., of Oshawa, will do much to speed up the industry. The amount of the drop shows a disposition on the part of the manufacturers to get back to substantial marketing and merchandising conditions.

Mr. R. S. McLaughlin, president of the General Motors, of Canada, Ltd., of which the McLaughlin Motor Car Co. is a subsidiary, gives the following statement:

"The new prices of the McLaughlin-Buick cars represent more dollar-for-dollar value than we have ever before offered.

"In fixing these prices we figured on less than present-day replacement value of parts and materials in hand, anticipating some further reductions in costs which we may receive, although there is a tendency to increase in some commodities.

"We also figured on the economies to be effected by quantitiy production, which we feel sure these new prices will make necessary.

"Another factor making lower prices possible is the fact that our Oshawa plants are working on maximum production schedules, to fill export orders, allowing us to distribute our overhead expense over our entire domestic and export business, giving a direct and immediate benefit to the Canadian consumer."

The retail prices of McLaughlin motor cars on an analysis show some new levels in quality Canadian built automobiles. The prices last December, when the luxury tax was included were from $800 to $1,700 higher than the new prices just announced.

A business economist recently mentioned the fact that all that was needed was to have someone start the ball rolling, and it would appear the principals of the McLaughlin Motor Car Company have taken the first step in stabilizing the industry, increasing production schedules and re-establishing confidence on the part of the buyng public.

A. Brown & Co. are the local representatives.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF MR. AND MRS. S. WALL

HAPPY CELEBRATION IN WHICH RELATIVES AND FRIENDS TOOK PART.

Yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wall, 346 Stewart Street, celebrated the fiftieth and golden anniversary of their wedding day, which took place on Christmas Day, just fifty years ago. A rousing celebration, with about twenty-five relatives and friends present, took place at their home yesterday, with a large wedding cake as the centrepiece of a laden dinner table. Four generations were represented at this gathering: Mrs. Samuel Wall, her daughter, Mrs. F. McCracken, of Stewart Street, whose daughter, Mrs. Frank Carter, is the mother of an eight-month-old baby, Donald, whose Christening took place yesterday, on the occasion of his great-grandmother's golden anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Wall, aged seventy-one and seventy years respectively, were married in Lakefield, where they lived for many years, removing to Peterborough about three years ago. Mrs. Ed. Whatley, of Lakefield, Mrs. F. McCracken, of Stewart Street, and Mr. Geo. Wall, 299 King Street, are children of the still hale and hearty old couple.

The meetings are being held in the Peterborough main office, and the following personnel of those in attendance, together with the names of their home towns from which they work in given territories, will convey an idea of the magnitude of the Canadian Packing Company's (Peterborough) Eastern Ontario domestic trade in their popular meats and "Rose Brand" produce: W. MRS. DELLA KUNZE, Chicago, Ill

"I understand now why so many people praise Tanlac as I have tried it myself and it certainly is a wonderful medicine," said Mrs. Della Kunze, 856 Lill Ave., Chicago, valued employee of the Boston Department Store.

"I eat with so much zest and enjoyment now that my family really joke me about it. A short time ago, however, I had absolutely no appetite and was eating so little that I was losing weight and strength every day and I suffered so much from indigestion and nervousness that I was on the brink of a breakdown.

"There are absolutely no words that can express my delight at the remarkable and immediate results I obtained from Tanlac. It benefited me in every way. Instead of being depressed and melancholy and tired and worn out I am full of life and energy and cheerful and happy all the time. I've gained twelve pounds in weight, too."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., Ltd., and by leading druggists everywhere.

AT THE GRAND.

THE MYSTERY MAN.

Khaym, the Mystery Man of India, who comes to the Grand Opera House for a three days engagement, starting Thursday, December 29th, with the usual matinee Saturday, a special matinee for ladies only on Friday afternoon, is regarded as the world's greatest mental marvel. It was Khaym who predicted a month before the trial that 7 men of the ten I.W.W. defendants at Montesano, Wash., would be convicted of second degree murder. The verdict of the jury was that seven were guilty of second degree murder, two were acquitted and one declared insane.

At one of his performances in Seattle a woman asked him as to the outcome of the illness of her cousin who was at that time in a Seattle hospital. Khaym told her that her cousin was then passing through the crisis of his illness and that he had no chance of recovery. The man passed away at an early hour next morning.

Khaym will answer all questions in a straightforward manner and although some of the answers are not what you expect he gives you the truth that comes to him during his telepathic seance.

Khaym will give a special matinee for ladies only on Friday afternoon at 3.00 p.m., when he will answer any questions that might be embarrassing before a mixed audience.

Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO.

Through Support of Public, Ontario Maintains Greatest Children's Hospital on This Continent.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Nowadays people look ahead more than they used to. They realize, for instance, that the child of to-day is the citizen of the future. The privilege of this Hospital is to provide a service whereby any Ontario child, who is weakly, may be made strong, or if he is crippled, may be set straight.

Part of this service consists of personal medical and surgical care of the children. Part is in the schooling of doctors and nurses to carry the ligh of medical science into the uttermost corners of the province.

The whole is a contribution to CHILD WELFARE work which must commend the Hospital to the sympathy and support of your readers.

You probably saw a Quebec despatch deploring the great infant mortality in that province. One great factor which gives the Ontario-born child so much better a chance in life is the maintenance of public philanthropy of the leading Hospital for children on this continent. And that child, whether it be pallid of cheek or crooked of limbs, is helped over the rough spots of infancy and adolescence by this same Hospital. Here are the average day's figures of 1921 attendance:—

Cot patients	268
Other patients	158
Total	426

During the year the Hospital actually saves the lives of scores upon scores of children. It restores health or straightens limbs for hundreds more. Every contributor to the Hospital funds is a shareholder in an enterprise which wins back health and happiness for thousands of children, and thereby gives joy to thousands of anxious homes.

Remember, however, that every child to whom the Hospital's doors are opened—and none are refused—adds something to the financial burden which the GREAT MOTHER CHARITY has to carry. But it has never defaulted on its dividends, which are paid not in money, but in service.

The continued service of the Hospital depends on the continued support of the public. A minute of mercy costs fifty cents, and the clock in the treasurer's ofice is six months slow. So there are a lot of minutes to catch up.

The Hospital is accomplishing fifty per cent. more work than before the war. Owing to higher prices it requires almost twice the money. May I place that simple but serious fact before your readers in connection with the 46th Christmas appeal of the Hospital for Sick Children for funds to carry on another year of service?

Faithfully yours,

IRVING E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of Appeal Committee

Mr. and Mrs. Wall will reside in Windsor.

MESLEY—STEVENS.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Dec. 26th, when Jessie Hannah, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stevens, Brock street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Ernest Mesley, son of the late E. Mesley and Mrs. E. Mesley, Park street, Rev. Jas. Rollins officiating. Mr. G. H. King played the wedding march.

The bride was attractively attired in travelling suit of navy velour, heavily embroidered, with a small black hat and corsage bouquet of white roses. She wore the groom's gift, a handsome seal scarf. The bridesmaid, Miss Grace Stevens, wore blue canton crepe with hat of navy taffeta and ophelia roses. Mr. Harry Nelson supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Mesley left on the 3.50 C.P.R. train for Hamilton and other points. They will reside in Peterborough.

Many handsome and beautiful presents testified to the popularity of the young couple with a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens So Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Headaches Gone

Perhaps you can imagine what this means to one who had suffered terribly with headaches for ten years.

Read about it in this latter.

Mrs. Tena A. Smith, Country Harbor Cross Roads, N. S., writes:

"I feel that if anyone can recommend Dr. Chase's medicines I certainly can. I suffered for ten years from severe headaches, and although I took all kinds of headache powders they just relieved me at the time. I became very nervous and run-down, and everything seemed to trouble me. I have taken eighteen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and it has made an entirely new person of me. I felt that I could not have lived without it. I do not have one headache now for every hundred I used to have, and my nerves are good and strong. I just weighed 109 pounds when I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and now I weigh 121. Knowing what this treatment has done for me, I cannot too highly recommend it to others."

FORD AND EDISON LOOKING OVER MUSCLE SHOALS

The Wilson Dam, Florence, Alabama, looking north, as Ford and Edison saw it. The power companies of that section of the South are exerting every influence to thwart Mr. Ford in his plans.

REMINISCENCES OF AN OLD-TIME TOWN BRASS BAND ENTHUSIAST

OPERA HOUSE ORCHESTRAS ALSO COME IN FOR BOTH EULOGY AND COMEDY CRITICISM.

(BY F. H. DOBBIN.)

I've often thought—in fact, I am pretty well assured— that justice has never been done to that hard-working piece of mechanism, the town or small city Opera House orchestra. This may be because Justice is said to be blindfolded most of the time and could not, any way, see the orchestra. However, I am making a try at public duty. The fact that the public has not asked me to burst into print on this matter is neither here nor there. I am plainly in favour of any Forward Movement. The Wheels of Progress shall never remain ungreased if I can find an oil can.

The Brass Horn.

In order to disarm hostility, I may at once admit that I am musically inclined. Have been for forty or fifty years. Too long, for that matter. The trouble seems to have been as I was told by the balance of the family, that I was inclined the wrong way. That I was prone to give expression to my desires and such latent ability as I hoped to possess by creating the most prodigious noises on a brass horn. How I came by the horn is another story. As Harry Lauder defines about drinking, it was a gift.

My early acquirements in music—on the horn—were self-taught. I knew it then, realise it now, for the earmarks for a rudimentary education stuck up like a sore thumb. Intruded, as it were. The audible results were about as bad as they could be. This I recognised when it was too late. So soon as I began to practice on an old and derelict E flat also I seemed to cut adrift from the congregation. But I lived for my share in Art.

Was Too Boisterous.

Now there are certain things a fellow may do in the house if he keeps pretty quiet. We all know this. The trouble with the horn, or rather my agility in using it, was that it was too boisterous. When I began to get some soul into my practice, a crisis supervened, and I was told that if I wished to go on blowing my brains out that I'd have to do it outside. Then I was driven from home to an adjoining field. In an excess of exasperation my brothers turned on me their private artillery in the shape of rocks carefully selected from a heap of gravel near an extinct well, and I only found immunity from the fusilade by getting behind a large stump far down the field and beyond stone shot. I mention these privations as being merely a guarantee of good faith and eligibility for the job, same as in the good old days any candidate for election to the Town Council had to produce evidence of having served a post discharge course in McNaughton's boot building emporium. For there he took the fourth degree.

But I certainly made progress, and hoped for the day when I should play a solo. In early moments my rendition of a plain tune sounded like a couple of clarionets with the croup. Our family, who expressed large dislike, told me to save up and buy a steam calliope, and be done with it.

The Town Band.

A while further on, and when I had scraped acquaintance with most of the open notes, or sounds, and could make a bluff at striking B flat once in a while, I was let into the local band. I tell you I was proud. Prouder than a farmer with a new red waggon. My deepest respects were bestowed on the fellows who played the biggest horns. George Stanton had one that was a corker. When you looked down the bell of the thing, it was like peering into a deep, dark tunnel. When George let loose on a farnarle, or chromatic run in the bass clef, it sounded like a fat man falling down the cellar stairs with an oleander plant in his arms. The plants are cultivated in capacious vessels and well earthed.

After I got into the band, I was shocked at being told that I was there on false pretences. They were very frank about it. Positively rude. I was cheerfully told that I was actually the worst player in the aggregation. I did not believe this, I was sure that I knew of a worse, and that was Dan. If not, he was a mighty close second. He would go through the motions of playing at a fantasie in C minor, while the bell of his cornet was neatly plugged with a soda water bottle cork neatly inserted in the orifice by the versatile Dick Purser. Purser did this playful feat so often that we had to carry a long-handled corkscrew to operate on Dan's horn.

But here I am, scribbling away about the band, when I ought to be telling about the orchestra that I set out to tell about. However, bands are next door to the orchestra — one is inside and the other outside. But some day I'll tell you all about the band and bands we all have been implicated in, that we have fought and bled for, and it will be a revelation. A narrative of musical privation and unrequited love that would bring tears to the eyes of a policeman.

Orchestra Endeavours.

The orchestra serves to keep down audible conversation and promote whispering. Come to think of it, it seems to be the other way around. People get rid of the silence and proclaim. So soon as the preliminary scraping and tuning up starts, the inmates of the Opera House begin to discuss things and admire the advertising cards on the drop curtain. They look at these advertisements so long and often that they can see them when asleep.

Presently that little door under the edge of the stage opens and violinist escapes from the lower regions. He carries his violin under his left arm and feels for obstacles as he emerges. A fiddle is a friable kind of thing and will not stand for violence. Follows one cornet, and, right after, the clarionet. The double-bass, the father of all fiddles, leans in lonely majesty just inside the orchestra from the crowd. The bass fiddle is too big to go through the little door, even sideways, so it is left where it will be handy when wanted. No one would steal it. Might as well try to run off with a vacant lot.

The big drum, which has been lying on its side, is set upright, a sort of clapping contrivance attached, and the whole decorated with the cymbals, right on top of the drum The snare drum is produced and hung on a sort of tripod. The drums, cymbals and the triangle are called instruments of percussion, as differing from the horns, using which one has to raise his own wind. The second violin emerges, and lastly the snare drummer, who has to walk over the others to get to his place. This causes some trifling resentment, but the family adjust differences and settle down to see what the leader will have played for the evening. The leader takes the piano, because he can carry on and keep an eye on the others.

Chasing Notes.

There is about five minutes of preliminary adjustment. First violin gives a few scrapes and a whole nest full of delicious little squeals carol forth. He tightens up things and rubs the bow on what looks like an overgrown cigarette, the resin. Meanwhile the clarionet is chasing notes up and down the scale, like squirrels springing from branch to branch, with an occasional extra spring for a wider interval, while in the subdued light the silver keys twinkle as they open and shut. The double bass rolls out a couple of vibrant whangs, which seem to come from down cellar where some one was cheerfully rubbing a two-by-four scantling across the open end of a dry goods packing case. The trombone, if one there be, lets off three or four subdued whoops and runs down the chromatic scale in a vanishing diminuendo that expires about the player's feet.

The leader prods the second violin, who has been in brown study over the displayed virtues of Ford cars on a placard, brings him to attention, raps smartly on the music rack of the piano, and the conspirators sail into the opening movement of the overture to "The Bohemian Girl" or some other classic score. And thus and then you have the small city orchestra in action. Classic music is all right for those who retain a semi-educated ear and a liking for imported music, but the popular want is for something a fellow can get a grip on, like "Tipperary" or other esteemed airs. Melody first, harmony any old time.

Soul of the Orchestra.

Enconiums have been written in praise of the violin, the poet of instrumentation. The flute and the clarionet and the saxophone have all been eulogised. Even the trombone has its worshippers, but I have never read or heard of votive offerings tendered to the snare drum, and yet to my way of thinking, it is the soul of the orchestra. This reads to the musician as a rank heresy. But in the trend of times and lapse of years many heresies come to be accepted, and in upholding the possibilities of the drum I have in mind the deft skill of the man who handles it, and as I have heard it played, Bob Beach.

Beach is more than an artist—a genius. He can make the parchment of the drum quiver in thrilling little rolls that echo like raindrops on the roof or carry the rythmic cadences of the March from "Tannhauser" until one almost hears the tread and tramp of marching feet.

Four-Fold Part.

Beach has a four-fold part to manipulate, and might be said to play a very capable hand with his feet. In his care are the bass and snare drums, cymbals, and triangle, all useful and pertinent to proper rendition of the score; that punctuate and give emphasis to passage after passage, to bring out the thought of the composer and help translate the motif. Pressing the pedal with his foot and the bass drum booms out and strengthens a crescendo, while the roll and ripple of the snare drum closes down the passage and subsides in a mere quiver. A tap on the cymbals, just a love tap, and the martial clang subsides into a silvery tinkle from the triangle, struck with a blow as light as a feather across one's finger.

Say, listen. The next time you hear the orchestra, mark how something seems to be lacking when the snare drum has a few bars of rest. Note how it steadies the time and changes of movement, how deftly difficult passages of the score are mothered through and helped out. The glory of the drum, in the hands of an artiste, shows in a waltz movement, marking the surge of the measure and captivating the feet of the listeners while their ears take in the melody and harmony of the score.

TEN DOLLARS EACH FOR TWENTY HENS.

Smith Township Farmer Disposed of Twenty at This Price to an Unknown Buyer.

A farmer in Smith Township had twenty chickens stolen from his hen house. When he went out next morning, the chickens were missing, but on the floor of the hen house lay a roll of two hundred dollars in bills. Next day two poultry buyers came along for the ostensible purpose of buying chickens. The farmer assured them that he had nothing to offer, but they refused to take no for an answer, and insisted upon looking over the farmer's flock. It struck the farmer as rather significant that the two men spent more time looking over the floor of the hen house than they did at the flock of chickens. However, the farmer's loss was turned into a gain to the tune of twenty chickens at ten dollars each.

A Job For Every Man Prosperity For All.

Mr. Architect, Owner or Contractor

Plan of Co-operation.

The Provincial Advisory Committee on Unemployment considered the industrial situation and endorses the following statement of proposals:—

1.—That Manufacturers should be asked to take a price for goods on hand equal to the cost of replacement having regard to decreased cost of raw material and of labor used in manufacture.

2.—That Wholesalers should be asked to sell goods on hand at replacement prices.

3—That Retailers should be asked to sell at replacement prices.

4.—Knowing that the costs of building at the present time have been considerably reduced, those desiring to build should be encouraged to ask for new tenders on their proposed work; and that building contractors and builders' supply people should make a special effort to reduce prices to a minimum in order to restore this important key industry.

5.—That Banks and financial institutions should be prepared to co-operate to the utmost with all productive enterprise by allowing all reasonable credits and by decreasing rates as rapidly as conditions may allow.

6.—That Farmers should be asked to maintain reasonable production, and in the event of a proportionate reduction being reached in other lines, should be prepared to make needed improvements and betterments.

7.—That Labor shall be asked to take willingly a reduction in wages proportionate to progressive decrease in cost of living, in so far as such a reduction has not already taken place.]

The above statement has been submitted to and endorsed by the following interests—manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, building industries, agriculture, financial interests and the veterans.

Published by Authority of the Ontario Government on the advice of the Provincial Advisory Committee on Unemployment.

IN 1913, when you asked for tenders on a certain class of building, you found that the cost would be, for example, $100,000. In 1920 you asked for tenders on the same class of building and found that the cost would be $190,000.

If you ask for tenders for similar construction today, you will find that the cost, while somewhat higher than in 1913, is much lower than in 1920—to the extent of approximately 25 per cent. in building material and 10 per cent. in labor.

In view of this decline will you now ask for new tenders on work which you temporarily withheld?

Will you proceed with your plans in order that construction may begin on a basis as nearly approaching normal as possible?

In a general and liberal scheme of co-operation, in which all sections of the community are asked to participate, will you carry out your most aggressive plans in order that the largest amount of employment may be given.

Do this and you will materially help Ontario to take the lead towards more normal conditions with

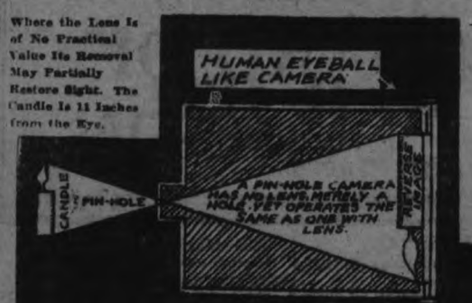
New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life



Where the Lens Is of No Practical Value Its Removal May Partially Restore Sight. The Candle Is 11 Inches from the Eye.

Can SURGERY Now Transplant EYES?

To Transplant the Eyes from One Animal Into Another, the Optic Nerve Is Carefully Cut and the Eye Removed from the First Animal. The Entire Eye of Another Animal Is Then Put in Place of the One Just Removed and the Ends of the Cut Nerves Are Carefully Laced in Juxtaposition. In Grafting Muscles to the Eye the Tendon of the Muscle Is Inserted Into a Slit Cut in the Coat of the Eye Grafted Into Place and Sewn Fast.

THE science of surgery is holding out a new ray of hope to those who live in life-long darkness—victims of "the light that failed." As a result of recent investigations at the Physiological Institute, Vienna, which carry out the discoveries of a young Hungarian, Theodore Koppanyi, under the assistance and supervision of Prof. Kolmer, surgery offers the possibility of restoring sight to the blind. At least these experiments should interest everyone afflicted with any of the many forms of eye trouble. Even though these investigators have only been successful in transplanting eyes in fish, frogs and rats, these successes lead to hope that it may be possible to transplant human eyes as a means of restoring lost sight.

If doubt exists in medical circles, as to whether the animals really do see with their transplanted visual organs, the experimenters say that their subjects show every evidence of being able to see, which is about the only definite proof which a medical man can have that one of his dumb "patients" has the power of vision.

Certain fish or frogs that resort to protective coloration, that is, change their color at will to conform with their surroundings to protect them or aid them in obtaining food, are among the kinds operated upon. When such animals become blind they cannot see their surroundings, and of course do not resort to protective color changes. When eyes are transplanted to an animal of this kind they do change color, also respond to or avoid light in a manner similar to animals with normal original sight.

Proof with rats is more difficult, yet they seem to use their transplanted eyes in a normal, original way, jumping over holes, springing about in their cages, and so on. The pupils of the transplanted eyes respond to light, and to darkness, and the eyes are as bright and life-like as the eyes of any rodent. The next experiments on the higher animals will be with rabbits, and possibly later with monkeys.

At first this work was carried on with little success, for a stitching of silk was used that killed the nerve fibres. How eyes are transplanted from a freshly-killed animal to a living one without stitching—the nerve-ends merely being carefully adjusted to each other—is described in Science and Invention by William M. Butterfield. The eyelids are then closed and kept closed for one day, at the end of which the cut nerve ends have united. In three or four weeks the eyes respond and sight is restored, according to Mr. Butterfield.

The nerves that are thus united constitute the only troublesome feature of eye-replacement. These are outlined in the accompanying drawings.

"In looking at these," explains Mr. Butterfield, "let us first consider the eyeball; it is a hollow ball-like structure having an opening at one end in which is inserted the lens system. The opposite end is lined with inter-lacing fibres that are brought together at a central point, where they are grouped longitudinally and pass out of the eyeball is a stem-like mass called the optic nerve. It is this stem that is cut, joined and united in the eye-transplanting process. The eyeballs are merely inserted in the emptied eye-sockets, much as a glass or artificial eye is introduced in an empty socket.

"During the recent World War, nerve stretching and union of the broken ends of shattered nerves was resorted to quite frequently, and many a contestant who would otherwise have been incapacitated, must thank modern surgery for the recovery of the use of his limbs.

"Another rather strange report vouched for by the medical experts, is the fact that a movable artificial eye may be inserted into the eye-socket of a person who has lost one of his eyes. This artificial eye is identical in color with the real eye and moves in the same planes. The way this was done, was to remove a piece of cartilage from the rib of the patient. To this was fastened the front of a glass eye.

"The defective eye was then removed and the muscular tendons were rigidly sewed to the cartilagenous mass in their respective positions. This glass-covered piece of cartilage was then allowed to settle in the socket. If the movements of the eye thus formed did not correspond with the movements of the real eye, it was again removed from the socket and the defective muscles were tightened up, while those on the opposite side were partially weakened by cutting. Finally, the investigators claimed that they were able to produce an artificial eye which could not be told from the real eye except by the patient himself, who of course, could not see out of the same. Muscles attach themselves readily to cartilage, but not to glass, and owing to the fact that this cartilage is fed by the regular blood streams, no septic condition resulted.

"The most noticeably remarkable operation on the eyes heretofore attempted is the removal of the lens for the purpose of restoring sight. It is not generally known that vision is possible with the lens removed, but the records seem to prove that indistinct, but positive vision is obtained in this way. It resembles in principle the practical application of the pinhole camera which can be used to produce some very creditable pictures."

How Snow Makes One See Red And Often Is Cause of Blindness

INTERESTING notes regarding the pathological effects of the visible and invisible spectrum on the eye, more especially in relation to snow-blindness, are contributed by Mr. Arthur W. Ormond to Guy's Hospital Reports.

Some interesting first-hand observations by a young officer, a member of a Canadian Arctic expedition, who visited Parry Archipelago and its neighborhood, are also set forth in the London Lancet. To begin with, it is suggested that snow-blindness is "a bad term, as the victim is not blind." The condition was never experienced in extremely low temperatures and seldom at freezing point, but generally in a condition of mist or fog, a fog-haze or "white-darkness" in snow-covered regions when all sense of perspective and stereoscopic vision is lost. Bright sunlight affected the eyes in a different manner, and real blindness was never the result of bright glaring sunlight and shadow.

The symptoms of severe conjunctivitis and superficial ulceration of the cornea were pronounced, "grittiness," discharge from eyes and nose, in 24 hours intense local pain—lasting sometimes for 10 or 12 hours—the pain being described as the sensation of thousands of red-hot needles being forced through the eyes to the sockets. The eyeballs and lining of the lids are covered by a grayish film, through which the iris and pupils are just discernible. The sufferer can see nothing, even with the eyes held open. If the eyes are protected by bandages at the first noticeable symptoms, after three days the eyes are practically normal, but there is a tendency to relapse if unfavorable conditions recur. The use of dark or colored glasses is sufficient protection, but the leader of a party cannot always keep glasses before his eyes; the glasses become dimmed with hoar-frost and have to be cleaned.

The native Eskimos are not immune from attacks of snow-blindness, and Scott and Shackleton observed that dogs and ponies manifested characteristic symptoms. The Eskimo has learned to recognize weather conditions which are dangerous from this point of view and arranges his travels accordingly. When he does travel—rarely more than five miles a day—he protects his eyes with horizontally slotted wooden spectacles cut from soft drift timber; even these are not absolutely preventive.

As to the part of the spectrum responsible for the sensations experienced by the victim, the infra-red rays may be excluded; nor is the visible spectrum entirely responsible, for in the tropics, where light is very intense, symptoms such as these are not experienced, and in summer there is no complaint of "snow-blindness" among ordinary Swiss tourists. Fuchs, of Vienna, records that some visitors to the Alps after exposure to the snowfields "see red," especially in a dimly illuminated room. The question remains whether snow-blindness can be due to ultra-violet rays alone. During the war an acute condition of the eyes similar to snow-blindness was set up in persons working with a searchlight device elaborated for signalling at sea, whereby all parts of the spectrum except the ultra-violet and a few red rays were filtered out.

The effects seem to be due not so much to the quality as to the quantity of these rays. A few of the short rays may penetrate to the lens, but experiment shows that very few ultra-violet rays reach as far as the retina.

The glass made by Sir William Crookes for "goggles" to prevent blindness, which transmits the greatest amount of light and the smallest proportion of ultra-violet rays, effectively combats the source of irritation.

"OUIJA BOARD" to TEST EGGS

VARIOUS devices have recently been advertised and sold for the purpose of testing eggs. The claim is that these instruments will show whether an egg is fertile or not, and also whether it will hatch into a rooster or a hen.

Aristotle, Pliny and other ancients wrestled with this problem of the sex of the egg, but they never solved it. They have had many imitators since then, but these also have never made demonstration that has been accepted by science.

In one old book it is laid down that the best time to set eggs is when the moon is on the increase; also if males are wanted, you should choose only pointed eggs, and if females are wanted, only round ones. Then some experts say that eggs laid before noon will produce pullets, and those laid after will turn into cockerels. Recently a Frenchman, M. Lienhart, came to the conclusion that a big egg will produce a male and a smaller one a female.

Experiments with the new egg tester proved, as might be expected, that it cannot be relied on at all. Out of 12 eggs that the tester indicated were all fertile, five proved to be infertile, and out of another setting of 12 eggs that the tester said were not fertile, eight hatched.

The egg tester, as described in The Pathfinder, is a sort of ouija board, for it behaves in a strange way. You can test the thing for yourself, for the alleged egg tester, which sells for a fancy price, is nothing more than a small indicator tied to a string. A piece of pencil or the like will serve just as well.

To test this device hold it over an egg as shown in the accompanying drawing. If the pencil swings round in a little circle it indicates that the egg is of the feminine gender, while if it comes to a stop it shows it is of the male persuasion. Marvelous!

There are other eerie things it is claimed the tester will do. Hold it as steady as possible and the pencil will tend to swing in a north-and-south direction; then let someone place his fingers on the upper side of your hand (the one holding the string) and at once the pencil will swing in the other direction, namely east or west.

You can try this often enough to satisfy yourself that it is a fact. It is on this scientific fact that the so-called egg tester is based, though the test has nothing whatever to do with the sex or fertility of an egg. It is claimed that the tester will also tell the sex of any animal, if you hold it over the animal. But this also is a fake, as you can determine for yourself.

Whether it is the mind of the operator that influences the "tester" or whether it is some action of the nerves or blood circulation which causes the hand to sway slightly, is a matter of uncertainty. It is certain, however, that the movement is all due to some slight motion of the hand, for if you will suspend the string from a nail and put an egg under it the indicator will remain at rest. This shows that it is not the egg that influences it, but your hand.

The device is at least an interesting toy and it has in it all the possibilities of the ouija-board. By making the letters of the alphabet in a circle on a sheet of paper and holding the indicator over it you can (if the "spirits' are in a co-operating frame of mind) make it spell out all sorts of messages.

The MYSTERY of the BARNACLE

IT is a curious fact that the barnacle, which is so well known to coast dwellers and seafaring men, seems to have been the least known for many years to scientists of any of the myriad forms of life in the sea. So indefinite and hazy were the results of investigations in its case that until a very few years ago the barnacle was classed with the mollusca, although it is really a crustacean. It is developed from free-swimming larvae and attaches itself to rocks or timbers, which it never leaves again unless torn off by force.

There prevailed during the middle ages a curious superstition that the barnacle was the egg of a migratory goose, the eggs being attached to the branches of trees that overhung the water. Not until it was found that the bird had its nesting place in the Arctic regions and came south during the polar winter was this fiction disproved. But the bird is still known as the barnacle goose.

There are several species of this strange little crustacean, but the sort that gives the shipowner the greatest trouble is the species that fastens itself by a flexible stem to the bottoms of vessels in large clusters and necessitates the ship being taken to dry dock for removal.

The barnacle also attaches itself to living organisms, one of its favorite lodging places being the huge bulk of the whale. Sometimes, it is contended, it ventures even into the jaws of the big mammal. It is one of the paradoxes of nature that the leviathan of the deep is utterly powerless to cope with the small custacean, which, at its largest size, when within the shell, is about as big as a chestnut. It is believed that whales sometimes rub themselves against ships in their attempts to rid themselves of their unwelcome tenants.

Despite their feeble power of vision barnacles cannot live long when deprived of light. Always found in salt water, there are still certain kinds that live in fresh water. Darwin speaks of a species he discovered fastened to the tail feathers of a bird. The commonest sort are the sessile or "acorn shells," which encrust the rocks between tide marks on the sea coast.

About the most striking description of a barnacle to be found anywhere is that of Huxley: "A barnacle may be said to be a crustacean fixed by its head and kicking its food into its mouth by its legs."

Barnacles belong to that class of crustaceans that includes lobsters and crabs, constituting the order of cirripedia, which means "curled feet." Barnacles are hatched from eggs; the young in no way resemble the adults. Emerging from its egg the new-born barnacle exhibits itself as a free swimming little creature; with one eye, six legs and one shell. Several times does it undergo the operation of moulting. Finally it appears with two eyes, twelve legs and two shells. At this stage of development it ceases its roving and attaches itself to some convenient object by means of its antennae, secreting a kind of cement whereby it glues itself quite fast. Then comes a metamorphosis. It loses its bivalve shell and its eyes and acquires its characteristic feathery legs, and it takes on an entirely new shell.

Just WHY an ATHLETE Is NOT Always STRONG

THE man with a naturally large muscular development has an advantage over one who has not, and if he spends an equal amount of time in training himself will become the super-athlete or the champion. Yet some of the greatest performers are not powerfully built. Landon of Yale, Olympic champion in the high jump, has not the appearance of an athlete, yet by the persistent rope skipping, jumping with heavy shoes and garments, he has so developed his jumping muscles that he has greater spring in his legs than any other jumper in the world.

And Jackson V. Sholtz of the University of Missouri, who was the fastest sprinter until he retired recently, developed himself by practising alertness, and did it so well that his muscles seemed to react to the sound of the gun; thus he gained two yards at the very start on his competitors.

Charles W. Paddock, an Olympian champion, explains in The Scientific American that the best way to keep in training for one's athletic specialty is not to stick exclusively to it, for all star performers need relaxation. He should rather keep himself physically fit at all times, and then when he is going to take part in a contest spend a week or two at it alone. He advises athletes to indulge in some other sport then their specialty, once they have attained great excellence in it.

"There is nothing which will develop a boy or young man so quickly or so well as swimming," writes Mr. Paddock. "Bicycle riding, too, if not engaged in too strenuously, is wonderful exercise, and walking, along with either of these, furnishes a combination of muscular development hard to surpass. But if swimming is the form of sport the neophyte desires to perfect himself in, then a great deal of running would prove profitable. In the first place it is the direct opposite of swimming and develops an entirely different set of muscles. So that when the runner becomes a swimmer he can tell the progress he is making by the degree of soreness which he experiences. This soreness, of course, indicates that other muscles are being developed, and unless you swim a great deal, which is not good at first, then it will take you a much longer time to develop your muscles.

"Again, in swimming, it's your chest and shoulders and arm muscles which receive the most attention, and by running you have also developed leg muscles as well. When you become a champion, that extra development which the running gave you will give you an advantage over the great swimmer who never ran. And so the theory holds true in many kinds of competitive sport. Though you may specialize in only one, you may gain a great deal of assistance from the participation in other kinds of athletics."

WHEN IS CHRISTMAS?

ALTHOUGH it is popularly supposed that the birth of Christ, celebrated on Dec. 25, took place round about A. D. 1, from which date the Christian Era commences, certain facts, cited by some writers, prove otherwise; also, it is highly probable that, strictly to be accurate, Christians should rejoice, not in December, but in April or May. The rainy season occurs in Judea during December, when the weather conditions are the reverse of those usually connected with this event.

Among other dates assigned to Christ's birth are March 4, Oct. 3, and Jan. 2, while one authority places the date as far back as 100 years B. C. The majority, however, vote for the spring months, and it is, therefore, fairly safe to assume that the birth took place during this latter time.

Christmas itself was observed as early as the year 98 A. D., celebrations then taking place in May and June, and not in December.

In view of the many pagan rites occurring in the winter months, and with a desire to banish such celebrations, during the fifth century, Christmas day, it is claimed, was officially fixed for Dec. 25. This is said to be the principal reason for assigning December as the month for rejoicings.

Finger Nails as Insanity Sign

A LEAK in the plumbing of the heart or, more technically, a misfunctioning of the aortic valve, can easily be detected by a look at the finger nail, according to Dr. George Bevier, chief resident physician at the Philadelphia General Hospital. In such a case, he explains, the pulsation of the blood vessels underneath the nail itself is irregular, and irregular splashes of red appear in the nail proper. In a general sort of a way the coloring of the nail aids in diagnosis, because nail coloring is dependent upon a most important factor of health, the circulation.

"The nails of the insane patient," Dr. Bevier says, "we often discover, are malformed, and it would seem that the irregularity in the mental structure goes hand in hand with a peculiarity in the make-up of the finger nail."

RECONSTRUCTING the ANATOMY of a FAIRY

IN an address delivered before the Anthropological section of the British Association an attempt was made to reconstruct the anatomy of fairies and to show that these lively, delightful and beautiful beings are not the creations of the imagination of centuries of story tellers, but were once a real race of people. The true key of the idea is found in the fact that although fairy women are generally represented as lovely, some of the tribes of men fairies are described as ugly, and fairy children when left as changelings are invariably pictured as repulsive urchins of a sallow complexion and most deformed about the feet and legs.

When one approaches the fairy question in this [illegible] is pointed out, one is forced to conclude [illegible]iries as a real people consisted of a short, [illegible]swarthy race, which made its habitations [illegible]ound or otherwise cunningly concealed. [illegible]were hunters, probably, and fishermen; at any rate they were not tillers of the ground or eaters of bread. Most likely they had some of the domestic animals and lived mainly on milk and the produce of the chase, together with what they got by stealing.

They seem to have practised the art of spinning, although they do not appear to have thought much of clothing. They appear to have had a language of their own, which would imply a time when they knew no other, and explain why when they came to town to do their marketing they laid down the exact money without uttering a syllable to anybody by way of bargaining for their purchase. They counted by fives and dealt only in the simplest of numbers.

They were inordinately fond of music and dancing. They had a marvellously quick sense of hearing and were consummate thieves; but their thievery was not always resented, as their visits were held to bring luck and prosperity.

Explaining SECRET of RED HAIR

WHY does a red-haired child have red hair? How is the "Bourbon jaw" transmitted for hundreds of years from one generation of Bourbons to another? Why does some peculiar characteristic of bodily form or of temperament possessed by an ancestor reappear in a descendant?

These are some of the mysteries of life and heredity that were informally discussed among scientists who attended a recent meeting of the British Association in London and one of the answers given is summed up in the word "chromosomes."

The pursuit, capture and identification of chromosomes have been one of the absorbing tasks of biologists for some years past, and by means of high-powered microscopes chromosomes have been detected and counted in the germ cells of the human body and of other living organisms.

The possibility is held out that eventually the mystery of heredity may be wrested from the chromosome, and that the biologist may some day be able to put his finger on some particular part of some particular chromosome and say, "This is the factor that represents the redness of your hair," and so on with all the thousands of characteristics that make up the physical or mental composition of man.

The immense difficulty of the task is one of its attractions for the scientific mind. The chromosome is infinitesimally small, and Prof. C. Barclay-Smith, of Kings College, has declared that, although he has used a microscope for years, he is not sufficiently expert to tell one chromosome from another. He explained that the chromosomes are contained in the "nucleus" or life speck, which is enclosed in the "cell," the number of chromosomes varying in the cells of different forms of life, up to a total number of about 15 in a single cell.

Each of the chromosomes has its own shape. Taking the circumstance that various "factors" are transmitted to offspring, and the fact that the cell contains chromosomes, biologists have come to the conclusion that the chromosomes represent factors in the make-up of living things.

TO THE ELECTORS.

Being in a position to give all the time required in service to the Public, if elected as a Member of the Utilities Commission, I shall especially demand a Detailed Audit of the Commission's Receipts and Expenditures annually, and that this Statement be furnished to the Public.

From my experience in the Council as Alderman, and latterly as Mayor, I have come to the conclusion that the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario should reduce the Rates for Light and Power in Peterborough, because the local surplus each year is considerably more than is required to pay operating expenses and the interest and sinking fund on debentures.

With my long municipal experience, and also as a general contractor in Peterborough, I feel that I could be of some service to the Light, Power, and Water Consumers as a Member of the Utilities Commission.

EMBLEM RING FOR MR. ROBERT REID

ODDFELLOWS HONOR RETIRING SECRETARY, SATURDAY.

After filling the office of secretary treasurer of the Triple Link Club since its inception four years afo, Robert Reid, owing to business engagements has retired and on Saturday afternoon in the Oddfellow's Hall, was presented with a combination Masonic and Oddfellow's ring by members of the club in recognition of his efforts on behalf of the organization. To his work in the secretary's chair, R. E. Harding President of the Club, who made the presentation said that most of the progress made in four years was due.

An address eulogising the work of Mr. Reid to whom the presentation was entirely unexpected, was read by Mr. R. Martin of Peterboro Lodge No. 111. The retiring secretary made a brief reply declaring that his duties had been a pleasure and he had felt that in prosecuting such work was only serving(the Oddfellow's organizations.

Mr. Reid was also commended by other prominent members and universal regret is felt in both lodges at his retirement. The growth of the assests of the club fom about $200 to $2000.00 in four years is due in no small measure to the zealous nature of the retiring secretary's endeavours. His successor has not yet been appointed.

J. J. TURNER

Every true citizen loves the city in which he or she lives. There is no better City in the Dominion of Canada than the City of Peterboro. Then it is the duty of every citizen of this City to see that every man sent to the City Council as alderman or mayor is a man worthy of holding such a position not only with intelligence, but also with the dignity it demands. Let us have honourable upright business men. Put Peterboro where it belongs. We have now an opportunity of electing as Mayor a man who deeply loves the City in which he lives; proof of this is given by quoting his record to date:

Board of Aldermen—1908-1909-1910-1919-1920-1921.

Board of Education—1911-1912.

President Chamber of Commerce —1917-1918-1919.

Secretary Sunday School Association—1915.

President Sunday School Association—1916.

President Y.M.C.A.—1912.

Truly a record of which any man should be proud. Citizens of Peterboro is J. J. Turner not worthy of representing you as your Mayor?

WORK FOR AND ELECT

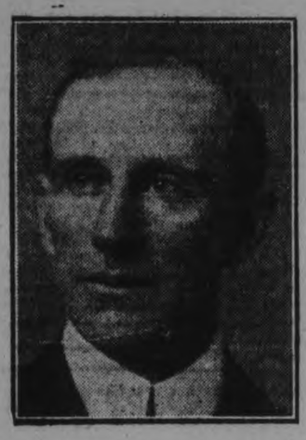
W. H. TAYLOR

FOR MAYOR

TO THE ELECTORATE OF PETERBOROUGH CITY

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Having accepted nomination as candidate for Mayor during the ensuing year, allow me to emphasize the fact that I stand for those broad principles of Democratic civic administration which foster and enhance the interests of the community as a whole to the exclusion of even a thought in which class discrimination can find place. And, if elected, it will be my best endeavor to advocate and encourage such municipal legislation as shall assist in making for a revival in 1922 of economic normalcy, together with Peterborough's return to that old-time industrial and trade activity and development for which this city has been noted in the past.



I contested the Mayoralty before, in 1920, when Ald. A. A. McIntyre tied me for the seat, and I am now encouraged in the assurance that many friends and well-wishers will again extend their support and influence to secure my election to the Chief Magistrateship, which was only won by Ald. A. A. McIntyre in 1920 when the City Clerk,, quite properly, cast his deciding vote for the then candidate with the longest record in municipal service.

ACTION, NOT WORDS

With three years' active experience on the Aldermanic Board—two terms as Finance Minister—and being thoroughly conversant with civic administration, to say nothing of having succeeded in my own business affairs, I have no hesitancy in claiming those "administrative" qualifications looked for in the executive head of this important city. And, if favoured with your confidence, believe me my personal interests, as Mayor, shall be at all times subordinated to those of our community generally, especially so in one big effort of "action" to counter as quickly as practicable, by municipal functioning existing industrial depression by such equitable municipal enterprise, and consequent increased labour demand, as Peterborough's resources and needs will warrant.

WHERE EX-ALD. TAYLOR STANDS.

ON his past three years' record in Council.

FOR the application of strictly business methods in the city's management.

FOR transportation to and from East City by modern motor buses, forming a part of the present Hydro-Electric railway system.

FOR immediate prosecution of what work possible in connection with the sewage disposal plant.

FOR undertaking at the earliest possible moment public improvemnts on as large a scale as practicable, to furnish work for the unemployed.

FOR Peterborough work for Peterborough citizens, and under fair living wages and working conditions in all circumstances.

FOR the Provincial and Dominion Parliaments assuming, with the municipality, their proportionate shares of relief for the unemployed. And that this relief shall not be limited to municipal non-revenue-producing improvements, but extend in such other directions as necessary to relieve the distress of the workless and their suffering families.

FOR an earnest effort to reduce taxation, and to encourage improved social conditions generally.

SYMPATHETIC REGIME.

In seeking election, I offer my fellow citizens my very best endeavour in their weal, individually and collectively, actuated by an honest desire to, as far as a Chief Magistrate can, inaugurate next year a municipal government regime pregnant with sympathetic heed of all just demands, and ready for co-operation with other bodies to stimulate industrial, labour and business activities, out of which may evolve an early return to community prosperity.

Yours faithfully for Better Times,

W. H. TAYLOR

BELLEVILLE IN SHAPE FOR GAME HERE TOMORROW

The Belleville team, which will play here to-morrow night, has the edge on the Petes, inasmuch as it will be the third game of the season for Manager Eddie Thomas' crew, who have already had clashes with Cobourg and Smith's Falls to "prep" them for the clash with the local gang. However, the Petes had a good practice yesterday morning and will be out again this evening between 6 and 7 o'clock and should be in fairly good shape to-morrow night. Both teams will use substitutes freely so that the pace should be fast all the way.

Reserved seats went on sale at Bond's drug store this morning and there promises to be a real old time crowd out to see the first game of the season. Good ice conditions are hoped for and there should be few dull moments. The game will be of big assistance in preparing the Petes for the opening O.H.A. game with Lindsay here next Monday night.

HOCKEY

The Duffus Devils won their first game of the season when they defeated the Crescents by the score of 3 to 0.

The Peterborough intermediates had a good practice yesterday morning at Brock street rink, although all the players could not be notified of the workout in time. Among those out were Parker, Jackson, R. Rose, L. Rose, Burgess, Tingley, Collins and Harry Thornton.

There will be another workout to-night at 6 o'clock in final preparation for to-morrow night's game.

Nothing will ever be attempted if all possible objections must first be overcome.—Dr. Johnson.

Joe Marsden and Vern Dawson Won the Prizes.

Last week at the Water street alleys two nice turkeys were given for the highest three games in five-and ten pins. Joe Marsden won the high three game in five pins with the grand total of 765. V. Dawson put up the grand total of 715 in three games in ten pins. Thos. Barrette was high up till Saturday evening with 642 in ten pins, when Dawson was high for 262, 198, 255, totalling 715. This week a goose is put up five and ten pins and some good scores will be seen.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORIES

"FROZEN DEATH"

(Copyright 1921.)

"Look back over the city's death records for the past six months and then ask Dr. Albert Beaurigard why it is that fifteen prominent citizens have died from cholera and yellow fever when there has been no epidemic. Ask him why these men died within a few days after dining at his house."

This was the anonymous letter that led the Chief of Police of Buenos Ayres to assign Manue Porteras, one of his best men, to the case which was destined to become unique in criminal annals.

It was true that a number of men who were prominent in the life of the city—bankers and lawyers and doctors—had died within the period mentioned in the unsigned communication. But in every case the attending physicians had given certificates of death from natural causes. In fact, as Porteras pointed out to his chief, there had been autopsies on three of the bodies, but even these post-mortem examinations disclosed nothing out of the ordinary.

"I know all that," retorted the Chief of Police, 'but the charges made in this letter are too grave to overlook—if only for the sake of Dr. Beaurigard's reputation. It is unthinkable that a scientist of his standing, a member of the Ecole de Medicine, a man who is mentioned as the logical successor to Koch, should be connected with these deaths. Besides, what would be his motive?"

"Professional jealousy?" hazarded Porteras.

"Possibly, but that's hardly probable. Our first job is to find out who wrote this letter and what proof, if any, he has for his statements. The handwriting is only partly disguised. See what you can make of it."

Before tackling the question of the letter itself, Porteras dug back into the history of the fifteen men who had died of cholera and yellow fever. In no case did he find any reason which would explain their murder, any motive for removing them. Every one of them had been friendly with Dr. Beaurigard, and not even the doctors had been rivals of his. The accused scientist stood head and shoulders above them all—a man at the very pinnacle of his profession.

What Porteras did find, was a support for the allegation of the anonymous writer. Each of the dead men had been a guest at the Beaurigard home only a few days before their death. Less than twenty-four hours later they deve oped symptoms of the dread disease!

Armed with this formation, the detective started his search for the man who had written the note Disguised as book agent, Porteras succeeded in securing samples of the handwriting of a number of persons who were known to be friendly with Dr. Beaurigard, but none of these showed the distinct characteristics which were apparent even in the altered penmanship of the letter of the police. It was not until he came away from the Beaurigard home with samples of the servant's handwriting that he found what he had been looking for.

The following morning Buenos Ayres was startled by the news of the arrest of Dr. Albert Beaurigard, the foremost physician in South America, on a charge of murder.

During the days which preceded his trial, the scientist preserved an air of total nonchalance, appearing oblivious of the fact that he was about to be tried for his life and contenting himself with the issuance of statements that the "whole matter was too absurd to be considered numerous." So numerous were his friends and so secure his position in the social life of the South American capital that the majority of the people claimed that the affair was a plot on the part of the police, an attempt to cover their past failures by a sensational prosecution of an innocent man.

It was not until the State had laid the foundation for its case by introducing the testimony of physicians who had attended the dead man, followed by proof that each of these men had dined at the Beaurigard home only a few hours before they had been taken ill, that Porteras played his trump card. At his direction the prosecuting attorney called Dr. Beaurigard's butler to the stand and for the first time the face of the accused man showed the strain under which he had been laboring.

"What was the difference between this glass and the others?"

"The liqueur was the same. The ice came from a small test tube in Dr. Beaurigard's laboratory."

Hardly had the butler finished this sentence before the prisoner was on his feet, his left hand upraised to attract the attention of the court.

"Yes," he exclaimed, "I am responsible for their deaths—but you'd never have discovered it if it hadn't been for this prying servant. I desired to make experiments with the cholera and yellow fever germs Other subjects were impossible to secure, so I determined to gamble with death, for the fatal glass might have come to me as easily as to any of the others. The germs were frozen in the ice, but," and here Porteras sprang forward, but too late, "I will never live to pay the official penalty for my experiments. The world may call me mad, but I will not hear it!"

A moment later he was dead. The grain of cyanide of potassium, hidden in his signet ring, had done its work quickly and infallibly.

SPORT GOSSIP

Talk about ingratitude. Lindsay hockey folks did not come to the meeting held here to draw up the schedules for the O. H. A. groups. They would be quite satisfied with the bill-of-fare. Now when the platter is handed their way, there's a loud wail against faring on sardine sandwiches. According to the hockey critic of Scugogville, the schedule manufacturers fixed things so that the poor little midgets will be caught coming and going. In other words, if Jerry Coughlin's speedy youngsters fail to land a knockour wallop, the P.A.A.A. crowd will do the trick. Explaining it another way, it gives Peterborough a double chance — a sort of a head I win, tail you lose proposition for Lindsay. Lindsay fans are now ready to argue that Ponzi and his millions never would have parted company, had he employed some of the schemers of the Electric City.

With a mad burst of wisdom, residents along the Scugog bring forth the suggestion that all five teams be placed in one bag, thus making it a real fight. That would frustrate the designs of the enemy. With this arrangement, one of the Peterborough teams would miraculously fade away, leaving but one obstacle along the pathway to group honors.

Still if Lindsay hockey players are so much in love with the prospects of a long jump to Lakefield, and want to live down this way most of the winter, it shows good judgment on the part of the hockey players, but it's a mighty poor "compliments of the season" to the folks at home.

Certain hockey players are taking the joy out of life in Belleville. According to report, the first hockey practice did not bring out all the boys. "Bill Green was not out, nor was Daw Whelan, although at the rink. Gunner Arnott was present also as a spectator." Probably the ice was in poor condition.

CANADIAN PACKING CO. ANNUAL TEN PIN GAME

Once again the Water street bowling alleys will be the scene of a grand contest when the commercial travellers and the office staff of the Canadian Packing Co. will clash with their best wood trundlers on Wednesday afternoon. This affair is an annual event in this line of sport, as well as an added entertainment to out-of-town visitors. If they repeat their scores of the past year, some very interesting totals will be in evidence.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

Yesteday at both shows the Royal Theatre was crowded to capacity by audiences that voiced their approval of the magnificent selecton of pictures specially procured by Mr. Pappas for the first half of Christmas week. This selection was obtained by a personal trip to Toronto by that veteran of the local show business at great expense and the exercise of good judgment. The seven reel Vitagraph super-feature picture entitled "Flower of the North" is one of the most vivid and thrilling romances ever shown on a curtan. The love scenes are not of the mushy maudlin character too frequently seen on the satge, but show how the course of true love, through various temporary interruptions lead the hero and heroine to a happy culmination of their hearts desire. Ths picture taken north of the 53rd. degree in Canadian mountains, isi amazng in the perfection of its scenic grandeur. The story, in the fewest word's n attempt made by unscrupulous men to steal the vast salmon fishing rights obtained by our hero. Altho taken in a wild country never screened before, Henry Walthall, with a small army of actors, and his company augumented by a tribe of local Indians, manage to secure a picture that has never been excelled. One scene, that is a thriller is the heroine's plunge into the boiling rapids of Big Thunder when she is rescued just at the brink of the falls, when to go over would have meant certain death The fourth episode of the million dollar serial, .Breaking Through" was partcularly interesting. Bettina, is rescued from her perilous position a hundred feet above the river and then enters another adventure involving perilous house climbing to save a friend. The comedy, Hal Lloyd is of extra interest and kept the audience in roars of laughter. The same bill will be repeated tonight at the home of high-class pictures.

AT THE REGENT.

SHIRLEY MASON SCORES IN "THE LAMPLIGHTER"

Shirley Mason, the diminutive William Fox star, who has endeared herself to local screen audiences by reason of her splendid work in "Her Elephant Man" and "Wing Toy," proved again her exceptional ability at the Regent Theatre yesterday, at the opening performance of "The Lamplighter," one of the most cleverly constructed and most appealing stories ever told upon the local screen.

In "The Lamplighter," Miss Mason is cast for the part of Gertie, a little girl separated from her mother through the agency of a stern grandparent—who refuses to recognize his daughter's marriage. The child is cruelly buffeted by fate in the form of a dissipated old woman until, through the friendly interposition of a lovable old man who follows the business of lamplighting, she is eventually restored to her moer and father, and, with the sweetheart of her early troubled days, finds the happiness so long denied her.

The story, while intensely romantic, with the love interest ever uppermost, is nevertheless replete with thrilling incidents, such as a fire and explosion on a ship in harbor, upon which most of the story's principal actors have been gathered.

The work of Shirley Mason in the part of Gertie was finished and delightful at all times, and the work of the supporting company was marked by a skill and sincerity that made the rendition of the beautiful narrative a positive treat for film lovers.

William Fox produced the play. Maria Susanna Cummins wrote the story and Howard M. Mitchell directed its stagings; and their united efforts have provided Shirley Masons with one of the most worthy vehicles ever entrusted to her.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The Capitol had a filled house yesterday afternoon and evening, and had an excellent programme for the holiday. Thomas Meighan in the stellar role of "The Easy Road," has a production of unflagging interest, which runs true to life from start to finish. As a literary young genius who marries a woman of wealth, he starts on the easy downward path of pleasure and indulgence, to be brought up hard by the prompt action of his young wife. How he comes through the test, which first leads him to the river, with a suicide's grave yawning before him, which brings into his life the half-blind girl waif of the streets, and finally leads him back along the path of hard work to complete regeneration, is interestingly told in a picture that pictures gilded pleasure in aristocratic surroundings and the lowest dives of the Tenderloin, which has for a background American summer resorts and Italian gardens, and ends with an old-fashioned appeal.

There are "Topics of the Day," an exciting instalment of the serial "Hurricane Hutch," a really amusing comedy, with Percy and Ferdie, the "Hallroom Boys" in a medley of hotel life, and a couple of extraordinary black face comedians, Anderson and Coines, for the vaudeville. These gentlemen have splendid vonces, which are heard to advantage in vocal solos, and a unique talking act, involving an unfaithful treasurer and a weirdly-attired ghost. Some unaccomapnied footwork with a variety of new steps were loudly encored.

AT THE GRAND.

"PARLOR, BEDROOM AND BATH"

After a weeks holiday the Rex Stock Company are back with us again in one of the funniest farces that has been seen here in years. "Parlour, Bedroom and Bath" is a scream from start to finish and the capacity audience which saw it roared the house with laughter. Rex is cast as Reggie the bashful young gentelman who is involved in a series of embarrassing complications and his adventures with the fair sex are hilariously funny. It is one of his best parts and he makes the most of it. Hazel Williams has the role as "Polly" in which she does some of the most amusing work she has displayed in Peterboro and the other members of the cast do their share in making "Palour, Bedroom and Bath" a laughing success from start to finish.

It was announced yesterday that the title "The Price of Lies" had been chosen as the most suitable for the unnamed play presented two weeks ago for which the audience were asked to submit names. Hundreds of titles were sent in and, "The Price of Lies" was suggested by three people. One of these was ever was a theatrical employee and could not share in the prize. The $10 will be divided between the other two, Mr. Garthouse, White House, Peterboro and V. Hawkins Maria Street.

All water should be removed from tubs and pails after use, otherwise they will rust or rot quickly.

The Willard Mark Is Your Protection

When you buy a battery you buy more than just so much metal, chemicals, and jars. You buy a service that supplies power for starting and current for ignition, lights and horn.

And the only means you have of knowing in advance how much you get for your money is by the maker's name.

Every Willard Threaded Rubber Battery has the Willard Trade Mark stamped in red on one side of the battery case. By this mark you know you are getting genuine Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation. Unless you do see the mark, you can't be sure of Threaded Rubber advantages, including most miles of uninterrupted service per dollar of battery cost.

To the Electors of the Township of Smith

At yesterday's nomination, I was nominated as a candidate for Councillor, and I want to express my appreciation of that honor, and to thank, most kindly, my nominator and his seconder for the confidence in my ability which that nomination implies. And while I have no desire to shirk my duties as a good citizen, the Council is already full, and our corner of the township already represented by a presumably good man. While I do not know the attitude Mr. Mann, who is also a candidate in our corner of the township, will take, I feel it would be presumptious on my part to stand for election (even if I were vain enough to imagine I would be elected and cause the township this unnecessary expense, so I have decided to decline.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I remain,

Yours truly
J. G. JOPLING.

To the Electors of North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentemen,— Having been nominated for the office of Deputy-Reeve for the year 1922, I would respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and if elected will continue to serve all interests of the Township with the same fidelity as I have served you as Councillor for the past two years.

Yours respectfully,
FRED H. ROWAN.

FINANCIAL AND MARKETS

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—Events of over Christmas holidays prompted additional covering of short contracts at the opening of to-day's stock market. St. Paul Preferred rallied another point on assurances of company's easy financial position. Gains of one to two points were reported by Mercantile Marine Preferred, Peoples Gas and Houston Oil. Strength was shown by Central Leather, Studebaker and Summatra Tobacco. Few reactionary features included Corn Products and Utah Copper. Preliminary quotations for principal forenoon exchanges were firm.

Market drifted aimlessly during the morning. Rails and seasoned Industrials again giving way to speculative issues. Heavy selling of General Motors was attributed to price reductions by two of its leading subsidiaries.

Peoples Gas extended its advance to three points on resumption of dividend. American Ice, Davidson Chemical, Pierce Oil Preferred and Lima Loco registered gains of two to three points. Baldwin, New York Airbrake, Utah, Anaconda, Stromberg, Manhattan Shirt and Jones Brothers Lea rose an average of one point each. There was a liberal supply of call money at opening rate of five per cent.

Bull pools availed themselves of 4 1-2 per cent. money rate at midday to renew operations in selected issues. Lima Locomotive increased its rise to 7 1-2 points and American Locomotive advanced 2 1-4.

Coppers and several of the Granger Rails rose 1 to almost 2 points.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.) — Sterling exchange firm. Demand Great Britain 4.20 1-8. Canadian Dollars 6 1-2 per cent. discount.

GRAIN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)— Opening wheat quotations which varied from 1-8 to 7-8c. higher with May 117 3-8 and July 105 7-8, were followed by continued moderate display of strength. Corn hardened with Wheat after a hesitant start. Opening was unchanged to 1-4 lower, May 55 1-8 to 1-4, but then slight gains were scored. Oats took the same path as wheat, opening 1-8 to 3-8 higher, May 39 3-8 to 39 1-2, and making an additional advance later. Higher value in hog market gave little firmness to provisions.

LEADERS QUIET.

MONTREAL, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—Local stock exchange was evidently suffering an over doze of Christmas during the first half hour this morning, for only two of the leaders were traded in and both these were quiet. Brazilian rose half a point to 28 and Riordan was quoted unchanged at 5.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— A resumption of trading on local stock exchange after a triple holiday did not bring any noticeable improvement in volume of business and the morning session was very quiet with only fractional changes in the majority of stocks traded in. Steamer Preferred, one point higher at 45, was the most active stock with sales of 110 shares. Banks were very quiet, although two board lots of Molsons Bank were put through at 171 as compared with the last sale at 177 on Dec. 14th in unlisted department. Dominion Bridge, after opening at 64 1-4, sold off 1 3-4 points to 64 1-2

NO CATTLE MARKET.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—No trading on cattle market this morning.

YOUNG WOMAN FINED ON HER WEDDING DAY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Charged wih having sold liquor without a license, Blanche Demers, Albert Street, pleaded guilty in the Police Courth this morning and was fined $500 and $17 costs. The alternative was four months in jail. The fine was paid. The money was brought to the Clerk of the Court scarcely half an hour after the fine was imposed. It was brought by a young man, the groom of the young lady fined. To-day is their wedding day.

It takes sixty-four muscles of the face to make a frown and only thirteen to make a smile. Why work overtime?—Success.

TRAINING RULES FOR THE LOCAL HOCKEY PLAYERS

Walter Smaill, manager of the Peterborough hockey teams, has arranged the following rules for his players, and their adoption by them would certainly prove beneficial:

1—First and foremost, don't forget that I am running this club. It won't do you any good to tell your troubles to the public and the other players. If you have a grievance tell it to me.

2.—When practice is called at a certain hour be there. If you are late we want to know why, and even why isn't an excuse.

3—You are requested to give your best services to the club. Condition depends a lot on how you behave off the ice.

4.—Remember, that it does not require bravery to hit another man over the head with a stick. If you want to fight join our boxing department.

5.—Time spent in the penalty box is time wasted. You are not expected to take all abuse without going back at your opponent, but do not be foolish.

6.—Remember that there are generally five players on the team with you. You are not expected to play the whole game.

7.—You are not sent on the ice to score all the goals. Combination with the rest of the players will probably result in more goals than individual play.

8.—You will not be "off" for doing the best you can. You will be punished for indifferent work or carelessness. If you are anxious to win all the time you will be a good player. Indifference or lack of "pepper" is one thing we never did like.

9.—Remember it means as much to you to win the championship as it does to me. If you do not play as well as you can, you are not only hurting yourself, but the rest of the team and your supporters.

10.—Do not think that you are putting something over on the manager when you do anything you should not. You are discounting your hockey ability, not to be a good fellow.

11.—If playing hockey, "as an amateur," is going to be your business in the winter, it does not get you anywhere. "Amateur" and pro. clubs pass it over. Your future in the game depends on how you play the game.

12.—The way you play and live, will better your business in the future.

13.—Don't always imagine you are getting the worst of it from the official. Play hockey and they will see you secure an even break.

14.—Don't knock your fellow players. Remember they might also have a hammer concealed somewhere and might be tempted to use it.

15.—Play hockey, attend practices regularly; take care of your condition and you will not suffer any penalties.

16.—Remember the first paragraph and be sure to tell your troubles to me. I am an easy boss, if you do your share. If you do not want to be on the square and play the hockey you are capable of, turn your uniform in to the club, and be a spectator.

GAMES TO-NIGHT.

The season's scheduled games begin to-night with the following draw:

Ira Moore vs. J. H. Metheral.
R. M. Hamilton vs. J. W. McDermid.
R. L. Dobbin vs. A. W. Archibald.
W. D. Campbell vs. R. P. Best.
G. H. Giroux vs. J. E. A. Fitzgerald
W. R. Widdiss vs. H. R. Martin.

Some of these rinks may not be able to toe the scratch but there is no penalty for defaults this week.

Mrs. Winifred F. Grey, of Gardner, is the only woman cab driver in Maine, is about to be elected alderman of streets and highways in her home town.

FOR SWEET CHARITY

Girls of Radcliffe College waste nothing. Old clothing is contributed by them to various charities and at intervals special days are set apart for the collection of this material. Here are some of the girls contributing old shoes on "Shoe Day."

Holiday Games.

Morning, noon and night games kept the rink lively on the holiday. There were scratch matches for fun or cigars as the spirit moved the players. New Year's will be featured by the annual games between the President and the Vice-President.

The announcement of the Bobcaygeon bonspiel for January 10th suggests an early trip for those curlers who never miss the Bobcaygeon outing.

NATIVES OF PERU ARE PHENOMENAL.

Can Stand Physical Strain Beyond the Average Man.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(Associated Press.) — Many of the natives of Peru, it is stated, are much less affected by the rarified air at high altitudes than are ordinary men of other races who are accustomed to hard labour. It is declared that at an altitude of 16,000 feet they can carry loads of 120 pounds up a steep incline where the ordinary person would find it all he could do to drag his own boots up.

The Royal Society is going to try [illegible] is the secret that enables them to perform such feats of strength under conditions that would render the task an impossible one for the average man. Three scientists have just gone to Peru to investigate the phenomenon. They were Professor Meakins, J. J. [illegible] H. Doggart, the two latter of Cambridge University. [illegible] from Canada and New York will join them in [illegible]. Barcroft told an interviewer that the purpose of the expedition is to test the strain to which the heart and lungs are subjected by carrying heavy loads at such great height, and to endeavor to discover how the natives can stand it.

LITTLE WANT ADS.

At this time of the year, there are any number of things that are badly needed, either by the man or woman.

These things can be done without, but the Summer is going to be not quite s happy without them, and they need not cost you nearly as much as you think, if you only use the Want Ads. to get them.

So many people lose a vast amount of pleasure simply because they have never learned the value of a simple little appeal to the Examiner Want Ad. Column. Don't let this bright montl. of June go by without satisfying little extra Summer wants through the Want Ads.

Candidates Addressed a Ratepayers Meeting

CIVIC ECONOMY WAS THE KEYNOTE OF MOST OF THE ADDRESSES—SALARIES OF CIVIC OFFICIALS TO BE PRUNED—MRS. KATE MORRIS ADDRESSED THE MEETING.

(By F. H. Dobbin).

The general public meeting called under the auspices of the Owners' and Tenants' Association last night at the G.W.V.A. Hall was fairly well attended. Possibly so much so as the brief holiday week would permit. Those on hand were attentive and critical. They had gathered to hear what the candidates could and would say each in his own behalf. And as to why the electorate, past, present and future, should vote for him—or her. There was only one her. And such courageous appearance deserves appreciation.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn was in the chair, and briskly called the meeting to business. There was some slight hesitation as to who would speak first, but getting his eye on Mr. Jos. Wearing, he was invited to the platform, and from that moment on there was no lack of speakers. All very much in earnest and who said what was given them to say. In general all spoke of "strict economy," but only one defined what it would be, and that was that the salaries of all municipal officials would be reduced, that is, if he was elected, and the balance of the Council so agreed. All the others would be discreet, careful, repressive, consider carefully, use the knife, hold down expenses, hew to the line, pare down grants, stop expenditures, and so on. Each was limited to ten minutes, and none exceeded the time limit. The meeting was one of the few that jogged along very nicely, and no one in the audience lost interest. Even after adjournment groups got together on the sidewalk outside the hall and talked it all over.

A Former Teacher.

Mr. Wearing, offering for the Board of Education, told of his wishes for election. Said that he believed that he could, as a result of his exnerience in educational matters, give to the duty and to the city good service, which the meeting at once approved of. Having been a teacher, he could view the problems from that side. As a publicist he thought he appreciated what was needed in education for boys and girls, and as a lawyer he could, at times, be useful. His brief address was sensible and to the point.

Mrs. Kate Morris.

Mrs. Kate Morris asked for re-election. She believed that her course on the Board of Education had met with public approval. Just what was immediately needed in accommodation, for Collegiate Institute and other branches, was defined. The proposed addition to the Institute would afford opportunity to meet conditions and fill wants for some years. There was no thought in her mind that the city should build a Technical School at very considerable expense. That idea was erroneous. The Board had not put such a proposition forward. A brief analysis of the financial part of the educational programme, the procedure in raising monies, the responsibility of the Board and contingent responsibility of the Council and the ultimate responsibility of the ratepayers were all briefly touched on. The meeting gave audible approval.

Mayoralty Candidate.

Ex-Alderman J. J. Turner was called for. He defined his position in appealing for support in the Mayoralty contest. Discussed the position of the city in relation to what we were apt to call economy, saying that economy was relative to results. We could, as a city, effect economy by denying ourselves many things. But was such holding back wise? The municipal upkeep had to go on. He would promise, growing out of his experience, to try and affect and afford a good reasonable city administration, to give a municipal government that would meet approval. Referring to proposed school expenditures, he claimed that whether the School Board wanted $200,000 or $400,000, these demands should go to the property owners and ratepayers for approval. An expenditure of a not immoderate amount for enlarged Institute and partial Technical School might be approved. That would develop on investigation.

Utilities Commission.

Ex-Mayor Geo. Duncan spoke in support of his candidature for the Utilities Commission. Answered some questions as to his alleged complicity in letting the contract for the Hunter Street Bridge. The enquirer found out that the question was out of joint as to date and year. Mr. Duncan cleared, as he said, his skirts, of the accusation. In reply to a question, he said that he was not in favor of the Commission keeping store in competition with local men in the same line of business. With a reference to yearly audits, close economy, possible reduction in rates, he closed.

Ex-Mayor Bradburn vacated the chair to address the meeting, as a candidate for the Utilities Commission. At once he claimed that Mayor McIntyre, in his printed address, had lifted a plank from his (Bradburn's) platform, in that he (Bradburn), if elected, would see that detailed statements of all the activities of the Commission would be made public. And kept public, too. He briefly analyzed the comparative difference in rates now and before, and claimed that it was only by the enormous increase in the rates asked six months ago that people came to their senses. He had confidence in the Commission, but he wanted the city to have confidence as well. It would be his business, if elected, to advance this idea of frank and free information as to why and wherefore.

Having, so to speak, cleaned the slate of other interests, candidates for the Council took their innings. Mr. J. O. Fife, a new man, defined his position and prospects of service to the city in a short, vigorous speech. He said he had convictions as to where good judgment could be used for the municipal benefit. The meeting approved what he said.

Mr. W. Lytle made a definite stand as to what was needed. He contrasted the water expenses of ratepayers with some other places which he had information. St. Thomas was one place, he said, where the rebates to consumers amounted to a free service every other month, and it had a steam driven or electrical plant to operate. As a member of the Council, if elected, he would watch the Utilities Commission pretty sharply, and endeavor to see that people got value for their money.

Alderman N. Phelan briefly reviewed his actions in the Council for the past eighteen months. Defended the position of the Council in its limited governance over city expenses. Referred to the Board of Education, Police Commission, Utilities Commission, as bodies largely independent of the Council, and able to demand sums of money that ran away with taxes and made increases in the rates.

Several candidates were called for but were not present. Mr. Fred. Tuggy, from the platform, outlined what he proposed to do if elected. He would reduce at once the wages

Ponton, of Belleville, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario, the dual toast to the Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada was made into two. Wor. Bro. W. R. GALOSHES COME BACK

And thereby hangs a tale that challenges the despondent Salesman who says business is dead.

Three years ago they were regarded as dead stock, and were stuck away in some dark corner in the attic or cellar, or wherever the shoe merchant relegates the goods that become obsolete and non-productive, that peeve him every time he brushes the dust off their shop-worn boxes and wonders whether by any sportive chance the cycle of fashion will ever restore them to popularity and to profit. In the annual inventory they had a fixed place as an exceedingly dubious asset that was equated by a cross entry in the debit column to the amount of their wholesale cost, plus interest and overhead.

Occasionally a country customer, who was willing to sacrifice a neat and trim appearance to the exactions of comfort, bought a pair of them, but in the main the show or sample stock was glued to the shelves, without a friend in the world of vogue; passed over unseen or disdained by modish maidens running to the rather smart and sporty and strangely sensible combination of brogues, spats and heather stockings; and always occupying good space that should have been turning in a revenue to help meet the rent and taxes, light, water and insurance, to say nothing of the garage man's bills.

Such was the moribund condition of the galoshe market as late as three, yes, even two winters ago. But look at it now. The galoshe is rampant in the field of footwear, decorating the dustless top of the front showcase, the unchallenged position of the newest of the new. The dark corners of attic or cellar are giving up their dead, and that which was a hopeless liability has become a flourishing asset. Meanwhile the change leaves the blinking merchant as overwhelmed as the unsuspecting, uninitiated male beholding or just glimpsing for the first time this new whim of feminine fashion.

After all the unbuckled, flopping galoshe, for that is the approved flaring style affected by its most faithful votaries, is not an overnight development. It has been heading this way for two or three years. Further back the main turnpike it has long since shed its novelty, but right here in our midst it has at last arrived with all its comical incongruity. Next winter it will probably reach Lindsay and Coboconk, where they normally wear them buttoned after the manner of leggings.

Was it last winter a pair or two flapped across our vision, worn by some blase visitor or by a native who had been lost for a week one day on Fifth Avenue? Seems like last winter, but it might have been just after the armistice, when anything got by. There must have been a thrill in the distinction of introducing the fad even here, and in watching the incredulous, pop-eyed and sometimes envious gaze of girls who had never heard of the galoshes their mothers used to wear in the days of leg o' mutton sleeves and funny hats, but who now flap their own or buckle them and find them comfortable, if a trifle hefty.

Some super-salesman must have put over this idea, or probably some genius in the galoshe business concluded that if women would wear furs in July they could be persuaded into once more wearing old-fashioned overshoes in the Christmas parade. The old-fashioned element of course had to be obscured, hence the notion and the lure of the negligee unbuckled effect. And yet there are factories and warehouses full of goods, packed away in the limbo of dark corners, and idle salesmen bemoaning their inability to get business. Such pessimistic sluggards should take heart in the revolution that has stirred up the once stagnant galoshe trade. Surely there is selling inspiration in the sight of a seal coat, trimmings and all, with slim ankles hidden by glaoshes, patterned after the rubber half-boots favored by farm hands and lumber-jacks, the contrast further heightened by sheer silk stockings, or rather hose, and the thermometer at ten below. After that, who will say it can't be done? Even selling ice-freezing plants in Iceland.

THE WEATHER

One below the zero mark this morning, with a prospect of a little milder. By way of contrast Prince Albert in the Northwest, yesterday had it 46 degrees below zero; Tampa down in Florida, luxuriated in 82 degrees, and San Diego, in California, enjoyed 84 degrees. The lowest the temperature went the previous night was 62 degrees. These are ordinary winter figures for these two latter places.—W. P.

MOSCOW BOASTS OF DANCING ACADEMIES.

MOSCOW, Dec. 28.—(Associated Press).—This capital boasts of more dancing academies than any other. The reason is that, as everyone must have some sort of a stamped paper showing an occupation, in case they are stopped by the police or are travelling, many thousands have either opened or joined dancing academies. Among these are any number of Cabinet Ministers and former generals.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

BY "SAPPER"

(CYRIL McNEILE)

"As I said before, in a house like this, you never can tell."

The intimidated rabbit, still breathing heavily, was staring at Hugh, fascinated; and after a moment Hugh turned to him with a courteous bow.

"Laddie," he remarked, "you've been eating onions. Do you mind deflecting the blast in the opposite direction?"

His calm imperturbability seemed to madden Lakington, who with a sudden movement rose from his chair and leaned across the table, while the veins stood out like whipcord on this usually expressionless face.

"You wait," he snarled thickly; "you wait till I've finished with you. You won't be so damned humorous then."

Hugh regarded the speaker languidly.

"Your supposition is more than probable," he remarked, in a bored voice. "I shall be too intent on getting into a Turkish bath to remove the contamination to think of laughing."

Slowly Lakington sank back in his chair, a hard, merciless smile on his lips; and for a moment or two there was silence in the room. It was broken by the unkempt man on the sofa, who, without warning, exploded unexpectedly.

"A truce to all this fooling," he burst forth in a deep rumble; "I confess I do not understand it. Are we assembled here to-night, comrades, to listen to private quarrels and stupid talk?"

A murmur of approval came from the others, and the speaker stood up waving his arms.

"I know not what this young man has done: I care less. In Russia such trifles matter not. He has the appearance of a bourgeois, therefore he must die. Did we not kill thousands—aye, tens of thousands of his kidney, before we obtained the great freedom? Are we not going to do the same in this accursed country?" His voice rose to the shrill, strident note of the typical tub-thumper. "What is this wretched man," he continued, waving a hand wildly at Hugh, "that he should interrupt the great work for one brief second? Kill him now—throw him in a corner, and let us proceed."

He sat down again, amidst a further murmur of approval, in which Hugh joined heartily.

"Splendid," he murmured. "A magnificent peroration. Am I right, sir, in assuming that you are what is vulgularly known as a Bolshevist?"

The man turned his sunken eyes, glowing with the burning fires of fanaticism, on Drummond.

"I am one of those who are fighting for the freedom of the world," he cried harshly, "for the right to live of the proletariat. The workers were the bottom dogs in Russia till they killed the rulers. Now—they rule, and the money they earn goes into their own pockets, not those of incompetent snubs." He flung out his arms wildly. "It is freedom; it is the dawn of the new age." He seemed to shrivel up suddenly, as if exhausted with the violence of his passion. Only his eyes still gleamed with the smouldering madness of his soul.

Hugh looked at him with genuine curiosity; it was the first time he had actually met one of these wild visionaries in the flesh. And then the curiosity was succeeded by a very definite amazement; what had Peterson to do with such as he?

He glanced casually at his principal enemy, but his face showed nothing. He was quietly turning over some papers; his cigar glowed as evenly as ever. He seemed to be no whit surprised by the unkempt one's outburst: in fact, it appeared to be quite in order. And once again Hugh stared at the man on the sofa with puzzled eyes.

For the moment his own deadly risk was forgotten: a growing excitement filled his mind. Could it be possible that here, at last, was the real object of the gang; could it be possible that Peterson was organising a deliberate plot to try and Bolshevise England? If so, where did the Duchess of Lampshire's pearls come in? What of the American, Hiram Potts? Above all, what did Peterson hope to make out of it himself? And it was as he arrived at that point in his deliberation that he looked up to find Peterson regarding him with a faint smile.

"It is a little difficult to understand, isn't it, Captain Drummond?" he said, carefully flicking the ash off his cigar. "I told you you'd find yourself in deep water." Then he resumed the contemplation of the papers in front of him, as the Russian burst out again.

"Have you ever seen a woman skinned alive?" he howled wildly, thrusting his face forward at Hugh. "Have you ever seen men killed with the knotted rope; burned almost to death and then set free, charred and mutilated wrecks? But what does it matter provided only freedom comes, as it has in Russia. Tomorrow it will be England: in a week the world. Even if we have to wade through rivers of blood up to our throats, nevertheless it will come. And in the end we shall have a new earth."

Hugh lit a cigarette and leaned back in his chair.

"It seems a most alluring program," he murmured. "And I shall have much pleasure in recommending you as manager of a babies' creche. I feel certain the little ones would take to you instinctively."

He half closed his eyes, while a general buzz of conversation broke out round the table. Tongues had been loosened, wonderful ideals conjured up by the Russian's inspiring words; and for the moment he was forgotten. Again and again the question hammered at his brain—what in the name of Buddha had Peterson and Lakington to do with this crowd? Two intensely brilliant, practical criminals mixed up with a bunch of ragged-trousered visionaries, who, to all intents and purposes, were insane.

Fragments of conversation struck his ears from time to time. The intimidated rabbit, with the light of battle in his watery eye, was declaiming on the glories of Workmen's Councils; a bullet-headed man who looked like a down-at-heels racing tout was shouting an inspiring battle-cry about no starvation wages and work for all.

WATCH MADE $1.00 FAMOUS

Almost 100,000,000 Ingersolls and Waterburys Have Been Sold.

NEW YORK, December 28. — Robert H. Ingersoll, of the Ingersoll Watch Company, against which a petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday, was the originator of the dollar watch. Recent reports showed that since the manufacture of the famous cheap timepiece known as the Waterbury watch down to the present, almost 100,000,000 had been sold.

The petition for receivership, which set forth that the concern had agencies all over the United States and controlled the Ingersoll Watch Company, Ltd., of London, asserted that a committee of creditors appointed last May, had been supervising the business.

The petition asserted also that claims totalling $2,320,469 had been deposited with this committee, and that a plan for reorganisation of the company would be submitted to the creditors.

LITTLE WANT ADS.

At this time of the year, there are any number of things that are badly needed, either by the man or woman.

These things can be done without, but the Summer is going to be not quite so happy without them, and they need not cost you nearly as much as you think, if you only use the Want Ads. to get them.

So many people lose a vast amount of pleasure simply because they have never learned the value of a simple little appeal to the Examiner Want Ad. Column. Don't let this bright month of June go by without satisfying little extra Summer wants through the Want Ads.

ON MORAL ISSUES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press)—An attendant in a Brooklyn hospital picked up a number plate that had fallen to the floor, and placed it on the wrong bed. The occupant of the bed died, and James Crowder, a painter, was informed his father had passed away.

Crowder bought floral pieces and a casket and rented carriages for a funeral. Surely it was a sad Christmas week.

His sister was first of those to pass the bier at the final service. She fainted, and in a moment Crowder discovered the dead man was not his father.

A telephone call quickly brough the news that the father was still alive. Today he recovered and is back home with his children.

DOPED OFFICER AND STOLE THE FINGER PRINTS

DARING TRICK SUCCESSFULLY WORKED ON POLICE OFFICERS. AFTERMATH OF TRAIN ROBBERY

THIEF ESCAPED

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—A stranger who represented himself as a post office inspector, entered police headquarters here yesterday, gave an officer a narcotized cigarette, and while the latter was unconscious, walked out with finger print evidence obtained by the police from a bottle of explosive used in a recent robbery of a Santa Fe mail car near Edmond, Okla.

The stranger introduced himself as "Mr. Williams." H. A. Murphy, Bertillion expert, produced the finger prints, and was talking to the man about the robbery when the latter offered him a cigarette. The officer related after two physicians had spent three hours reviving him.

Murphy said that after lighting the cigarette he talked a few minutes to the man and then lost consciousness. His last remembrance, he said, was seeing the stranger reach for the prints and hearing him say: "Well, I got you that time." No clue has been found as to the man's identity.

COMPLICATIONS IN SITUATION

WESTERN COAL COMPANY DECLINES TO JOIN OPERATORS ASSOCIATION AND PRECIPITATES A STRIKE.

CALGARY, December 28. Canadian Press. — The somewhat complicated situation in the Drumheller coal fields is regarded in a serious light by many who are in close touch with the present state of affairs. All the local heads of district 18 of the United Mine Workers of America are on the spot and a meeting of the executive has been arranged for Wednesday in Calgary.

The question of wage reduction has been brought to a head by the action of the Collie mine, a company formed last summer and which was originally the old Drumheller Land Company, controlled by Sam Drumheller. The company refused to become a member of the Western Canada Coal Operators' Association, and having a free hand broke away from the scale paid by the members of the Association. In this connection it should be distinctly understood the company was not breaking away from any arrangement for the simple reason that no agreement was ever entered into.' So far as can be ascertained in Calgary there is no intention on the part of the members of the Western Canada Coal Operators' Association in following the lead of the Collie Mine, and it is stated they intend to live up to their agreement until this expires in March next. They point out however that in the meantime they have to face the cut price competition of the Collie mine and also of the Monarch mines. The latter is one of the mines controlled by the North American Colleries, Ltd. In the meantime, according to a Drumheller despatch William Ryan, the Vice-President of District No. 13, of the U.M.W., has been arrested on a charge of intimidation, but has been allowed his freedom on $500 bail.

The officials of the Collie mine state that the U.M.W.A. men themselves asked for a cut to be made in their wages in order that they might be employed regularly.

The scale paid at the Collie mine is 82c a ton for machine men, $1.30 for solid, and $1.20 for pillar coal, while the day wage men receive $5.62. Contract miners were able to earn from $12 to $14 a day.

It is stated that there are fifty men working at the present time at the Collie mine.

A CAUSE FOR REJOICING.

A feature of the present municipal campaign is that the slate system, with the exception of the list of candidates endorsed by the Tenants' and Owners' Association, has disappeared. As this body is open to every ratepayer who wishes to join, there is no class aspect about its entrance into the campaign. The clash between organized Labour candidates and those endorsed by the Citizens' Committee is at an end for the time being. Labour, as a separate political organization, has ceased to exist in Peterborough, and there is, therefore, no need of a counter movement on the part of those who believe that municipal politics on a class basis should not be permitted to live. The disappearance of this feud is not a matter for sorrow; dividing the citizenship into two or three factions is not the surest way of making a community contented, progressive and prosperous, and the return to conditions which call for the selection of civic governors on their own merits and not because of their allegiance to this organization or that is something in which those who are sincere in their desire for the city's advancement can find reason for rejoicing. Class distinction is out of place in municipal politics, and there will be no tears over its passing in Peterborough.

AN OPPOSITION NEEDED.

Although the Progressive Party will have the second strongest group in the new Parliament, it is declared that they will refuse to be regarded as the official Opposition, but will relinquish that duty to the Conservative members. The new party are quite within their rights in coming to this decision, but, after all, there is a responsibility laid upon the shoulders of the Opposition in Parliament that, in the interests of the country, should be discharged. A live Opposition makes for a better Government. If the administration is confronted by an aggressive minority, keeping a close check upon the legislation brought down, calling the Government to account for its actions, the result is likely to be a more vigorous and more efficient Government. On the other hand, an indifferent Opposition, weakly led and concerned only with drawing their sessional indemnities, cannot fail to have a harmful effect upon the Government in power, which is liable to grow autocratic and careless. A healthy Opposition can do much for Canada at Ottawa. If the Progressives decline to do their duty the Conservative group must carry on. Sound, constructive criticism from them will be a factor in establishing a good Government. And Hon. Mr. Meighen is needed in the House; not from a political viewpoint, but because there is a chance for him to be of useful service.

RIVERSIDE PARK.

Among the matters that will have to be settled by next year's Council is one that is of vital importance to the city's athletic organizations, namely, the policy that is to be adopted by the Council in regard to Riverside Park. It is essential to the success of sport in Peterborough that this ground, the only available field in the city that offers the necessary facilities for the various summer and autumn sports, and at the same time affords a chance to collect the gates without which no sport can be successfully carried on, shall continue to be at the disposal of the various clubs. The Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association and the teams allied with that organization should consult the aspirants for Aldermanic honours, ascertain their views upon this issue and endeavour to make sure that men who understand the situation and appreciate the important place that organized recreation should occupy in the city's life are elected to the Council. Peterborough is well equipped with parks, but very badly furnished with athletic grounds. Riverside Park must not be allowed to disappear so far as baseball, rugby, lacrosse and football is concerned. It should be retained as an athletic grounds by the city or leased to a responsible organization, such as the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association.

It is frequently easier to be sure you are right than it is to go ahead.

WESTERN REPRESENTATION.

Looking at the situation dispassionately and from a national viewpoint, the refusal of Hon. T. A. Crerar and other Progressive leaders to accept positions in the new Cabinet is a matter for regret. The problems of the West are many and important, and no public men in Canada are so closely in touch with them as are the group of men who are at the head of the Progressive movement in the Prairie Provinces. In addition, the services of Hon. Mr. Crerar would have been useful in any event, for his energy and ability are unquestioned. But the Progressives have decided to maintain their group in Parliament intact and to preserve an independent attitude, supporting the Government so long as the legislation it produces accords with Progressive ideas and Progressive policies. The representation of the West in the new administration may fall short of what is desirable in the best interests of the Western Provinces in particular and of the whole Dominion, but the spokesmen elected by the Prairies are practically all members of the Progressive Party, and they have elected to remain as such, rather than to accept the opportunities offered them. The result cannot be estimated until the House meets.

A PEACE BASIS FOR TEACHING.

Lord George Riddell, one of the British representatives at the arms conference and a publisher by profession, has pointed out that there is a basis for complaint against school histories. They overemphasize the glories and the heroes of war and underestimate the consequences, while they lay all too insufficient stress upon the better influences which have drawn nations together. Schoolbooks in our cities are authorized by political boards with strong prejudices, often racial. They seem to install in the child's mind a sort of hostility complex. He is not allowed to forget injuries a century old. He is never told that there were injuries on both sides or that injuries are best forgotten.

History not only records the wrong things, but it emphasizes the wrong things. How many children know that our boasted western civilization derived from China the most valuable of its ideas? From China came paper, printing and, above all, that greatest of civilizing influences, navigation; for it was from China that the Genoese derived the mariner's compass. It was from China also that the trading bankers of Genoa and Venice took the idea of commercial banking, for China had been using drafts, bills of exchange and credits since somewhere about the birth of Christ. But the average child, and even the average school teacher, would say that the blessings of civilization moved exactly the other way.

Perhaps the silliest, and in some ways the most mischief-making, of our teaching superstitions is that which perpetuates a sterile and corroding enmity with our English-speaking neighbors on the other side of the Atlantic. In comparative importance the treaty which has regulated for a century the relations between the United States and Canada, without a gun, a fort or a warship along three thousand miles of frontier, maintaining peace in the only rational way, by eliminating "the means to do ill deeds," outranks all the acrimonious questions aroused in the War of Independence.

There is no need to make "pacifists" of our children. But we can at least teach them to look down upon war as the unintelligent resort of irrational people. We can teach them the right kind of internationalism, which begins at home. The best citizen is the best father and husband. The best internationalist is the man with nationalism well developed, comprehended and co-ordinated. The good American is not the one who hates people who are not Americans, but the one who shows his goodness by trying to understand them. The boy who understands boxing is not scrapping with the other boys all the time. But there is all the difference in the world between him and the belligerent little nuisance who takes up fighting for fighting's sake until he provokes the necessary and final thrashing from somebody bigger than himself.

Let us teach children not a false independence, but how much we were able gratefully to accept from others outside our national boundaries. Let us teach them that the benefits are reciprocal, that international commerce itself is not warfare but exchange—a bargain by which both contracting parties benefit. This is the British tradition we inherit. It is one of the things we fought to show Germany. But it is high time that we revised our schoolbooks out of Irish politics or German politics or any other politics. A child will learn hatred, like other vices, all too easily without receiving it as a part of his school lessons. —Wall St. Journal.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES

2nd year—1st, $15, Mary Manley; 2nd, $10, Cecil Longmuir.

The dialogue given by George Clark and Reginald Reynolds, in costume, "Quarrel Brutus and Cassins," in which Miss Helen Irwin gave a brief summary, was exceptionally well delivered. The class prophecy by Miss Helen Cairns and the valedictory by Miss Ruth Diamond showed much ability and careful preparation, and were also well delivered. The "Columbine Drill," directed by Miss Smith, B.A., from the senior commercial girls—Hazel Thomas, Thelma Nadoo, Norma Nadoo, Dorothy Ackerman, Jennie Graham, Helen Irwin, Clyta Sarginson, Helen Kerr—was much appreciated, as was also the wand drill, 3rd form girls, directed by Miss Ferris, B.A.,—Irene Davidson, Helen Black, Irene Thompson, Helen Bygott, Helen Wood, Minnie Winters, Frances Bonnycastle, Helen Irwin, Eleanor Ferris, A. Hooper, Lulu Chaplin, J. Dilworth. The scene from "Alice in Wonderland," "A Mad Tea Party," taken by Roy Miller, as the Hatter, Arnold Parsons, the Door Mouse, Jack Twigg, March Hare, and Francis Dingman taking the part of Alice, was most heartily applauded.

The presentation of the I.O.D.E. scholarships follows: Public School (by Mrs. (Dr.) Haig)—Vida Dunk, Jack Haig, Dorothy Southern, Douglas McComb and Maude O'Sullivan. —Middle school, Addison Dickson, Mary Spoon and Lottie Thain; upper school, scholarship in Latin goes to Josephine Longmuire, scholarship in French to Helen Cairns, scholarship in English to Clara Pettey, scholarship in mathematics to Helen Irwin, Ralph Stanbury, winning the Dr. S. A. Reake medal.

Mayor Meyers presented the junior graduation diplomas to Lottie Thain, Dorothy Kingston, F. Haig, M. Spooner, J. O'Connor, A. Dickson, H. Horkins, R. Stanbury, Mae Chaplin, Leita Chaplin, L. O'Brien, E. Irwin, E. Weston.

Backache

Backache is the outstanding symptom of kidney disease. Women often make the mistake of attributing other causes and overlook the derangement of the kidneys until serious developments have made it difficult to obtain permanent relief.

This letter points to a treatment which has been so thoroughly tried and proven so effective in the great majority of cases that you cannot afford to overlook it when cause arises for its use.

Mrs. Albert Brunet, R.R. No. 1, Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the past two months, having been afflicted with kidney trouble. I used two doctors' medicine previous to this, without any good results. A friend told me to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the second box made me feel a good deal better. I have now used about six or eight boxes, and am completely relieved."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Mr. J. A. Irwin presented the senior graduation diplomas to H. McCullough, G. Connor, J. S. Dickson, H. Cairns, Alice Martin, C. Ivey, J. Longmuir, R. Diamond.

The Chairman, Mr. J. A. Stewart, read a part of the H. S. Inspector's report, which stated that the board must take action without delay to provide a new school as nothing could be gained by temporizing. The present building is overcrowded, and while the work of the staff and Principal is satisfactory, they are laboring under difficulties. He suggests that the new building be commenced and completed by September 1, 1922.

The young people cleared the floor for dancing after the programme and spent a pleasant time tripping the light fantastic.

Recitation, "A Visit From St. Nicholas," by H. Brackenridge.

Some closing remarks from the Chairman brought a most successful entertainment to a close.

Meetings Withdrawn.

The usual meetings of the Mission Circle, and also of the Mission Band, of the Methodist Church were withdrawn last week, owing to the number of other duties incident to the Christmas season, which claimed the Superintendents' attention.

Word has been received from Miss Hawkens that the Christmas box sent by the Band to the boarding-school at Kolobreeka arrived in good condition, and Miss Hawkens also sent some interesting snapshots which seh had taken of a Ruthhiinian wedding party, family groups of these foreigners whose children she teaches and various girl students, a typical Ruthienian home, etc. There are 60,000 of these people in the settlement where Miss Hawkens and two other missionaries are at work.

Dance Postponed.

Owing to many counter attractions and the unfavorable circumstances, the dance which was to have been held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening next under the auspices of the local Orange Lodge and the Royal Black Preceptory, was postponed till some later date. MUNICIPAL POT BOILING IN HASTINGS AND THE DISTRICT.

Old Adversaries, Reeve J. H. Hess and Ex-Reeve Fowlds, Are Canvassing Energetically.

Hastings Personals.

HASTINGS, Dec. 28.—At the municipal nominations here, presided over by the Municipal Clerk, A. Wilson, Dr. Hess, last year's Reeve, gave a detailed account of the workings of the County Council, and the next ten minutes he devoted to local questions. He closed with an appeal to the electors for their support, for, if elected, it would terminate five years as their Reeve. He declared his intention of retiring from municipal politics, as this would be his last time to seek election.

Councillor Chapman, in a clear and concise manner, handled the expenditures for the past year, and closed a fifteen minutes' address by showing the great necessity for industries in our thriving village.

Councillors Hatherly and Lynch made short addresses. Then W. M. Fowlds, who is contesting the Reeveship, was called on, and in eulogizing the past Council on the good work done, he felt that it might have been accomplished with less expenses. He also spoke on economy and industries, and hoped for the hearty support of the electors.

The new nominees for the Council made short addresses, and the meeting closed with a short speech from Dr. Wilson, who expressed his satisfaction of the good standing of the village as regards finances.

The contest will prove hot and snappy from now until election night.

Contest is On.

The municipal pot is beginning to boil in Hastings, Percy and Asphodel.

In Hastings the old adversaries, Reeve J. H. Hess and ex-Reeve Fowlds, are canvassing hard.

In Asphodel there will be a lively run for places around the Council table.

In Percy Township the contest is likely to be the hottest in years past. There not being sufficient names to entitle the township to a Deputy-Reeve, the Deputy-Reeve, Geo. Poole, Councillor Hermiston, ex-Reeve Atkinson and Reeve McCubbin are all fighting hard for the Reeveship.

To Rush Work.

A carload consisting of cement mixers, wheel-barrows and tools has arrived for the erection of the buildings of the National Cooperage Co. The lands have all been levelled up, the contracts let, and everything is in readiness for the buildings to be pushed rapidly along.

Christmas Services.

Special Christmas services were held in the different churches on Sunday last. Rev. Geo. E. Morley, B.A., of Toronto, preached in the morning in the Methodist Church from the subject, "Going a step farther," and gave an eloquent address, keeping the listeners eager to catch every word.

In the evening Mr. Morley gave a sacred recital, entitled "The Other Wise Man," by Henry Vandyke, and presented the subject in such a natural way that the large congregation sat spell bound throughout. Special Christmas music was rendered by the choir of the church.

On Monday evening the annual Christmas entertainment of the Sunday School was held in the Town Hall to a bumper house. The programme consisted of solos, choruses, recitations and drills by the pupils, assisted by the Rev. Geo. E. Morley, B.A., of Toronto, who delighted the audience with his selections, and who was generously encored after each number. The programme, carried out in its entirely, was listened to with undivided attention. The committee in charge deserve to be congratulated on the success of the event.

To the Electors of North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentemen,— Having been nominated for the office of Deputy-Reeve for the year 1922, I would respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and if elected will continue to serve all interests of the Township with the same fidelity as I have served you as Councillor for the past two years.

Yours respectfully,
FRED H. ROWAN.

6d-155-566.

To the Electors of the Township of Smith

At yesterday's nomination, I was nominated as a candidate for Councillor, and I want to express my appreciation of that honor, and to thank, most kindly, my nominator and his seconder for the confidence in my ability which that nomination implies. And while I have no desire to shirk my duties as a good citizen, the Council is already full, and our corner of the township already represented by a presumably good man. While I do not know the attitude Mr. Mann, who is also a candidate in our corner of the township, will take, I feel it would be presumptious on my part to stand for election (even if I were vain enough to imagine I would be elected and cause the township this unnecessary expense, so I have decided to decline.

Wishing you all a Happy New Year, I remain,

Yours truly,
J. G. JOPLING.

Bridgenorth, Dec. 27th, 1921.

To the Ratepayers of North Monaghan

Ladies and Gentlemen,— Having received the nomination for the office of Reeve for the Township of North Monaghan for the year 1922, I take this means of letting you know that I am in the field. With the previous experience which I have had in your Council, and my familiarity with the municipal conditions of the Township, I feel qualified to undertake the duties of the office. I therefore leave my candidature to the decision of the electors on Monday, Jan. 2nd 1922. If elected I will do my best to take care of the work of the Township to the best of my judgment and in the best interests of all sections.

Awaiting your decision, I am, yours in the interests of North Monaghan, 4d-155 H. B. RYE.

SCIENTISTS CONVENTION

PRES DENTIAL ADDRESS DEALS WITH MAN'S SUPREMACY OVER INSECTS.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—War between man and insects for supremacy of the earth was the subject of the Presidental address of Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture at the opening session of the 74th annual meeting of the Association for the Advancement of Science at Convocation Hall last night. Incoming trains all day brought scientists from all parts of the Continent and about twelve hundred of the two thousand expected attended the opening. Insects, said the speaker, challenged man's food supply, his clothing and his health. He pointed out that man was differentiated from other living things on the globe by his "time-binding faculty," or the ability to preserve the history of the race and profit by his knowledge of past. This was one of the principal assets of humanity.

BOTTLE WASHED ON ISLAND SHORE TELLS OF SEA TRAGEDY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Messages cast up from the sea, believed to have been written by members of the crew of the freight steamship Frederick, which was last heard of when she left Louisburg, N. S., on Jan. 15, 1916, figure in a Supreme Court action brought by relatives of the missing men against officials of the Frederick Steamship Company. They seek to recover $70,000 for lives that were lost. Charles W. Morse is among those involved in the suit.

A bottle containing 10 sheets of paper, each with a message signed by one of the crew, was found on one of the Ogney Islands, off the Scottish coast. Nine were written in Spanish. One in English read:

'We are sinking in mid-ocean and the captain has deserted us. There are 10 men left behind. The steward of the ship. Faithfully yours, George Matthews. Goodbye!"

Translation of another said the men had been left on the ocean and that there "had been means to save them all but for his fault. We ask to be avenged upon this man."

The other messages were farewells to relatives.

The Frederick left New York in December, 1915, for Archangel. She stopped at Vineyard Haven, Mass.; Portland, Me., and at Louisburg, N. S., where she coaled.

George McDermott, of New York, testified he had signed as a steward for the voyage, but refused to sail because he believed the vessel was overloaded and unseaworthy. He said her cargo consisted of railroad iron, barbed wire and automobile trucks.

The complaints in the action charge the vessel's owners and operators with conspiracy "for the purpose of making profits by purchasing the steamship Frederick, which at the time of its purchase was old, worn out and totally unfitted for use as an ocean-going vessel."

The complainants include Mrs. Marie Robbins, widow of the captain, who took the vessel to sea after two other masters had refused the job.

Voice of the People

Peterborough, Dec. 27, 1921.
Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The following letter explains itself. But as it bears no signature, I will ask you to convey to the unknown writer my reply, through the columns of your esteemed daily, The Examiner.

Yours very sincerely,
G. E. ROSS.

"Peterborough, Dec. 23, 1921.

"Dear Sir,—

"Having read your opinion in regards the punch board in today's Examiner, I quite agree with you: the punch board is a game of chance, pure and simple. But what sticks me is when something far worse is run in our market hall by a so-called church of Christ, you never raised your voice or put your objections in print.

"Only two weeks ago a bazaar was run off, and paddle-wheels, spindle-wheels, fish-ponds and all kinds of gambling went on openly. DARE YOU object to it, or are you afraid."

Peterborough, Dec. 27, 1921.

To the Unknown, Peterborough:

Dear Writer,—Yours of Dec. 23 to hand and its contents noted. In reply would say I am glad you agree with my opinion on the question of the punch board, but if you had stated this openly it would have been better for the cause of righteousness.

Now, evidently, you were in the market hall. And you saw "paddle-wheels, spindle-wheels, fish-ponds and all kinds of gambling," but we do not know that you lifted your voice or your pen in protest. Why did you not speak out? DARE YOU object, or are you afraid? It was certainly your duty to come out into the open and say what you had to say against these things. However, I am not aware of any "church of Christ" in this city using "paddle-wheels, spindle-wheels, fish-ponds and all kinds of gambling" for money-raising purposes; if I saw such things I would certainly say what I thought, and I would use my own voice and my own pen. Remember, if you are a citizen you have a right to help put down evil, and if there is anything worse than gambling, it is to write an anonymous letter, trying to get your neighbor to say or write what you dare not say or write yourself.

Now, I do not think I am writing to a woman, for a woman is never afraid to say what she thinks; so I will give you the piece of advice once given by a superior officer to a subordinate: "The young officer was ordering his soldiers to climb a wall that was being torn by artillery fire. On seeing this the superior officer said, 'Never send a soldier where you would not go yourself.' The application is clear.

Hoping that we shall all work together for a brighter, purer and happier citizenship, and wishing my friend a happy New Year, I am,

Yours,
G. E. ROSS.

CITY BEAUTIFUL.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Having had the pleasure of looking with admiration at the show windows of the merchants of Peterborough I feel it would be only proper to express gratitude to them for their interest and the money they have expended to make our city beautiful and desirable to shop in. As one who has made a study of cities beautiful, covering the whole of the North American Continent, there is none that I know of that can compare in attractiveness with the shopping district of Peterborough. It was not my purpose in writing this to boast of my travels, but rather to call our people's attention to the fact that we are a progressive and enterprising community, as reflected in Peterborough's well-kept homes and its handsome and attractively arresting main business thoroughfares, in which exemplory cleanliness prevails.

A TRAVELLER.

ANOTHER ELECTION?

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The Globe is afraid that Canada is doomed to have another Federal general election in a few months. The failure of Mr. King to get Mr. Crerar into his parlour bodes ill. If they cannot agree now, what hope later on when the battle gets much more strenuous? The Globe says that if the new election should eventuate, people will vote the group system a failure. Since Mr. Drury represents the minority and not the majority in Ontario (by at least a majority against him of two hundred thousand), what honest-minded people would think the group system a success now? The truth is that the war demoralised everybody, and so long as anybody or everybody can get its own way, it has no longer any conscience in the matter. Your square-thinking man belongs to a past age. As the criminal asked in the dock the other day in the United States, Why should he be required to be fair and honest in his dealings when nobody else is? But the weak bear the brunt of it.—Yours.

AGED FIFTY-FIVE, WILL CLIMB MOUNT.

Brigadier-General Bruce Will Lead Party.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—(Associated Press)—Brigadier-General Charles Granville Bruce who despite his 55 years, has accepted the leadership of next year's ascent of Mount Everest is a man of remarkable attainments. He was shot through both legs in Gallipoli and, as he himself describes the event, "he rolled down the hill like a shot rabbit," but being an irrespressible optimist he recovered.

His personal strength is such that he could at one time raise and hold out at arm's length a well grown person as he sat in a chair. Stories of his strength, his practical jokes and of other more serious exploits are common property throughout northern India, where he commanded a Gurkha regiment for years.

His passion has always been mountaineering. More than once he brought one of his Gurkhas home with him. One he took with him to Switzerland, where the Gurkha's uncanny skill in scrambling up places produced great shaking of heads among the Swiss guides who had never before seen anything like it.

Should he be compelled to leave the final peak to younger men, his vigor and thoroughness as an organizer and his experience as a leader of men will be invaluable, his friends say.

OLD COUNTRY HOCKEY.

LONDON, December 28. Canadian Press Cable. — Oxford University ice-hockey team defeated the Swiss National team by 9-0 yesterday, according to a cable from Reuter's correspondent at Muerren, Switzerland. The conditions for the hockey match were perfect, the ice being very fast. The Swiss goalkeeper stopped many fine shots.

WEEK OF GAIETY AMONG YOUNG AND OLD IN LAKEFIELD.

Many Holiday Events Listed for This Week—

Substantial Cheque Presented to Rev. P. S. Jull.

New Rink Opens.

LAKEFIELD, December 28.—Christmas services were held on Sunday in the Baptist church both morning and evening, with appropriate music at each. At the morning service the subject of the sermon was "No Room," and at the evening service "Good News."

Christmas Tree.

The annual Christmas tree of the Presbyterian Sunday school was held on Friday evening last in the school room of the church. An informal programme was given by the children of the school and an interesting feature of the occasion was the presentation of a substantial cheque to Rev. P. L. Jull, a token of the good will and appreciation of his congregation.

At St. John's Church.

The services on Christmas Day in St. John's church were Holy Communion at 8 a.m., and Matins and Holy Communion at 10.30 a.m. At the former service Rev. H. Britten was the celebrant, and at the latter service Rev. W. Mackenzie.

At the 10.30 service Miss Atwood presided at the organ and the choir rendered the beautiful Christmas music, which though oft heard never grows old. Marsh and Spofford's Te Deum and Plummer's Sanctus were sung.

Rev. A. W. Mackenzie spoke for a few minutes on the spirit of Christmas, which should be in the hearts of adults as it is in the hearts of the children. Love, without which no one can live and develop, is the key note of Christmas day, and we cannot have too much love.

The church was beautifully decorated with Christmas greens.

Owing to the illness of the Rector, Rev. F. Vipond, there was no evening service.

"Light of the World."

On Sunday evening the choir of the Methodist Church rendered very effectively the Christmas cantata, "The Light of the World."

The usual service took place first, with appropriate hymns, prayers and Scripture readings by the pastor, the Rev. S. F. Dixon, who also spoke briefly on the wonderful message of Christmas time.

The cantata was especially well-rendered for which much credit is due to Mr. K. S. Madill, organist and choir leader. The solo parts were well taken by Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. Burrows and Miss E. Webster. Miss Webster and Mrs. Burrows rendered a duet in splendid voice.

The choruses were well rendered by a nicly balanced choir. The sopranos were Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. W. Madill, Misses Effie Webster, and Etta Waldon and Mrs. McConkey. The contraltos were Mrs. Mrs. Burrows and Mrs. Doidge and the baritones Messrs. A. E. Higgins and Walter Madill and the tenorsMessrs A. B. Burrows, John Botterill, Elmer Milhern, Ralph Payne and

ADAM BECK'S RADIAL SCHEME
(PORT HOPE GUIDE)

The Toronto press has broken out again in a fit of radial enthusiasm. The most strenuous demands are being made for popular support to Adam Beck's radial proposals. The efforts of the press to divert the trade of a large area around Toronto to that centre can be fairly well understood. But to expect the outside public to assist in the ruination of all local interests in order that Toronto shall be specially benefited is difficult to understand. And then again this area surrounding Toronto, is not ony asked to favor the extension of the radial system, but is asked to tax itself enormously for a project which will bring ruin and disaster to all local commercial and business interests as well. Give the Toronto press its way and there would not be a prosperous town or centre within fifty or sixty miles of that city. But the population in these areas surrounding Toronto could tax themselves annually in order to allow Adam Beck and his minions to run unprofitable radial lines for the benefit of Toronto. This is the sum-and substance of the Hydro Radial policy.

Another phase of the subject is presented in Adam Beck's proposals that municipalities through which several electric lines operate that came into the possession of the Federal Government with the Canadian Northern Railway system only one of these pays operating expenses. One of them runs behind at the rate of $100,000 a year. A municipality is asked to become responsible for the purchase of this branch or system. This and others Adam Beck has, without any authority from the Government or Legislature of this Province, or from the municipalities through which any of these electric lines are operating, negotiated to purchase from the Federal Government. He wants the municipalities to put up the money, and then pass these systems over to the Hydro for perpetual management. It will cost $10,000,000 or more to rebuild and equip these lines, for which the credit of the Province will be responsible. If the lines remain under the National Railway management, they will all have to be rebuilt and equipped in the credit and responsibility of the Dominion Government, without any direct cost to the Provincial or municipal taxpayer. But Adam Beck wants to get possession of these lines in order to connect them and construct another railway line between Toronto and Niagara Falls, thus competing with the present National Railway system. All we have got to say is that if the Mackenzie King Government at Ottawa lends itself to any such proceeding on the part of Adam Beck it will be a painful surprise to its friends and supporters. If neither the Ontario Legislature or Government has backbone enough to close up Adam Beck's mad career, it is to be hoped that Ottawa, at least, will not assist him in his determination to wreck the financial stablity of this Province. The people have never seen such an absence of sanity in connection with the public life of any Province in the Dominion.

School Entertainment.

On Thursday afternoon, the pupils of S. S. No. 5, Douro, gave a delightful entertainment. The friends and relatives who attended were much pleased. Lunch was served before the guests departed.

There could not well be an entertainment for Warsaw S. S. this time, but the teacher suggested that some money that was usually spent on candy, etc., be spent to buy Christmas gifts for some of the elderly ladies in the section. The children gladly acted on the suggestion, and handkerchiefs were bought and sent with Christmas greetings from the school children.

The 'phone connection between Douro and Dummer has been out of order for some days.

Visitors from Toronto expected to see more snow, and there is hardly enough for sleighing.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Rose, leaving a fine little boy.

The Endeavor League will meet in the Presbyterian Church on Friday evening. Rev. Mr. Vose will lead. Last Friday evening Christmas songs were sung. Rev. G. Weir told how he spent Christmas in Paradise, Labrador. An ex-service man told how he spent a Christmas in Belgium.

The Anglican Church was tastefully decorated for Sunday afternoon service.

Rev. Girard Graham delivered two excellent sermons Sunday. The morning was a Christmas sermon. The evening was on New Year resolutions, and how to keep them.

Sang Cantata.

On Monday evening the Methodist Sunday School held its annual entertainment. The feature of the evening was a cantata, "A Visit to Grandpa." Rev. Mr. Weir was a splendid grandfather. Mrs. George Taylor made a charming grandmother. The little ones took their parts well, and required very little prompting. Some tiny tots carried their parts through well. Mr. Robt. Somers, superintendent of the Sunday School, was chairman.

After the National Anthem candies and other Christmas gifts were distributed among the children.

There will be no voting in Douro, as the old Council went in by acclamation. They are: Reeve, Mr. Martin Coughlin. Councillors: Messrs. John Leahy, Galvin Graham, Wm. Quinlan and A. Maloney.

Dummer has many contestants for municipal honors. Messrs. John Darling and James Greystock are running for Reeve, and all the old Councillors, viz.: Messrs. Geo. Barr, E. R. Hamblin, G. Kirk, Nathan Bell, and four new ones: Messrs. James Hawthorne, I. J. Crowe, John Drain and Stephen Miles.

A CONFERENCE UNEMPLOYMENT

MAYOR A. A. M'INTYRE AND OTHERS WILL INTERVIEW PREMIER E. C. DRURY.

Following up his efforts to secure adequate unemployment relief, Mayor McIntyre applied through Mr. T. Tooms, M.P.P., to Premier Drury for an appointment for an interview in order that the necessity for further action by the Ontario Government might be laid before him.

This application was further pressed yesterday by telephone, and today Mr. Tooms received word that the Premier would hear the Mayor to-morrow at 2.30 o'clock.

At the same time the Mayor of Hamilton was pressing the Premier for an appointment on the same matter, and as a result the Premier has fixed the same hour to receive both deputations, and there is no doubt that many other municipalities will take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the appointment, and that a large and influential civic deputation will wait upon the Premier to-morrow and place before him the urgency of the situation.

THAT BEAUTIFUL LIFE.

There are times when I want, with all my soul, to unearth my Lord so that mankind may behold Him in all His natural beauty free from the unnatural drapings that have been flung around Him for centuries. I want to present Him as I have unearthed Him for myself, standing apart from all form and ceremony and ritual; the simple Jesus of Nazareth! Ah, men loved Him in those days, the common people heard Him gladly, they thronged and pressed Him, and while in His beautiful presense they breathed the breath of life, and I cannot help but feel that if we could divorce Him from mere churchianity we should do well, for He does not belong to it and never did. He belonged to the great out-of-doors—the seaside, the hillside where the sheep broused, to the fields with their masses of beautiful lilies, to the birds whom He heard sing in the early morning when He rose a great while before day to go to the mountain to pray, or at night alone under the starry sky. He came to found a great brotherhood of believers, and to teach us to love our neighbor as ourself; He belonged to all humanity, all classes, all conditions, all colors, for He was the universal Saviour, the light of this dark world.—M.B.

With the exception of the undertaker, few men finish all they undertake.

WELFORD FUND FOR COAL AREAS. ....

Tax of One Shilling a Ton on All Coal.

LONDON, Dec. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Pit-head baths may shortly become an institution in British colliery districts. This is the expected result of many years of propaganda, agitation and education, and will probably come through the operation of an amendment to the Coal Mines Act, passed last year, by which it was provided that one shilling per ton on all coal raised should be paid into a welfare fund for colliery areas.

In the course of a year the substantial sum of nearly £500,000 has been raised for this purpose, and its disposal is now being discussed by joint committees, consisting of representatives of the coal owners and the Miners' Federation. The most active propagandists, the organized working women of the coal fields, are demanding that this money be used in the erection of baths at the pithead. The matter was brought forward at a recent meeting in London of the standing joint committee of Industrial Women's Organizations, affiliated with which are, among other organizations, the Labor Party, the Women's Trade Union League, the Women's Co-operative Guild and nearly all the great trade unions.

The recent provision in the Coal Mines Act for the shilling per ton fund was the recommendation of the Coal Commission which sat in 1919. During its sittings great stress was laid on the undesirable conditions in the mining districts.

A RIOTOUS OUTBREAK CAUSED BY MONKS

RANGOON Dec. 27. — (Associated Press)—In the course of a festival on the dropes of the Shwe Dagon pagoda 200 monks were permitted to a theatrical performance free of charge whereupon another 150 demanded the same privilege on the ground that monks never pay in being refused, because so they were told there was no room. When them the monks tore down the fencing and turned out the audience.

The police were summoned and temporary quiet was restored, but the dissatisfied monks and the sympathizers rapidly increased to a crowd of 3000. The arrival of 40 Gurkhas to keep order was the signal for a fresh outbreak and for three hours there were continuous free fights on the slopes of the pagoda. Eventually the rioters were dispersed after one Burman had been killed and 11 injured. Two of the Gurkhas were also injured.

It is necessary to show some people the open door in order to shut them up.

MASONS MET LAST NIGHT

and Bro. Rev. F. E. Malott proposed the toast to "The Visitors."

"Keep Faith."

The toasts were all featured by brilliant oratory, and the message of the Grand Master will not soon be forgotten. Dwelling on the principles of Masonry, he urged them in their lives at every moment to live up to these high standards and keep faith with Masonry in their every action.

Rt. Wor. Bro. E. T. Malone spoke in the same vein, and emphasised the important part Masonry plays in men's lives and careers and the faith necessary in every member for a coherent working of the whole.

The excellence of the oratory by the same standard did not exceed in any great measure the excellence of the musical programme which interspersed the toasts. The following numbers were given:

Instrumental (violin and piano)—Bros. Whitehouse and Nichols.

Quartette (Imperial) — Bros. Brown, Smith, Park, and Mr. Humpage.

Vocal solo—Bro. Chandler.

Vocal duet—Bros. Park and Carlisle.

Vocal solo—Bro. Smith.

.... GOLD EXPORTS TO SWITZERLAND.

United States Dollar Still Selling at Discount in One Country.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—With the United States dollar selling at a discount in one European country — Switzerland — United States bankers yesterday were reported to be planning to follow the movement with gold exports to Geneva.

Gold has been pouring into this country in an almost uninterrupted stream for three years, the United States now holding about forty per cent. of the world's visible supply.

Swiss francs sold at 19.50 in the market yesterday, a premium of 2 points. Unlike any other exchange of the so-called neutral countries of Europe, the Swiss rate is also at a premium in London and most Continental countries.

Local bankers who have watched the rise of Swiss bills say that it is mainly due to buying of that currency by Austrian and German financial and commercial interests which seem to have lost all faith in their own depreciated monies.

The obligations of United States bankers and importers to Switzerland are believed to be very small but the laws of supply and demand are expected to follow their inexorable course in this instance. It is possible, however, that gold now held in London for shipment to this country may be diverted to Switzerland.

ANOTHER ACCLAIMATION.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press).—J. Murray Bobbie was last night re-elected Mayor by acclamation.

BOSTON FIRE DEPARTMENT TESTS HIGH PRESSURE SERVICE

PRINCESS GOES SHOPPING.

First With Fiance to Choose Christmas Gifts From Him, Then With Her Mother.

LONDON, Dec. 28. — Viscount Lascelles took his fiancee, Princess Mary, shopping in fashionable Bond street last week and persuaded her to pick out her Christmas presents from him.

In one jewelry shop they spent an hour, and she chose a little diadem of the George III. period with five large sapphires surrounded by diamonds.

She also selected two bracelets one set with emeralds and diamonds the other set with sapphires and diamonds. Then she picked out three brooches, the first an old fashioned oval shape studded with diamonds, with a large pearl centre the second an open buckle of diamonds and four large pearls, the third a bar of diamonds interspersed with large pearls.

Both the Princess and Lord Lascelles greatly admired an old silver cheese dish made in 1746, very rare and valued at $1,500.

The Princess also found some snuffboxes, and set her heart on one gold in a formal design with five different kinds of lapis lazuli, and another an old French box on which is painted a scene of old Paris.

Queen Mary took the Princess to famous antique shop, where the inspected furniture. The Princess especially admired some old Jacobean velvet chairs of the seventeenth century.

Lord Lascelles visited another antique shop and selected several presents from which to make a final choice. These included beautiful jade, some pieces of which are worth $2,5000 each; a suite of four painted Heppelwhite chairs with a settee and a mirror, black vases and a Queen Anne urn.

WASHINGTON STATUE DISINTEGRATING

After standing exposed to all sorts of weather for nearly sixty-one years, the bronze equestrian statue of General George Washington in Washington is slowly disintegrating, and Congress has been asked for $2500 for necessary repairs. It is stated that unless these are made within a reasonable time the horse's head will fall off entirely. The statue was the work of Clark Mills, and was unveiled February 22nd, 1860.

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—(Canadian Press). — Hon. T. A. Crerar met Premier Drury, J. J. Morrison and a number of other prominent U.F.O. leaders at an informal conference here last night, but the head of the Progressive movement maintained silence, for which he has lately become noted.

Mr. Morrison, however, was a little more communicative, and expressed his entire satisfaction at the culmination of the negotiations looking o a Liberal-Progressive alliance, and he is especially pleased with Mr. Crerar's stand in refusing to accept the salary of Opposition leader.

MILLION A MONTH FOR FORCES IN GERMANY.

COBLENZ, Dec. 28.—(Associated Press).—Current expenses of the American forces in Germany, which amount to approximately $1,000,000 a month, are to be paid hereafter by the German Government direct in marks, it was announced recently at army headquarters in Coblenz. This idea was suggested by Major-General Henry T. Allen, commander of the American troops on the Rhine, as a substitute of the previous plan, whereby the United States Government paid the expenses of the occupation troops, the funds to be collected later from Berlin.

J. J. Turner

For Mayor

J. J. Turner a successful business man, whose entire interests are located in the City of Peterboro, is offering his experience and services to the City as Mayor for 1922. He is not connected with any clique, but simply offers himself in order to apply a capable and efficient government to the City's affairs. After all, the business conducted at the City Hall is exactly on the same order as that conducted in the offices of our large manufacturing concerns. When selecting a manager, do these firms not exercise care to see that they appoint a man as manager who has the necessary qualifications to handle the business successfully? Most certainly. Without proper management the best busines in the World will soon go to pieces. Why not use this same precaution in selecting our Mayor on Monday next. No selfish motive prompted J. J. Turner to stand for the Mayoralty, but merely a desire to still serve the City in which he is so vitally interested.

TO THE ELECTORS:

During my two years' service on the Board of Education, I have given time and study to the development of Education in Ontario, with particular reference to our local problems.

I have visited a number of cities at my own expense, in order to profit by the experience of other Boards who face conditions sim ilar to our own.

As a Member of the Executive of the Ontario Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association, I have regular opportunities of meeting Trustees from all over Ontario, and also the experts of the Department of Education.

The practical information I have secured as to the working out of the Adolescent Act, Technical Education for the smaller cities, High School Extension, Special Care of Backward Pupils, &c., combined with the experience of two years on the local Board of Education should add to any value my services may have been in the past term.

As an ex-Teacher, and with a Child in my family attending the Public School, my interest in the Teachers and Children of the Peterborough Schools is naturally very great.

My relations with the Teachers and Parents have been most cordial, and the ratepayers generally have shown an interest in Education that is most encouraging.

I ask the support of those who believe I can be of service to the Children, Teachers, and Ratepayers of the City.

In the organisation of the Province for better police protection, Durham and Northumberland Counties will get one license inspector and two constables, and the advantages of Orono carefully considered, is the reply received from the Attorney-General's Department, by Councillor A. J. Staples, who urged on the Department, in view of the acts of lawlessness at the present time in certain sections of the township, the appointment of an officer at Orono as a central point from which to direct operations.—Orono News.

GOOD ICE FOR THE HOCKEY GAME TO-NIGHT

The drop in temperature last night gave the ice-making squad a good opportunity to prepare a lively sheet of ice for tonight and the conditions are prefect for a fast game between the Belleville and Peterboro intermediate O.H.A. squad. Belleville have already trimmed Cobourg and Smith Falls this season and they are confident of running up their string to consecutive victories of three by putng the skids under he Petes. They have the advantage of having had a chance to swing their team into working shape but there will be a fast crew out working for Peterboro and the game should be a unusually spectacular game for the opening clash of the season. The game is called for 8.30 o'clock sharp and all indications point to a splendid crowd and a good night's fun. The first O.H.A. game will be played here on New Year's night with Lindsay as the attraction.

SPORT GOSSIP

Ruth was fined once before in baseball. In 1916, after the Red Sox had defeated the Brooklyn Robins, Ban Johnson ordered the Boston squad to disband. The players defied Johnson. As a result Ruth and several others were fined $100 each. Ty Cobb had to pay $50 for playing in the same game which took place in New Haven.

Can a man last longer by continually saving himself for certain tests, giving only a part of his efforts to the routine assignment?

Take the case of Ty Cobb. Cobb has hustled over most of the route, always a hard base runner, always taking chances. All recall over ten years go when the prophecy was made that he would burn himself out—that no man could travel at such speed year after year.

Yet after 17 years Cobb is still around the top of the fold, about as good as he ever was.

Walter Johnson was slated for the slag heap many years ago, because he insisted upon using terrific speed without easing up.

But Johnson has been around 14 or 15 years, and he was no part of an easy mark last summer.

There is little to be gained by pulling up, holding back, playing it safe, allotting only a small per cent.

Charles See, outfielder, has been released by the Cincinnati Nationals to the San Francisco club in the Pacific Coast League.

Rolling and flying falls will continue to be recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission.

Schedules for national, international and Canadian skating events have been announced by the International Skating Union.

GROH'S BATTING A TIP TO OTHERS.

Claims His Style of Facing the Pitcher Makes Him Step Into the Ball.

They say if you are a star, you are bound to be different. If you are not temperamental, as a great many stars are, then you must have a style that differs from the ordinary "critter."

Heinie Groh has every right to be classed as a star on that basis. However, Groh has great natural ability, plus a quick thinking brain, which really entitles him to such ranking.

No great, or even good hitter in the history of the game, takes a position in the batter's box that in any way shapes up with that of Groh.

When a batter steps into the box, it is often said that he faces the pitcher. That goes literally for Groh. He stands directly facing the pitcher, with bat on the shoulder or waving in front of him. He whirls suddenly when the pitcher delivers the ball, and steps into it, much the same as the ordinary batter.

Groh's stance is most peculiar. However, it is very effective, as Groh always bats around .300. He claims his style prevents weakness on curve balls, as it gives the batsman no chance to pull away from the plate. Rather it forces him to step directly into the ball.

Groh is far from being a youngster. He is 34 years of age. It hardly seems possible that he has over five years more of service in him. That makes the price paid all the more astounding.

Good Place-Hitter.

Groh is small in stature, being about five feet seven inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds.

He is regarded as one of the best place hitters in baseball. This makes him invaluable in the hit and run play, a style used so much by McGraw.

In Frankie Frisch and Heinie Groh, McGraw now has the two star third sackers in the National League. Some say he will shift Frisch to second. It is just as probable Groh will play that base.

ENGLAND IS SPORT MAD OVER SOCCER FOOTBALL.

Game Has Same Grip on British Isles That Baseball Has on U. S. and Is Operated on as Large a Scale.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Professional football has as big a hold on the Britons as baseball has on the Americans.

Football is actually one sport the Britons can get excited about. From the last week in August to the first week in May football is the sole topic of conversation with the sport-loving Britons.

In comparison to the major leagues in baseball, England has three united leagues with 86 teams. Scotland boasts a league of 22 teams. Ireland is also well represented.

The wheels within wheels in this football business over here are beyond ordinary American comprehension. There are the local leagues, resembling the minor leagues in American baseball, and the larger leagues representing the majors.

By a series of elimination games, the best in Britain finally play each other for the football association cup.

Then again, regardless of what individual teams they belong to, each year four "national" teams are formed, English, Irish, Scotch and Welsh.

Regular World Series.

They are made up according to the nationality of the players, and the members are the best of the various bloods.

These four teams meet for the championship of the United Kingdom. These games are the world series in football for the Britons. This year the Scotch won the championship.

The game the professionals play is called "soccer" football and differs from rugby in that the men are not allowed to use their hands. It is all a game of block and kick.

The "soccer" professionals are content to play for a salary that would bring a laugh from the big league ball players in America. Fifty dollars a week is about the average pay. In any game in which they win, the players receive $10 extra. If the game is a tie they get $5 extra.

The teams in football are owned by one man or by a set of stockholders. The players are under contract like the ball players. Fancy prices are often paid for star players. The record price for such a transfer is $30,000.

Big Crowds Attend.

Crowds of from 30,000 to 50,000 are not at all unusual. The record attendance was made in the palmy days before the war, when 127,307 people paid admission in March, 1912, at Hampden Park, to see an international match between Scotland and England.

The gate receipts for that record-breaking game was only $35,000, showing that the general average charged for tickets is much smaller than at a baseball game in the States.

Some idea of the hold football has on the Britons can be gleaned from the tax figures of 1919 and 1920. Over a million dollars was paid into the Treasury of the nation for entertainment tax last year.

BABE RUTH A VICTIM OF BAD ADVICE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—George Herman Ruth is not as popular with his play fellows as he used to be. Ruth, besides being rather unpopular with many of the players, is distinctly unpopular with the owners.

Ruth, the greatest drawing card in the history of baseball, was liked by ball players, owners liked him, of course—Ruth made a great deal of money for them.

General impression is that Ruth should have a great deal of sympathy because of the sentence imposed upon him by Judge Landis, but such is not the case. The sentence only crystalized feeling against the champion home-run hitter.

Magnates in the American League would naturally feel antagonistic because Ruth, by causing himself to be suspended until May 20 of the coming year will cause them to lose a great deal of money. It is estimated that the coffers of the American League will lose at least $100,000. That is the lowest estimate given by any of the American League club owners attending the New York verbal tournament.

The players dislike Ruth because of the attitude he takes, one that will not improve their standing with the community.

Trouble with Ruth is that he has placed himself far above the game. He has gone so far that he imagines baseball moves around him. He is the hub or axis of the baseball wheel or universe.

At the close of the world series Miller Huggins, who knew of the barnstorming plans, called the players together in the club house, told them about the consequences and asked them not to play. Before Huggins addressed the players Judge Landis had talked to them and asked them to abide by the rules of baseball as, if they were violated, he would have no alternative but to impose sentence.

After Huggins concluded his talk, Ruth arose and, addressing Huggins and the assembled players, is reported to have announced:

"It's none of my business what the rest here do, but as far as I am concerned I'm going to play exhibition games. Right here is one 'baby' that does play."

Judge Landis, hearing that Ruth insisted upon going through with his barnstorming plans, made a personal appeal to him, or tried to. Judge Landis planned to have Ruth hold off for a few days and attempt to have the club owners change the rule, making it possible for Ruth to play his exhibition series. Landis got in touch with Ruth over the telephone and Ruth grossly insulted the Judge, causing Landis to hang up the receiver and refuse to have further communication with Ruth. The player called again and as soon as his identity was disclosed found the connection severed at Judge Landis end of the wire.

The New York owners next tried to induce Ruth to abandon his plans. When all arguments failed Ruth was told that he would be paid $25,000 if he abandoned his plans and Ruth turned down this proposition.

Ruth went on tour and cancelled part of the trip.

His attitude during the tour, and after that, drew much unpopularity for him.

When Ruth was informed about the sentence he is said to have remarked that he was open to the highest semi-pro bidder and declared that next season would see him playing semi-professional baseball.

There is little doubt that the sentence will stand. There is also little doubt that Ruth will be cared for. The New York club will pay Ruth's salary during the time he is kept out of the game and the New York club also will pay the fine. Ruth will not lose, naturally, excepting the size of his contract and, speaking about Ruth's contract, there is another thing that does not cement any bonds of love between Ruth and club owners. Ruth, reported to be ready to ask for $85,000 a season, raised this figure to a cool $100,000. Ruth confidentially admitted that he did not expect to get quite that but he would insist on it and finally compromise for $60,000, but nothing less, and that the New York owners could go to the other club owners and make up the difference between the sum they were willing to pay him and the sum he would demand.

* * *

There is no question but that Ruth has taken too much poor advice. Baseball men are not inclined to blame Ruth as much as his advisors. Ruth, not as intelligent as some players, has been making the wrong move because of his acceptance of suggestions handed him by others.

LILLIAN CARTON,
England's champion lady dancer, with Khaym Hindoo Show of Mystery which open a three-day engagement at the Grand Dec. 29th, with special ladies' matinee on Friday.

AT THE GRAND.

"KHALM" FOR THREE DAYS.

That agitations caused through the writings of Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir Conan Doyle and others in regard to spiritualism and mysticism have aroused the interest of the majority of people is positive. "To be or not to be" is a predominate thought in the minds of all, and every person is at some stage of life more or less curious in regard to the hereafter.

"Do the dead live?" Ask Khaym the Mahoment White, who appears at the Grand Opera House for three days, starting Thursday, December 29th. Usual matinee Saturday with a special matinee Friday afternoon at 3.00 p.m. for ladies only.

Besides Khaym there are other high-class acts on the program. In his cast of oriental beauties which accompany him will be found Marion Andrew, one of the daintiest dancers of the stage. Fred Andrew and Violet May present an act which attracted attention all over the Keith circuit last season. Mr. Andrews has toured one hundred thousand miles in foreign countries. The above attraction has no imitations, it being the only novelty of its kind in vaudeville.

AT THE REGENT.

Shirley Mason, the little star of big photoplays, will end her engagement at the Regent Theatre tonight when "The Lamplighter," the William Fox production, ends its run. This attraction has enjoyed an exceptionally prosperous visit here, and the concensus of popular opinion appears to be that it is easily the best production in which the dainty star has appeared under the Fox management.

AT THE ROYAL.

A well pleased audience is the best proof that a show is good. Judging by remarks heard last night, made by those who have seen the splendid selection of pictures shown at the Royal, every one present was a little more than satisfied. All agreed that last night's show, repeated to-night for the last time, could not be excelled. Possibly what caught attention most was the magnificent seven-reel super-feature called "Flower of the North.' This wonderful triumph of the moving picture producer, contains views of the far northern Canadian mountains never screened before. It shows in a brief prologue scenes enacted in that romantic wilderness when the nobility of France first sent out their best and bravest to open up the new country for France. Then the scenes and action quickly jump to that same wild mountain region in our own times.

"THE INVISIBLE POWER."

A strong Sensational Dramatic Picture—Splendid Vaudeville.

The week-end show at the Capitol offers a splendid vaudeville and picture programme for the end of this week, commencing to-morrow at the matinee. The vaudeville act for this week-end is the McCoys, a clever Old Country team of singers and yodlers and story-tellers. A long line of splendid short-reel comedies, serials, etc., and a splendid feature production.

Irene Rich, who achieved fame as a member of Goldwyn all-star casts, plays the leading feminine role in "The Invisible Power," an absorbing Frank Lloyd Production, which comes to the Capitol Theatre for three days, commencing tomorrow.

Miss Rich joined the Goldwyn company last year, playing leading parts. Her marked success in support of Will Rogers and other stars has won her much enthusiastic praise from critics and public. An intimate sketch of her early ambitions that eventually placed her among the foremost leading women of the screen, was gleaned in a recent interview.

"As a mere girl," says Miss Rich, "I knew positively that success would come to me either on the stage or on the screen. But my schooling was confined to subjects other than dramatics. I had no training to fit me for such a calling. Still I always believed that somewhere, sometime the great opportunity would offer itself—and I should most certainly 'make good.'

'Like most girls, I was a chocolate-eating 'movie' fan, and I suppose I unconsciously absorbed a bit about acting from seeing pictures. But in the social set in which I moved the mere mention of a desire to go on the stage or into the movies always drew frowns from very proper mammas.

"Came a day when, the family fortune waning, I determined upon seeing myself a leading woman in pictures."

Miss Rich began three years ago as an extra girl with Mary Pickford, in "Stella Maris." She has played the leading feminine roles in the Will Rogers pictures, "Jes' Call Me Jim," "The Strange Border," and "Boys Will Be Boys."

Treating Rats Like Men and Women To Find What Foods Do To Us

Astonishing Experiments With Animals That Live Thirty Times Faster Than Humanity to Reveal the Real Secrets of the Mysterious Little Bodies That Keep Us All Alive

Somewhat picturesque but basically accurate diagram of the $30,000 Wistar Institute Rat Palace, showing the gymnasium; below it the nursery and the kitchen, where the inmates' meals are so scientifically prepared. Beside the gymnasium is the music hall and dance floor; below it the hospital and at the right the dining hall

A THIRTY-THOUSAND-DOLLAR palace for super-rats is under construction. It will house 12,000 rodents in the Wistar Institute at the University of Pennsylvania, the largest colony of its kind in the world and, from the viewpoint of the health of mankind, the most valuable.

The Wistar Institute is probably the most honored of American scientific laboratories both in its own country and abroad. Heretofore its specialty has been the collection and study of human brains. On its shelves the brains of the world's most famous men and women are filed like books in a library. Every one who thinks his or her brain worth anything to the race leaves it to the institute. Besides these worthwhile brains are others which the institute gets for itself—savages, criminals and what not.

The rat palace is designed to throw more light on what it is that feeds our brains; just what food, or rather what it is in food that the brain thrives best on, and, conversely, what it is that food lacks when the brain starves, or at least merely limps along. These brain feeding substances are called vitamines—but science does not yet really know what they are and is entirely ignorant as to how they operate. That they are immensely important to man we do know. About six different kinds are known, but it is believed that there exist others more important than those already tagged.

To find out what the vitamines are, how they work, what they actually do and how to best insert them into the human organism to increase both mental and physical strength the Wistar Institute is working upon its 12,000 rats.

"But why the rat will be asked?" The rat was chosen for the work, according to Dr. Milton J. Greenman, director of the institute, because its pathological and physical processes most nearly among all the animals approach those of man. It eats almost as wide a range of food as man and shows human preference for certain tit-bits. It has habits, in its refined state, that are strikingly like those of human beings, and its internal development is along almost exactly similar lines.

With all this, the rat lives thirty times faster than man does. That is to say, its life processes are completed in one-thirtieth the time required for a human being. For that reason experiments can be made with the rat in one year that would require thirty years in man. Hundreds of experiments have shown already that the rat has an affinity with man both in health and disease; it succumbs to the same poisons and its brain and muscles develop on the same foods.

But properly to grapple with the problem of the vitamines in their relation to humanity, science must have perfect rats. Within the Wistar Rat Palace the super-rat will be produced. To accomplish this the following features are being provided.

A gymnasium equipped with ladders for climbing, modified trapezes, slides

A closed merry-go-round with happy "Gentlemen Rats" exercising within similar to those used by children in playgrounds, treadmill cages, special apparatus for gnawing, running tracks and many other pieces of apparatus now being developed.

A hospital with an isolation ward for special diseases, a psychopathic section and other features containing improvements on the finest hospitals in the country for human beings.

An auditorium and dance floor—part of the gymnasium. Here the rats will be entertained by Kreisler, Mischa Elman, Jascha Heifetz, Maud Powell and others of the world's most famous violinists with talking machine reproductions, and here the rats will dance and reach their finest physical development to the most exquisite music known.

Indirect steam heating, with thermostatic control, and the most modern system of ventilation.

Every room an outside room, with sides made of glass to provide plenty of light, and awnings and shades to control this when necessary.

Sanitary kitchen, where every drop of food consumed by the rats will be prepared, from the standard foods to French pastry, charlotte russe, candies and confections that will be used in various experiments.

A "nursery," in which baby rats will be fed on the bottle in order to determine the relative values of various substitutes for mother's milk.

If some of this seems rather far fetched to the lay mind, consider the extraordinary importance of the vitamines. These are mysterious substances that appear in foods and are particularly rich in milk, cheese and other dairy products and in certain of the vegetable greens. Without vitamines life cannot continue to exist.

After many years of painstaking investigation science learned a few years ago that there were at least three of these substances. They were labeled "fat soluble" A and B and "water soluble" C, but so far they have not been isolated. Science knows nothing of their chemical content or action. It only knows from tens of thousands of tests that when any living thing is fed a diet minus vitamines energy disappears, and unless the vital element is supplied the subject dies.

A painting of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," the famous legend of the power of the pipes over rats, which science has now proved to be actually a fact

Already the Wistar Institute has succeeded in breeding the "Gentleman Rat." It has thousands of them in its colony. There is little resemblance between this animal and the swift, skulking, venomous looking rodent that one glimpses dodging into noisome holes and sewers. The "Gentleman Rat" and his "Lady Wife" are relatively cultured and dignified.

They are still far, however, from the super-rat. The institute has even succeeded in breeding male rats that develop to some degree the family instinct and forego the polygamy which is the natural state of the wild rat. Incredible as this may seem, it is vouched for by no less an authority than Dr. Greenman, who knows more about rats than any other man alive as a result of his experience as director of the institute.

"Experience has shown that it takes about three generations to develop the aristocratic or gentleman rat from the wild variety with which most of us are more or less familiar," says Dr. Greenman.

Some years ago experiments were made in the in-breeding of rats at the Wistar Institute. It was shown that no ill effects followed the mating of cousins and even of brothers and sisters. But the whole work of the institute to-day is being devoted to food research. The rats in this colony saved millions of American lives during the war, for hundreds of them were sacrificed to science in testing various food substitutes with which the government was experimenting.

"It is not generally known that the preparation of food substitutes in this country on an experimental scale was more far-reaching than anywhere else in the world," says Dr. Greenman. "All sorts of synthetic foods were prepared so that this nation might be in a position to keep its armies fed regardless of how long the war lasted. By experiments with our rats we found that in hundreds of cases these foods were poisons, slow but certain. They could not keep up the energy of natural foods. Rats that ate them weakened and died, unless the diet was changed, and often developed intestinal and other troubles.

"The equipment for exercise is being put in because we have discovered that a proper program of exercise increases the birth-giving capacity of the female rat by 30 per cent. Good breeding and kind treatment are invaluable aids in our work. It has been shown that fear has a poisonous effect on the rat, and sometimes it is fatal. The tame and unafraid rodent is healthier, better dispositioned and stronger.

"Heretofore lack of complete hospital equipment has resulted in the loss of much valuable information concerning diseases common to rats and human beings. We expect to avert that loss when the new building is completed. It will be fully equipped for the treatment of all kinds of diseases and there will be provisions for autopsies on rats that die natural deaths. When we find that a certain diet causes illness it is not enough merely to avoid that, but we must also determine the proper treatment and medicines and the proper diet to overcome that illness. This we will be able to do in our new hospital.

"The sanitary conditions throughout the new colony building will be ideal. Nothing has been overlooked to make the place thoroughly modern and up-to-date. It is being built like a hospital so that it can be cleansed thoroughly at frequent intervals. It will be flooded with sunshine and there will be plenty of blowers to provide fresh air at the temperature most beneficial to the rats."

Dr. Greenman is particularly interested in some of the experiments which have been made and are planned to determine the effect of music on rats. He knows now the kind of music that will take hungry rats away from their meals and hold them spellbound.

"Browning knew exactly what he was saying when he wrote 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin,'" says Dr. Greenman. "The rat likes sweet music and high notes, the violin being his favorite instrument. Kreisler, Ysaye, Heifetz, Elman and Zimbalist probably could repeat the fabled piper's feat any time they felt so inclined."

Its "Up to You"

You yourself can do more that will affect your Health than anyone. Where reason rules and care is taken, Nature keeps the individual in perfect Health.

You Pay the Penalty for Neglect

You cannot neglect your Health, ignore the laws of Nature, without paying the penalty sooner or later. But just give Nature her opportunity to serve you, and you will be Free from Disease, and the possessor of glorious Health.

THE CHIROPRACTOR EXISTS FOR JUST ONE PURPOSE

The strains, jars, and twists that you daily subject your Spine to cause the Spinal Segments to work out of place. You cannot adjust your Spine. Nature cannot transmit her vital forces over the Nerves when they are pinched between these misplaced Spinal Segments. Your Chiropractor adjusts these Vertebrae to normal alignment so that Nature can keep you well. And when this is done Nature does keep you well.

LIQUOR WAS STOLEN FROM CHEMONG PARK SUMMER COTTAGE

INSPECTOR STEWART REMOVES TO HIS HOME FOR SAFETY LARGE CONSIGNMENT HARD DRINK—OWNER IN NEW YORK

People walking down Murray Strett Christmas morning on their way to church, or going out to dinner, must have wondered at seeing a huge truck piled high with liquor cases, drawn up before the residence of License Inspector J. Stewart, and several men busily engaged transporting the cases from the vehicle into the house. The liquor is the property of Mr. Harry Wolff, of New York, who spends his summers at Chemong Park. At the request of the Board of License Commissioners, Inspector Stewart had the consignment of liquor removed to his home, where it will remain until the owner arrives from New York and arranges for a safe storage place. On Thursday night the summer home of Mr. Wolff at Chemong Park was broken into and two cases of liquor and two odd bottles stolen.

Mr. Robert Grant, caretaker of the cottage, discovered the loss and reported to County Constable A. R. Moore, who is working on the case. Friends of the New York man wired him of the loss, and it is understood he is now on his way to Canada to arrange for a safe storage place.

New Storage Place.

The County Constable was nonplussed as to what to do with the 42 cases, less two bottles, still in the house, and he appealed to the License Inspector. Mr. Stewart was given permission, after some confusion, because of members being on Christmas vacations, by the Board and on Monday he removed the cases to his home, and will keep them there until the New Yorker arrives. Meanwhile guards had been maintained at the Chemong Park cottage. "I don't want to start a precedent, however. My place is not a store house, I want that understood," the License Insnector said to-day.

The caretaker of the house did not have an exact inventory of the goods, it is said, so there may have been more liquor stolen than is believed at present. There was a very fine choice in the lot — whiskies, brandies, gin, etc., and the 42 cases are worth at least $2,000. Mr. Stewart considered to-day that a strong vault is necessary now in which to keep the goods secure, and the New Yorker will probably be advised to build one if liquors are desired at the summer cottage.

IN MEMORIAM.

EASSON.—In loving memory of Andrew C. Easson, who died 31st December, 1920.

Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in a better land,
We'll know the meaning of our tears,
And then some time we'll understand.

We'll know why cloud instead of sun
Were over many a cherished plan;
Why song had ceased when scarce begun,
'Tis there, up there, we'll understand.

God knows the way, He holds the key,
He guides us with unerring hand;
Some time with tearless eyes we'll see,
Yes, there, up there, we'll understand.

Gone, but not forgotten.
